In the George Street Methodist Church last night Rev. A. H. Ranton delivered the last of his addresses—thus concluding five weeks' evangelistic services. This gentleman, during his stay amongst us has attracted to himself no little public attention, and while he enlisted the sympathy of great numbers of our citizens, his methods and his style of speech aroused considerable criticism. How far this criticism was merited is for the public who paid most attention to his addresses to decide. Very few, except extremists, will be found to deny that the evangelist's object was a good one, or that he was sincere as well as earnest in his desire to do good. The manner in which he attacked what he considered social evils was certainly vigorous and provoked no little adverse comment. In this connection it is for Mr. Ranton to justify the style of language he employed. If he felt that creating antagonism such as his references to the "modern dance" evidently did create, assisted him in carrying out his object of doing good to the country, then he was justified in employing the strong terms he used. If, however, the use of such language antagonised any who, under other circumstances and under milder methods, might have been brought under his influence and have been benefitted, it was to that extent, at least, injudicious and unwise. In spite of these influences, however, it is to be admitted that Mr. Ranton's work in town has had large results. In such matters it is impossible to reduce results to an exact statistical basis, but from all that can be learned, it is evident that under Mr. Ranton's ministrations, large numbers turned from sinful courses to a better way of life, and it is only fair that such results, in their infinite superiority of importance, should be permitted to far more than balance the account in respect of somewhat intemperate censure, uttered under the impulse of a perfervid zeal. We are not, it is true, permitted to do evil that good may come, but if, in the effort to do good, the limitations of human wisdom and prudence, have incidentally certain minor injurious effects, such conditions should be reviewed under the influence of an ample charity that will see only good motives and minimize human frailties and errors of judgment.

FIRE AT HALIBURTON ON SUNDAY LAST.

The Queen's Hotel Property Burned to the Ground in Forty Minutes—Very Little of the Contents Saved.

The Queen's hotel at Haliburton, of which Mr. W. H. Johnston has been proprietor since last fall, caught fire Sunday evening in the kitchen portion, and forty minutes later the entire building was reduced to a heap of smoking ruins.

Conductor Fred Russell and Expressman Harry Gain of the Haliburton train, had rooms in the hotel, and were compelled to make a hurried exit and complete their toilet in the open air. Gain slept in a rear room containing two beds and overlooking the kitchen. About 12 o'clock he was awakened by a choking sensation, and discovered that the window frame and the spare bed on which his clothing had been deposited, were on fire. Grasping his garments he dashed downstairs to give the alarm, but found that Mr. Johnston and the family had already been aroused, and that the neighbors were gathering, so he returned to his room and succeeded in saving some clothing and other effects belonging to Express Messenger Mallish. Just then Conductor Russell rushed in, thinking Gain had not yet been aroused, and finding him moving about in an aimless fashion, gathered him under one arm, and the mattress and clothing from the bed in the other, and made his way downstairs into the street, where their somewhat scanty attire created considerable amusement among the large crowd that had gathered.

The building being frame, and one of the oldest in the village, it burned with wonderful rapidity, and the villagers were only able to save the contents of the bar-room and some of the furniture on the ground floor. Luckily the wind was blowing from the north-west, and no other buildings caught fire, though the heat was so intense that the paint on the house opposite, occupied by Driver Ralph Clarke and family, was badly blistered, but was kept from igniting by dashing water against it at intervals.

Beyond doubt the fire had its origin in the kitchen portion, but Mr. Johnston is at a loss to account for it. Supper was served at an early hour, and there was supposed to be no fire in the stove after seven o'clock. The building was owned by Mr. D. Kellett, formerly proprietor for many years, and is insured. Mr. Johnston is supposed to have had an insurance on his furniture, but we have been unable to learn the amount. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Johnston and family in their loss just when they had succeeded in making the last of many improvements in the building for the comfort of the travelling public.

Mrs. S. Seaforth, suffered for years with what is called old people's rash. She was treated by many physicians without any result. Mr. Fear, the local druggist, recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment, which relieved the irritation at once and speedily effected a permanent cure of the skin eruption. Mrs. James also says Dr. Chase's Ointment cured her of itching piles which she has been troubled with for years.

OVERLAND JOURNEY ACROSS AUSTRALIA.

INTERESTING NARRATIVE BY MR. C. LONGLEY TAYLOR

In St. John's School Room, in Aid of South Burleigh Mission Funds—Interesting and Original—Other Items of Entertainment.

In St. John's church school house last evening Mr. Longley Taylor gave a lecture descriptive of his personal experience in a thirteen-month journey across the continent of Australia. Mr. R. M. Dennistoun occupied the chair.

Mr. Taylor is assisting Rev. Mr. Hartley in the South Burleigh mission, and the proceeds of the lecture will be devoted to augmentation of a fund for the purpose of erecting a church at Buckhorn.

The young missionary possesses great personal magnetism and his lecture was delivered in a style quite his own and most entertaining. He is the possessor of great histronic talent, and the relation of his numerous adventures in his strange trip proved most entertaining to the audience.

The journey was taken in company with Guy Boothby, the author of "Strange Company," "Dr. Nikola," etc., etc., and the lecturer quickly carried his audience with him to of Thursday Island, north of Australia, where he and his companion imagined their Eldorado lay awaiting them. Failing to find any employment, whatever, they determined to return to the southern coast, overland. Thursday Island, besides being noted for the famous pearl fisheries, is a stronghold of considerable note, commanding as it does the two channels which lead to the north coast of Queensland. From this point the travellers crossed over to Cooktown, named after the famous Captain Cook, and then struck south through the gold mining region. The Palmer fields were passed on the way and the information gathered that from them over twenty-four million dollars worth of gold had been taken. Apart from its auriferous value the soil is highly fertile in this locality. From here the journey was continued along the coast to Port Douglas, and from there to Cairns, on Trinity Bay. Townsville was next reached, with its muggy oppressive heat, resembling Java. The residents say that everything else is so pleasant about the place that one forgets the heat. From this point the tourists struck inland through a country which was picturesque, but truly Australian. The houses are all built alike of matched lumber, with galvanized roofs, the contrast being most marked between them and the quaint tiled roofs in the East.

Normantown was the next place of importance reached. Normantown is Normantown, said the speaker. It is like itself and nothing else. In some respects but in others it is diabolical and the preponderance is in favour of the latter. White ants have destroyed everything in the place from the town hall to the consciences of the residents. Great difficulty was experienced in purchasing horses for the trip, not because of their scarcity, but through the number which were offered. Two were finally picked and both being blind of one eye they were named respectively Cyclops and Polyphemus. They carried the travellers seventeen hundred miles across country in nine months.

The travellers determined to go slowly at first, in order to get their horses accustomed by degrees to longer marches. The first day twelve miles were covered but when they proudly took out their chart to check off the distance on it, they were dismayed to see that this point was hardly distinguishable from the blur which marked Normantown, whilst over a yard of map was pointed out over which they had yet to travel. It was only then that the enormity of their undertaking dawned upon them.

As they journeyed on several sheep stations were passed en route. These comprise tracts of land sometimes hundreds of square miles in extent, upon which were pastured from a hundred to

THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND SHEEP.

The hotels along the trail were oddly constructed. It was with difficulty that the bath-room could be located, as every possible turning only eventually led to the bar. The walls inside do not reach the roof and ceiling there is none. So that every word spoken can be distinctly heard in all parts of the house.

At this juncture a most interesting reminiscence was related concerning the fate of a snorer, who met with scant ceremony at the hands of an irate Englishman in the next room, who refused to be deprived of his sleep.

The houses on the ranches are generally long, low buildings, with a deep, broad verandah surrounding it. Off it are the garden and tennis courts. To the left are the barns and machinery sheds, with the stock yards to the right, whilst beyond that on all sides stretched the interminable plain. Breakfast was generally served at six o'clock, after which the men took their horses and went off to the stock, remaining away until about 4 30 in the afternoon, when they came home, enjoyed a game of tennis, had dinner and lounged around with their pipes until ten o'clock, when they retired.

The lecturer gave a most graphic and harrowing description of the travels of himself and his companion when they were crossing during a time of drought. The farther they went south on the trail the worse the country got, so they purchased fresh horses and resolved to strike towards the east across country and leaving the trail trust to their compasses to guide them. Unfortunately, soon after starting their compass was lost, and they had no means of locating the watering places on the chart. Their position became as desperate as it could possibly be, as the supply of water gave out. One of the horses took sick and died. It was an agony to walk on, yet they dare not stop. When their sufferings were at the greatest the river was suddenly reached, and they were saved. They pitched their tents and camped for several weeks, living on iguanas, a species of lizard, as their provisions had entirely given out.

Shortly afterwards arrangements were made, when the first settlement was reached, to cover the remaining 1800 miles by boat. Camping along the river bank full opportunity was given to observe the destruction wrought through the rabbit plague. Every remedy had been tried by the Government without avail, and a standing offer of $25,000 was offered to the inventor who could devise a means for their extermination. The havoc wrought is beyond belief. Every blade of grass is gone, and the trees and shrubs are barked and ruined. The rabbits are now actually climbing into the trees to eat the foliage, and the rabbit which cannot climb dies. In all $7,221,710 have been spent trying to get rid of the pest. Queensland erected a wire netting all along its border, but the rabbits climbed it, and where the rabbit settles the sheep cannot live.

During the evening Mrs. R. M. Dennistoun and Mrs. G. A. Smith enlivened the programme with several instrumental duets, and Master Holden Blackwell gave a couple of recitations which were greatly appreciated.

FOOTBALL.

The Athletic News of England says:—"A total of 60,000 odd in attendance at the two semi-finals is a tremendous tribute to the popularity of the F. A. Cup. In the opinion of the public it is still regarded as the prize of the year, and has a great fascination in the eyes of every enthusiast. That two English football matches in one and the same afternoon should yield upwards of £2,100 is truly magnificent. And that Stoke should out out Sheffield is really remarkable, and proves the wisdom of the F. A. Council in fixing upon the Potteries for one of the classic events of the season. We must admit that we were surprised, as we expected the bigger crowd at Bramall-lane—the scene of so many historic events.

FORTUNE IN FUTURES.....

Alexander T. Stewart began his business career without capital and in 30 years accumulated $40,000,000. His successors began with his $40,000,000 and in 20 years failed. Stewart dealt in futures; he filled his stores and contracted ahead for manufactures before big advances and he emptied his stores and sold for future account at other times before big declines. He discounted the future. His successors rested on a BIG NAME and never dealt in future prospects.

A year ago I advertised to buy cotton below seven cents, it afterwards advanced two cents or $1,000 on 100 bales. Last summer I advertised to buy wheat around 60 cts., it has since sold as 86 or $6,000 on 10,000 bushels. Now advise the purchase of Corn around 25 cts. for July. It will show a Big Profit by the middle of June. Buy Mess Pork around $8.25; it will sell at $10 before it does at $9. UNTOLD MISERY FROM

RHEUMATISM

G. H. King, Water Valley, Miss., cured by

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For five years, I suffered untold misery from muscular rheumatism. I tried every known remedy, consulted the best physicians, visited Hot Springs, Ark., three times, spending $1000 there, besides doctors' bills; but could obtain only temporary relief. My flesh was wasted away so that I weighed only ninety-three pounds; my left arm and leg were drawn out of shape, the muscles being twisted up in knots. I was unable to dress myself, except with assistance, and could only hobble about by using a cane. I had no appetite, and was assured, by the doctors, that I could not live. The pains, at times, were so awful, that I could procure relief only by means of hypodermic injections of morphine. I had my limbs bandaged in clay, in sulphur, in poultices; but these give only temporary relief. After trying everything, and suffering the most awful tortures, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Inside of two months, I was able to walk without a cane. In three months, my limbs began to strengthen, and in the course of a year, I was cured. My weight has increased to 165 pounds, and I am now able to do my full day's work as a railroad blacksmith."

THE OPAL SKULL.

Of all places to oppress one with the fruitlessness of life there is none like unto the southern portion of the Colorado river. There seems always to be visible from its banks, if banks they can be called, some faint blue-gray mountain peak off in the distance, beyond the plain with its rare groups of cottonwoods and its occasional lonely adobe.

There was no color anywhere. The yellow of the sky was only a pale glimmer over the whitening blue; the green of the trees was dulled by the dust and the evening twilight. There was but one house in sight, an adobe 400 yards or less from the river.

In among the willows by the river was a small, canvas-covered wagon. Two thin broncbos were hobbled near by, and a man was gathering sticks for a fire. He wondered if it would be worth his while to make the acquaintance of the "greasers" who undoubtedly inhabited it. They might offer him hospitality for the night; but he had learned by experience that Mexican hospitality usually implies dirt, and he disliked dirt. It was a question in his mind whether a blanket under the wagon would not be preferable. And while he debated the flat board door of the adobe opened, and a woman came out. She was slender, therefore she was young—so reasoned the man, who knew Mexicans. More than that he could not see. After a time she went back into the house, and he fell to gathering sticks.

When the moon rose, and he, having finished his supper, was sitting beside the dying camp fire, peacefully smoking, the low willows parted and the girl of the adobe stood before him.

"Ah, I beg your pardon, senor; I knew not zat you were hier," she cried, starting back.

"It gives me much pleasure to see you. Will you not sit here with me?" He spread a blanket on the ground near the bright coals, and motioned to her, with a deep bow, to be seated. She took her place, and he, stretching himself at her feet, leaning upon one elbow, offered her a cigarette.

Her name, it transpired very soon, was Anita—Anita Manare; his, he told her, was Richard Lovell. They fell a-talking, and he did what was expected of him—made desperate love instantly; while she did what he had expected her to do, respond with only enough reserve to keep up the illusion of flirtation. Here, in the half tropic southwest, with an unwise child of 16, of an amorous race, the rather lax code of honor of Richard Lovell fell from him. She told him about her life.

"I was born hier," she said, "een zat house. But w'en I twelf years am. I to San Diego go to school, an' sere I Englishlearn. I speak note much Englishnow, for zat I have only my musser an' my brusser, who sey speake but Spanish; an' Carlos he can Englishspeake, but he like eet nota."

"Who is Carlos, sweetheart?"

"He ees my sweetheart, w'at I to marry him am."

"Where is he?" The young man drew a little away and sat erect.

"He ees at ze mines in Concepcion. He haf one mine for him, an' he weel be some time reech. He come to see me ze Sunday. Do you note Spanish speake—talk, sare?"

"No. Just a few words. And where is your brother?"

"He ees sis night far away. He weel to-morrow weeth Carlos come back."

Lovell understood. He resumed gradually his posture of adoration. When the cigarettes were finished he held her hands, and in time he put his arm about her and kissed her, and forgot all the maxims of wisdom that had ever been taught to him.

"What is that ring?" he asked, turning and toying with the only one she wore.

"Eet ees Carlos. He geef eet me. Weel you see?" She drew it off. "Eef you weel one match light."

He struck a wax one and held it to the ring. It was an opal set in silver, and carved in the shape of a skull. Lovell knew enough of stones to understand the difficulty of cutting an opal. He knew the skill and patience it must require to shape it like this one. There was probably not another like it in the world; certainly he had never seen it, if there were. In the flickering light it gleamed and sparkled blue, and red, and yellow fires, and the jaws seemed to contort themselves into a grin.

"How wonderful," he ejaculated.

"Yes," answered Anita.

He was seized with a wild desire to obtain it, and he played boldly for it. "Do you love me, Anita, sweetheart, beautiful?" he whispered, taking her face into his hands and looking into her eyes.

She uttered a faint but sincere "Yes."

He kissed her again, not once, but many times. "If you love me, Anita, you should give me the ring to remember you by—a keepsake, as we call it."

She slipped it into his hand

"Ah! no. Geef eet to me," she cried, of a sudden.

"Why?"

"Carlos, he tell me zat eet ees very—w'at you say?—note nice lucky."

"Then why did he give it to you?"

"He say eet ees for a man, note for a woman, zat eet ees like zat."

"I expect Carlos wanted to keep you from giving it away."

"No. He say zat one man w'at keep eet for fife years, he die sure."

"I am not afraid. I would be glad to die to have your ring for even a year."

"No. Geef eet back to me."

"Then you do not love me?" he said dejectedly. "You are like all women, you are glad to break a man's heart."

"No, no. I lofe you. You can keep eet. I weel tell Carlos I loose eet."

At the moment her mother called to her from the adobe. She threw her plump arms about the American's neck and said a clinging good-by, as if her heart were sadly wrung. And for the time being she was in desparate earnest.

At daybreak he saw two horseman, both Mexicans, ride up to the house. He guessed that they were the men Manara and Carlos; and he hitched up the team quickly and went, in a fashion that suggested flight, taking the ring with him.

Now it happened—as such things will happen in the new west—that Carlos Valera grew very rich within a few months and went to live in San Diego with his wife, and that they were much courted and sought after, for Valera was generous and well-mannered and not ill-looking, and Senora Valera was bewitching, a type, more than locally famous for her beauty, and possessed of a charm that is peculiar to women of her race who have learned the usages of the world. They kept open house, in the grand way of the wealthy Spanish-Americans of not so long ago. Never a day passed that not more than one total stranger was entertained. Thus it came about that, upon a spring evening some years after her marriage, Senora Valera greeted with lovely ease and grace a guest whom her husband brought home with him, a Mr. Richard Lovell of Los Angeles. But as she greeted him she glanced down at his hands and saw that he wore the opal skull. She turned to her husband and said in English that was perfect now, though made dainty by a slight lisp: "Carlos, dear, will you see if I left my opal and diamond pin on my dressing stand? I think I took it out to wear, and forgot it. I don't want it to get lost like that other opal you gave me before we were married. I'm afraid they are really unlucky stones; don't you think so, Mr. Lovell? Would you mind going for it, Carlos?"

"Mr. Lovell, take off that ring while you are here," she said calmly.

"I have never taken it off. And I'm sorry that I can't do so now."

"If Mr. Valera sees it he will be apt to kill you as not. He is very jealous."

"I fancy he has good reason."

"Kindly keep your opinions where such unpleasant ones properly belong—in your own consciousness. You will be wise to do as I say, and to be quick. Do you know that the five years is up to-night?"

"I doubt that sort of superstition. As I told you before, I'm not afraid. Perhaps you are, though? It is natural you should be. I will tell you what I will do. I'll take the ring and put it in my pocket"—he slipped it off and held it between his thumb and finger—"if you will kiss me again as you did on that night."

"I will not. You would have forgotten that silliness of mine by now, if you had been fortunate enough to be a gentleman."

"Never!—not all those caresses and protestations. Come, kiss me again, and I'll hide the ring."

"No. Mr. Valera will finish hunting for a pin that isn't there in a moment more, and if he comes back it will go ill with you—it certainly will if he sees the ring."

"Then kiss me."

"I will not. Be quick. I hear him coming. Quick"

"Kiss me. You'd better for your own sake."

"No."

"Then don't."

"Oh! hide that ring—do, for me."

"Kiss me."

"Well, kiss me, then."

He put his hands on her shoulders and bent his head. He did not see Valera step into the French window, but he knew that the woman pulled away from him with a loud "How dare you!" and a scream: "Carlos, Carlos, help me!"

And then he felt something sharp driven deep between the shoulders, and as he fell backward Senora Valera grasped at the ring and caught it from his hand. She put her own hand to her throat in the accepted fashion of the conventional faint, and as she did so, dropped the jewel into the bosom of her gown. Then she lost consciousness.

The story she told her husband was one of unprovoked impertinence on the part of an utter stranger, a man she had never seen before, and the story he told the world was much the same, but slightly embellished. It was not plausible, yet it passed. It excused the murder without any great difficulty, and it was something of a feather in the cap of the beautiful Mexican—for this was in the early days.

Senora Valera ground the opal skull to bits with a heavy stone, and kept the chips in a locket, until one day she found an excuse to drive to the cemetery and scatter them upon Lovell's grave.—Gwendolen Overton, in San Francisco Argonaut.

The old man who looks out at the world with clear and healthy eyes cannot help feeling great gratification at the thought that his children have inherited from him no weakness or tendency to disease. The healthy old man is the man who has throughout life kept his digestion good and his blood pure. No one in a thousand does it. Germs go through the healthy body without effect. Let them once find lodgment or let them find a weak spot, they will develop by the million and the blood will be full of them. Instead of giving strength to the tissues, it will force upon them in nutritious matter and the man will lose flesh and the more susceptible he is to disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the only medicine that absolutely and infallibly cures all blood diseases: and all disease are blood diseases. It isn't a medicine for some one particular so-called disease. It is a medicine for the whole body. It forces out all the germs of disease, and replaces impurities with rich, red blood.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS TRADE MARK

It's Like a Cuckoo.

It Has But One Song.

It's the same old song, sung in the same old way. Of course there are variations and different names for it, but they mean the same and are the same. A Bad Back is a Back that's Bad, whether it's Lame. Weak or Aching. A Stitch in the Back, a twitch in the Back, or a Pain in the Back is just the same as an Aching Back, a Weak Back or a Lame Back, it's the Song of the Kidneys, a Song without Words but Meaning. Every note is one of Warning, every Echo one of trouble. Kidneys filter the Blood. Filters become clogged, so do the Kidneys. Keep the Filters working. That's what Doan's Pills are for, and they know how to do it, they're made for it. Backache is a Note of Warning—a Kidney Warning—if you heed it not look out for trouble. Urinary derangement, Diabetes, Bright's disease follow swiftly in the footsteps of Kidney Failure. All Kidney Ills are an easy prey for Doan's Kidney Pills. Plenty of Home proof that this is so. Remember the name Doan's and take no other. There are many Kidney remedies, but only one Cure Other Kidney Pills, but only one Doan's. Be sure you get the little conqueror of Kidney disease. All druggists. Fifty cents per box.

J. F. JUNKIN, Gen. Man.

No matter how much of a business woman a woman may be, when the little love god makes up his mind to shoot, there is no protection against his arrow. Yet many a young woman whose affections are already engaged, hesitates to assume the obligations of wifehood and motherhood, because she feels unfitted for them by some physical weakness or disease.

The special ailments to which the feminine organism is liable, not only unfit a woman for happy wifehood and motherhood but incapacitate her for any sphere of action. No woman can discharge the daily duties of any position with comfort or satisfaction who is constantly weighed down by headaches, backaches and dragging, weakening drains.

Troubles of this nature are not by any means a necessity of womanhood. They are positively and completely cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It imparts genuine health and strength to the womanly organs. It was devised for this one purpose by an eminent specialist in this particular field of practice.

"For several years I suffered with prolapsus of the uterus," writes Miss A. Lee Schuster, of Bostic, Rutherford, Jefferson Co., Miss. "Our family physician treated me for kidney trouble, and everything else but the right thing. I grew worse and worse. My body was emaciated, hands and feet clammy and cold, stomach weak, with great palpitation of the heart. I dreaded for night to come for I would suffer with nausea all night and so I continued until some kind unknown friend sent me your book with a marked page. I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription,' contrary to my family's wishes, and I began to improve right away. I have taken three bottles and now I am very nearly well and am very happy, and thank God to you."

A WHEEL STORY.

"No, this is not the story of her first attempt to ride, but is my story of an attempt to teach her to ride.

"She was a sweet sister, was this maiden, a sweet sister of John Jones', when she came to me one evening just as old Sol was hiding his fire-red visage back of the trees in the far west, and asked me in an entrancing, apologetic way if I wouldn't assist her in her bicycle practice, 'as Brother John has a pressing engagement, and can't be with me, and, anyway, he says you know more about bicycling than he does.'

"Say, just then I could have hugged John Jones, and his sister, too, for that matter, but John was not there, and as for his sister—well I did not dare.

"Miss Jones had been the possessor of a bicycle about three days, and as we wended our way side by side to her home to get the steed of steel she informed me that she was doing 'just lovely.' And she also ventured the remark that she actually believed she could ride alone, only she got so terribly frightened.

"When we arrived at Miss Jones' home she excused herself for a few minutes, saying she wished to don an appropriate costume, and when she emerged from the house a little later, clad in a neat-fitting garb of the bloomer type and leading a diamond-frame machine, why, it simply took my breath away. Oh, but she looked chipper, chic and debonair, and my heart was at once smitten with her, though I always had a peculiarly sympathetic feeling for her. She certainly was the most beautiful and sweet morsel of femininity it had been my pleasure to gaze upon. There was no doubt about this, this lesson would be extremely interesting. There would be no skirts to get entangled in the wheels and chain and to bother her in her awkward manipulations of the same, and the time spent in teaching her to properly manage the steed would surely be just so long a time of unalloyed pleasure.

"Miss Jones and I walked to a street seldom traveled after sundown and the walk over the intervening thoroughfares was an exceedingly short one. We arrived at our destination. The first thing was to show her how to mount and this was a stunner. I had assisted many young ladies in their efforts to master the bicycle, but all of them rode drop frame machines and they all wore skirts. This case was far different. However, I got on and off the wheel, using the step, 'man-fashion,' and explained to her in detail every succeeding movement. Then Miss Jones tried it. First I firmly grasped the handle bar with one hand, holding the frame in front of the saddle with the other. Miss Jones reached over my arm, took hold of the grips, put her right foot on the step, made a lunge for the saddle—and kerflop, we both landed on the hard road. I was underneath, the wheel made up the second layer of the pile, while Miss Jones sat, not too gently, on top of the whole. I thought one of the handle bars had punctured my side and that I was swallowing a heterogeneous mass of bicycle spokes, good solid clay and rubber tires. Miss Jones did not get off the heap at all, but sat there half sobbing, half laughing, and said she hoped I was not injured, that she was so sorry, etc. With an almost herculanean effort, I rolled from my position under the wheel and its fair but heavy burden, and after pulling myself together, gave Miss Jones my hand and helped her to her feet. I inquired if she were hurt, but she rejoicingly informed me that she came out unscathed and was ready for another trial.

"I was not much injured—no—but whatever thoughts I had had of spending an enjoyable evening were rudely dispelled from my mind. No. I was not injured, but I could almost swear that one of the pedals of that machine had cut out a few square inches of my shin bone and I imagined I could feel it dangling about my ankle. I was also aware of the fact that there were several non-repairable punctures in my trousers and that my anatomy was bruised and sore in more places than I could enumerate in a three-page article.

"To tell the truth, I was not at all anxious to continue the demoralising lesson, as I was sure that this experience would be the death of me, but I wouldn't for an instant think of telling my fair companion that I had to give up.

"No! she should be the first to say it was time to postpone the practice until another day. I was in hopes the wheel was in such condition, after the hard fall, that it would be impossible to use it, but outside of a few scratches it came out of the tumble as did its owner—not in the least damaged.

"Well, we tried the mounting business over again, and this time I was prepared for the shock and she did land on the saddle most beautifully. After I had balanced the seemingly uncontrollable wheel and told her to get ready for the start off, she said to me that she could ride fairly well now that she was on and if I would just take hold under the back of the saddle and follow her in that way she thought she could pedal forward very well. I did as she told me and after giving the wheel a slight push moved off. Yes, she went it alone all right. All I had to do was to follow her. At first she went slowly, at what you would call a dog-trot, then she increased her speed. And still all I had to do was to follow her!

"As we were booming merrily onward, she on the bicycle and I on foot, she asked me if I didn't think this most exhilarating sport. Of course, I said it was. Then she said she enjoyed it so much that she would continue on this same course until she became tired, when she would dismount, and after a rest we would return homeward.

"Well, I trotted and trotted and trotted after that wheel, and I thought she never would stop. She went and went and went, and I believe if I had not hinted to her that I sometimes became fatigued she would have been going yet. But she did finally stop, and in sheer exhaustion I fell to the roadside, and when I had time to recover my breath and look about us I found we were away out in the country, at least three miles from home. She sat down at the roadside, a little way from me. Then she talked.

"She dilated upon the beauties of the summer's evening, the multi-colored foliage of the trees, the iridescent clouds which looked like rare jewels hung in the western skies, as the rays of the now obscured sun cast indescribable glittering tints over them. But poor me, my body and mind were racked with pain, and I did not appreciate our surroundings. After the fall, then the unusual exercise, every muscle and nerve in my body seemed to tingle with electric shocks. I was just about done up and when I would think of the return journey my heart would nearly bound from its natural and best location. Every breath I took seemed to be drawing huge chunks of solid air into my lungs, instead of the pure, country atmosphere which I was actually taking into my system. I was tired, sore and disgusted with everything, even with the maiden at my side, whom I now thought one of the ugliest, most uninteresting persons it had been my misfortune to meet. I was thinking, thinking deeply, thinking some things I would not dare think aloud, when I was suddenly brought to my senses by my fair companion saying: 'Well, I'm ready.' So was I—I had to be, and I at once arose and grabbed up that wheel. Of course, before I could start her homeward it was first necessary to get her on to the bicycle, and I trembled as I thought of the task before me. This time I braced myself against a fence and held onto that wheel like grim-visaged death, and when Miss Jones boarded it in really artistic style, I was greatly pleased. I started her off gently and then too hold of the saddle again, prepared to trot home back of the young lady like a dog following its master. I was congratulating myself upon the little trouble exeprienced in getting her started, when the front wheel of the bicycle began to wabble and chug! went the off handle bar into a fence. Luckily, I was on the opposite side of the wheel and pulling terrifically at the nigh handle bar I got it and its burden again perpendicular. This time I asked her if she were injured, and showing me an aw-ful-ly bruised hand, she bravely replied, "a little, but it's immaterial.' Why, the skin was scraped off the whole side of her hand, but she bore it like a heroine. And right here I wish to say that I began to think just a wee little bit more of Miss Jones than I had while we were sitting at the roadside a way back.

"Once again she started homeward and by the way she pumped and pushed those pedals I know she was mad about that accident, and as she gained speed, I also began to realise my powers of endurance would give out ere long, unless she reduced her gait. At last I had to give up, but I said nothing to her. I let her guide on homeward, as I thought she would soon notice my absence and then would dismount or fall off, I cared not which. But she went on and I gradually lost sight of her in the darkness that was growing upon the face of the earth. I was glad that she had gone and I leisurely climbed upon a rail fence at the roadside and sat there meditating. I was mad clear through and the more I meditated the angrier I got. But at last it dawned upon me that it was not the proper thing for me to be sitting upon a wayside fence and leave a young lady to take her own way home after nightfall. Horror of horrors! suppose she had fallen from her bicycle and at this very instant was lying in the road, possibly with a broken leg or injured in some other way, so as to be unable to move. Suppose a team of spirited horses were approaching and the driver could not see that prostrate form and ran over it. Ugh! the very thought made my blood run cold. I jumped from the fence and started in the direction in which Miss Jones had gone. I walked along slowly, but as more horrible possibilities came to my mind I went faster until at last I was running as fast as I could, but even then I thought I was going at a snail's pace. Half a dozen times I imagined I saw Miss Jones on the ground ahead of me, but always found it to be but a hallucination of my wild and disordered brain. I did finally reach town and because I had not found Miss Jones lying on the road in a pool of blood I was sure that she had been spirited away or kidnapped.

"I rushed to the house of her parents. Her brother John was sitting on the porch smoking a horribly rank stogy and when I excitedly asked him where his sister was he looked at me as though he considered me a lunatic. I implored him to tell me, for the love he bore his sister.

"He looked at me again, then slowly turned his eyes toward the side of the house. My eyes followed his and there Miss Jones stood, cool and collected with a heavenly smile on her face, and how beautiful she looked. But I fell to the ground in a dead faint and when next I realized anything I was in my own room at home, with my dear mother at my bedside. I looked at her questioningly, and then said: 'Mother, how many weeks have I been ill?' She looked frightened, then answered: 'Why, my dear son, you've been here but a few hours. John Jones and his father brought you here. Tell me what the trouble is.' After getting over my astonishment I told her about my awful experience of the evening. She laughed at me and comforted me, but say, I tell you I got even with that John Jones for palming his sister off on me that night. You want to know how I did it? Well, I just took her from him, from his mother, from his father—I married her, that's what I did."—Budget.

Scrofula is a word you don't quite understand, but if you talk with your doctor, he will tell you that it is generally believed to be due to the same cause which gives rise to Consumption. It appears mostly in those who are fat-starved and thin, usually in early life. A course of treatment of Scott's Emulsion with the Hypophosites wherever Scrofula manifests itself, will prevent the development of the disease. Let us send you a book. Free.

Odd Salads.

Not everyone knows that chrysanthemums may be converted into a very dainty dish. Chopped very fine and served with pure, fresh cream, the gorgeous Japanese blossom is said to make a most delicious salad. It tastes a little like cauliflower, but is more delicate. The people in some of the provinces of France make an extremely palatable salad of the white and pink clover blossoms, and everyone knows that the nasturtium blooms taste very much like watercresses. The nabobs of India esteem the blooms of the cassia tree as an especially dainty food.—New York Tribune.

Look the Door

Before the horse is stolen. Purify, enrich and vitalize your blood and build up your physical system before disease attacks you and serious sickness comes. Hood's Sarsaparilla will make you strong and vigorous and expel from your blood all impurities and germs of disease. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now.

Hood's Pills are the favorite family Cathartic. Easy to take, gentle, mild. 25c.

The Cow's Raw Material.

In order to run this cow machine to advantage, we must have plenty of raw material, such as grass, hay, roots and grain. In the summer time plenty of good grass with water and a little salt are sufficient. With these the machine will turn out milk to the satisfaction of the owner, and at the same time keep up repairs and motive power. With poor pasture the result will be different. The motive power will be weak, the machine get out of repair, the produce will be small and if made into butter not marketable.

Proportionate Pasturing.

As a general rule, dairymen keep too many cows in proportion to their pasture. This is a great mistake, one that tells largely on the profits of the dairy, and may leave it without profit at all. It is often said, with truth, that a cow is a machine to convert grass, hay and grain into milk. Other machinery is necessary to convert milk into butter and cheese.

Spring is full of terrors to all whose constitution is not able to resist the sudden changes of temperature and other insalubrities of the season. To put the system in condition to overcome these evils, nothing is so effective as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Take it now.

South American Nervine Was Recommended, and Before Half a Bottle Was Taken Relief Came.

Have Since Improved Rapidly, and Am Now Completely Cured—So says Mr. David Reid, of Chesley, Ont.

What ills come to humanity from a disordered liver! Henry Ward Beecher has said that it was impossible for a man to hold correct spiritual views if his liver was out of order. The liver is so important a part of the mechanism of man that when it ceases to work with ease the whole man is unable to do his work aright. Can we not appeal to thousands, nay, tens of thousands, for a verification of this fact? Certainly it is, that Mr. David Reid, of Chesley, Ont., felt that the enjoyment of life had been taken from him, through the unhealthy condition of his liver. For ten years he says he was troubled with liver complaint and dyspepsia. Employing his own language: "At times my liver was so tender I could not bear it pressed or touched from the outside. Had tried a great many remedies without any benefit. Was compelled to drop my work, and being worse than usual, I decided as a final resort to try South American Nervine, which had been recommended to me by friends who had been cured by it. I got a bottle from A. S. Goodeve, local druggist, and commenced taking according to directions. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to go to work again, and I have improved steadily since. I can conscientiously recommend South American Nervine to any suffering from dyspepsia or liver complaint." This is Mr. Reid's story as he tells it in his own words. Were it thought necessary it could be corroborated by a host of witnesses. Mr. Reid has lived a long time in Chesley, and his case was known to be a very bad one. But that makes no difference to Nervine. This great discovery rises equal to the most trying occasions. Let it be indigestion, the most chronic liver trouble, as with Mr. Reid, nervous prostration, that makes life miserable with so many, sick headaches, that sap all the effort out of man or woman, Nervine measures to the necessities of the case. It is a great medicine and thousands to-day in Canada are happier and healthier men and women, because of its discovery. There is no great secret about it, and yet there is an important secret. It operates on the nerve centers of the system from which emanate all life and healthfulness, or if disordered, sickness, even death. Nervine strikes promptly at the nerve centers, hence, as with Mr. Reid, where ten years' use of other medicines had done no good, less than a bottle of Nervine brought about encouraging results, and a few bottles cured.

EVANGELIST RANTON'S VALEDICTORY MEETING.

A CROWDED CONGREGATION FILLS THE GEORGE STREET CHURCH.

Complimentary Addresses by Resident Ministers—The Evangelist's Closing Words—An Exhortation to be Joyful in the Christian Life—Advice to Beginners.

The George street church was last night filled to its utmost capacity with a congregation anxious to hear Evangelist A. H. Ranton deliver his final address in this town for some time to come. Persons were in the church at a few minutes after six, and the body of the church was filled at 7.25 o'clock. Hundreds were turned away after eight o'clock, not being able to obtain admission.

"Take the Name of Jesus with You" was sung until the very church itself was made vocal with the energy of the singing. The former part of the meeting was mostly of a platform character. That now well known favourite of Mr. Ranton's, "Happy on the way," was sung with much fervor. A quartette composed of Messrs. J. Miller and W. Wesley and Misses Vina and Annie Bellegham, sang "The Lord is My Shepherd," by special request. Mr. Ranton thanked all the local ministers for their absence of criticism, and was very thankful for the way the different papers had published very full accounts every night of his addresses. He said he didn't care anything for the letters which appeared—they only served to advertise his meetings. He thanked all who had in any way helped in the meetings. He had no hard feelings at all against anyone.

Miss Clara Bellegham's excellent voice was heard to advantage in "Almost Persuaded."

Speeches were made by Rev. Messrs. Craig, Beer, Rae and Young, in which they expressed their thankfulness for the good which had been done during the past five weeks, in which Evangelist Ranton has held revival services in George street and Charlotte street Methodist churches. They thoroughly appreciated Mr. Ranton's efforts while he has been labouring here. They assured Mr. Ranton that their prayers would follow him for the welfare of his work at other places. They also gave some good advice to the beginner in the Christian life.

Mr. Ranton in his reply to what the ministers had said of him, remarked that he appreciated their kind words very much, and he was glad they did not wait till he was dead to speak his praises.

Mr. Ranton's subject was "Oh, be Joyful," and he took his text from Nehemiah viii., 10:—

"Then he said unto to them, Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our Lord; neither be sorry: for the joy of the Lord is your strength."

These are the closing words of a preacher who labored when Christ was on earth or shortly after. The Jewish people had just been liberated from captivity and Ezra built a pulpit of wood and set it up in the wilderness and preached unto the children of Israel for six consecutive hours. "Some people grumble when a preacher speaks for three-quarters of an hour." Mr. Ranton liked a rather long, eclectic sermon. The Jews were hungry for the Word of God, after having wandered through the wilderness for forty years. Mr. Ranton was the guest of a Sunday school teacher, at one time; and he noticed that his host was not very successful with his class. He found that there were three books lying on the clock-shelf. On the bottom was the Bible, next to that another book, with an unmentionable name, and a pack of cards crowned the pile. "You will never have success as long as you put a pack of cards before the Bible." The teacher said that he believed that was where his faith lay, and became converted and has a class now with 180 in it. Do not, when you become converted, go around with a long face.

That is misrepresenting religion, which teaches us to be happy. Live in the sunshine of Christian love. Be converted when you are young. Some people expect young folks to have old heads on their shoulders—expect them to be as sedate and quiet as a person of 80 years of age. Older people should be more charitable in their criticism of the young people's lives. When the negroes were emancipated in the South they shouted for joy they were so happy.

Mr. Ranton concluded his earnest address by giving a general invitation to all to come to Christ. About 75 accepted the invitation.

Mr. Ranton was pressed to stay here longer, but his other engagements would not permit him. He goes from here to Lakefield. The final meeting lasted until nearly 12 o'clock.

ONEMEE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

All hope of the winter wheat is abandoned after last night's frost. Considerable spring wheat is being, and has been, sown.

Large numbers of Emsmore people pass through East Emily to Peterborough and will be obliged to do so for a while owing, to Mud Lake bridge being swept away.

Thos. Tully, son of David Tully, Smith, has begun blacksmithing at Frank Hill, proving quite an accommodation to farmers.

Mr. Green, of Adam Hall's, Peterborough, has been here tinning the cheese factory vats, which will soon be completed.

John Kincaid, of Peterborough, paid a flying visit here purchasing most of the spring fur, paying the best prices offered.

Thos. Henderson, trapper, will make the best kind of local fishery inspector. He knows every inch of the waters north and south of here and will teach the boys the danger of yielding to temptation at all hours.

Our band gave the first open-air concert Saturday night to the delight of a large crowd assembled. Mr. Green, a member of the 57th band, Peterborough, who was present, said the playing was remarkably good for a village band.

Peterborough will be often visited the coming season by members of our bicycle club. The 14 miles will be made by some in 50 minutes with their new and improved wheels. Let Peterborough bikers try and come here any quicker.

Our high school is again opened up after Easter with a large attendance.

Citizens are anxiously looking for the posters announcing 24th May proceedings at Peterborough as there is nothing going on here or at Lindsay.

The Evans hand fire engine saved the High School building from destruction on Sunday night. An adjoining dwelling which an old couple occupied, was burned from defective stovepipes.

INSURANCE ON GRAIN.

Recently there has been considerable demoralization in insurance rates among those companies accepting grain risks in the Province of Manitoba. Rate cutting has gone on now for two years past, but it is understood the trouble is now to be brought to an end. The general agents at Winnipeg have entered an agreement to adopt a tariff which now only awaits the sanction of the head offices. The next Ontario town to have its insurance rates advanced is Hastings, where the insurance companies have decided to raise rates after May 1. It is said that rates will be increased in about a score of Ontario towns, the reason given by the insurance companies being that the fire appliances are not up to the standard.—Globe.

FEARFUL EXPLOSION

At an Underground Railway Station in London.

FIRST-CLASS CARRIAGE WRECKED

Ten Persons Taken From the Ruins Badly Injured—Gas Lights Extinguished by the Concussion—Persons Standing on the Platform Were Also Wounded.

London, April 26.—A tremendous explosion occurred on the underground railway to-day as a train filled with men from the city was making its usual stop at the Aldersgate station. The glass roof of the station was blown out and the platform was strewn with debris. Many of the gaslights in the waiting room and on the platform were extinguished, and the station was left in semi-darkness. A general panic ensued. When comparative quiet had been restored it was found that a first-class coach had been completely wrecked and that its occupants were lying around maimed and bleeding. Ten of the injured were found to be in a precarious condition and were removed to hospitals. A number of persons who were standing on the platform were also hurt. Much of the wreckage was hurled across the station. The cause of the explosion is not known, but is believed to have been the result of a collection of gas, which became ignited in some way. Many persons, however, believe that the disaster was not due to accident, but was caused by the explosion of a bomb which had been placed in the station with the intention of wrecking it.

Hotel Burned at Haliburton.

Lindsay, April 26.—The Queen's Hotel at Haliburton, owned by D. Kellett, was totally destroyed by fire at midnight last night. For a time it seemed that the village would be devoured by the flames, but the united efforts of the villagers confined the flames to the hotel and part of the contents were saved. Cause of fire is a mystery. The building and contents were insured.

Death of Vice-Chancellor French.

Syracuse, N. Y., April 26.—Dean John Raymond French, vice-Chancellor of Syracuse University, died at his home in this city at noon to-day of diabetes. He was 72 years of age. He was regarded as one of the best mathematicians in the world.

Vaulting Dairy Ambition.

In the dairying business, as in many others, "vaulting ambition overleaps itself." Sometimes a certain portion of food must go to sustain animal life in the first place, before there is any for the secretion of milk or to lay on fat. Now if one cow be fed on what has been alloted to two, only half fed, the amount required to keep up the system of one will be practically saved and there will be double the amount to convert into milk or fat. It is singular that some farmers do not see things in the proper light. They seem to think that the more acres of land they have and the greater number of cows on it the richer they are.

MR. SMITH'S SPRING POETICAL PROSE.

Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer by a fry of Pork. Lent is at an end, and the air is rich with the odour of fried ham, and other things—chiefly other things. Having got rid of the salvels, nicely over the pink eye, and fairly convalescent of the semi-annual boiling of soft-soap. Nature seems to gladden the heart with a sight of growing beauty. Set suddenly before a picture of great beauty its full import is not realized, but Nature, in the Spring, gradually unfolds her grandeur, and solemnly impresses her marvellous attributes upon the feeble finite mind. Why does each plant and tree form a particularly shaped leaf? With unerring accuracy, each tree draws from the elements precisely the properties it requires, and fashioned its own peculiar forms of bud, leaf and twig. Why is it that in spring the garden blooms with salmon tins, whilst never a tin can be seen when you wish to preserve a few fish worms in sunny June? Mysterious are the ways of Nature. Why is it that in infancy we delight in hiding our shoes and stockings under the sidewalk, and go skipping and prancing among nails, smashed bottles and broken stone in our bare feet, whilst yet the snow and ice lurk in the shady nook behind the ash barrel? On Monday the air was thick with the driven snow, and that night the thermometer dropped to 14 above zero, yet yesterday morning little Tommy with a heart as light and as big as his straw hat's crown that wasn't there, went gleefully down the street on the hippety-hop in his bare feet. Mysterious! the ways of Nature are passing rummy.

THE BUDGET DEBATE

Was Resumed Yesterday by Hon. Wm. Paterson.

AN ABLE DEFENCE OF THE TARIFF

As Well as of the General Policy of the Government—Many Questions Asked by the Opposition Members—Mr. Reid Brings in a Bill to Regulate Freight Rates.

Ottawa, April 27.—(Special.)—Opposition members were very thirsty for information to-day, and, after the House opened, asked questions on all manner of topics. The first business was the introduction by Dr. Reid of a bill to regulate freight rates on railways. He said the proposed measure was similar to the Interstate Commerce law of the United States. It is proposed to create a commission to settle all disputes between shippers and railways, and further that rates on short hauls should not be proportionately greater than the rates on long hauls.

Controller Paterson, answering Mr. Wood, said the tug Silver Spray and the schooner Mary Grover were seized in May, 1894, for not reporting goods landed at Michipicoten River. Messrs. Commee and McLennan were the owners of the vessels.

Mr. Tarte told Mr. Monk the cost of the temporary roof over the Western block was $4500. The contract was let to Joseph Bourque of Hull without tender.

Sir Richard Cartwright, answering Mr. Casgrain, said the fortification walls at Quebec were in a bad state of repair, and the Government was taking steps to have them put into proper condition.

Mr. Davies told Mr. Casgrain that the appeal in the fisheries case would be heard in England during the coming summer.

Mr. Davies informed Mr. Casgrain that Dr. Lavoie of Quebec had been appointed inspector of the gulf fisheries during the absence of Commander Wakeham, who was to be in charge of the Hudson's Bay expedition. Dr. Lavoie's salary would be $1200 a year.

Mr. Laurier told Sir Charles Tupper that the main features of the agreement with the Grand Trunk Railway for the I.C.R. to enter Montreal were complete, but that there were important details still to be settled.

Mr. Mulock stated to Mr. Davin that Mrs. McManus, postmistress of Northfield, B.C., had been dismissed owing to the overbearing conduct of her husband. [Laughter.]

Mr. Fielding said that Charles Thibault, advocate of Waterloo, after 2 years and 9 months' service as secretary of the Board of Official Arbitrators, was superannuated in September, 1889, after paying $322 to the superannuation fund. Ten years had been added to his term of service. [Ironical cheers from the Government benches.] He had drawn as superannuation $6143 and as salary from 1880 to 1889 $16,272. [Liberal cheers.]

Mr. Laurier told Mr. LaRiviere that shortly after the conclusion of last session the Government invited the Government of Manitoba to negotiate on the school question. Accordingly three members of the Manitoba Government came to Ottawa and had several conferences with the Dominion Government. That was the arrangement now before the country. [Hear, hear.]

Mr. McNeill asked what interpretation the Controller of Customs placed on the words "on the whole" in the reciprocal clause.

Mr. Paterson said, without wishing to be discourteous, he could only say the words carried their own interpretation.

Mr. McNeill asked whether the words "on the average" would be a fair equivalent.

Mr. Patherson: I do not understand that if a country admitted but one or two or half a dozen articles that that would come within the category. At this moment the only country I have decided as coming within the scope of the clause is Great Britain and Ireland.

THE BUDGET DEBATE.

Mr. Paterson, Controller of Customs, Defends the Government Policy.

Mr. Paterson, after an introductory reference to previous speeches, justified the delay that had ensued between the time when the new Government took office and the introduction of the new tariff, claiming that the Government had done in a few months what had taken the Conservative Government a year to do in 1894. He denied that business had been paralysed by the delay. True, there had been uncertainty and some anxiety, but nothing unusual in the case of any impending tariff revision. As to the tariff itself, Mr. Paterson claimed it fulfilled to the letter the pledges in the platform adopted by the Liberal party in 1893. The taxes had been reduced on every article except ales, spirits and tobaccos, and no industry had been unjustly treated. The Government took the ground that the tariff should be a tariff for revenue, a tariff framed to raise the requisite revenue to carry on the government of the country; if there was any protection incidental thereto, as there must be, it followed as an incident and not as a principle. Hon. gentlemen opposite pretended not to be able to understand the reciprocal clause of the new tariff, albeit they denounced its provisions as unconstitutional. It was strange that these gentlemen, with the resolutions in print in their hands, should not be able to comprehend it when newspapers thousands of miles away, receiving their reports by telegraph and cable, are able to understand it, and as The London Times did, comment favourably upon it and even commend it to the good judgment of the Opposition.

Proceeding upon this point, Mr. Paterson read from Sir Charles Tupper's speech before the Second Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, wherein he, speaking to the preferential trade resolution, declared that while Canada's loyalty was not dependent upon commercial benefits, preferential trade would be a strengthening of the bonds. And Sir Charles further had announced that Lord Salisbury, as well as every statesman, Liberal and Conservative, in England, was pledged to the abrogation of these favored nation treaties, which stood in the way of carrying out a preferential trade arrangement between Great Britain and the colonies. If Sir Charles believed that, Mr. Paterson asked when did he see the difficulty of carrying out the resolution before the House? The Conservatives themselves were all along in favor of preferential trade arrangements with England. The only difference was that the Tories knew it was right, but dare not do it. The effect of this resolution in England was such that never in the history of Canada had anything occurred that so touched the English heart. Such was the sympathetic effect in England thus aroused, Mr. Paterson said, that the chances were improved of getting the cattle schedule removed; while in Canada the new tariff altogether met with the approval of the people.

Mr. Davin replied. He referred to the uncomfortable position which the Liberals occupied in their new role of enthusiastic Britishers, after their 18 years' denunciation of the Conservatives because of their loyalty talk, and after their long advocacy of trade with the nearer markets of the United States. Whence came this talk of British preference? There was not a word about England in the resolution, and when asked what meant the words "On the whole" in that resolution the Government could not or would not give an answer. What was to prevent German and Belgian goods coming into Canada through England? It was said the Government had received a despatch from one of the Imperial secretaries of state saying that Her Majesty's Government was pleased with the expression of loyalty, but that the treaty could not be sanctioned. He asked the acting leader of the House (Mr. Davies) whether the report were true.

Mr. Davies: "I don't see why I should answer such a question as that. The hon. gentleman seems to know everything."

Mr. Davin complained that in regard to so important a matter the answer was simply trifling with the House. He then went on to criticise the Government upon their utter abandonment of principle. Not a word of explanation upon the tariff had been vouchsafed by the Finance Minister or those who followed him, so that each member had to interpret for himself, and, comparing the old and new tariff, Mr. Davin said the Northwest would be disappointed at not securing the removal of the duty on coal oil, which was a necessary of life. The duty on lumber, which was also a hardship to the Northwest, had also been allowed to remain. In his opinion the anti-combines clause was a scheme for terrorizing a section of the community just previous to an election.

Mr. Davin pointed out the hollowness of the preferential clause of the tariff, and criticized Sir Richard's mistaken notions concerning its effect and the manner it was sought to enforce it.

Mr. Craig (Conservative), East Durham, said that in some respects he approved of the tariff, but in his opinion, however, the Government had broken every promise they had previously made. They had presented a policy based largely on that of their predecessors. The tariff faced both ways. In framing it the Government had been rather more agile and dexterous than he had given them credit for. Protectionists were invited to keep their eye on the general tariff and not look at the special tariff, while free traders were told to keep in view the special tariff. Then it was suggested that the Government wanted to hit the United States, and a strange way they had adopted to do that. They proposed to do this by making corn free, reducing the duties on coal oil and wheat flour, and abolishing the duties on barbed wire and and binder twine. He regarded the reciprocity clause as dangerous because it made the Controller of Customs sole arbiter in this matter. It was, moreover, the thin edge of the wedge to destroy protection altogether. This preference with Great Britain was a pretended preference, as Germany, Belgium and 22 other countries must participate in it. Personally, he was a devoted son of the Empire, but he had been sent to Parliament to legislate for the workingmen of Canada, not for the Empire. A true preferential arrangement would receive his support, but the Government's proposal he regarded as dangerous. It gave concessions for nothing. While he was a loyal man, he was not loyal enough to see English or Germans doing the work of Canadians.

J. Ross Robertson (East Toronto) said he had always been a protectionist and controlled the first protectionist newspaper ever printed in Canada. By this tariff the leader of the Opposition had been robbed of his clothes, but he still retained the principles of protection, and it was his (Mr. Robertson's) duty to follow those principles, clothes or no clothes. [Cheers and laughter.] The Liberal party was half converted to the principles of protection. For the country's sake he rejoiced that the Government was half seas over on the voyage of protection. His place, however, was with those who stood for protection for the country's sake. The Government was a sort of wet nurse and suckled protection in order to earn a living for its party. [Laughter.] In his judgment there was too much free trade and too little protection in this tariff. He recognized in the Government an enemy to his principles, an enemy all the more dangerous because in this instance it was long-headed and far-seeing in its methods. The citadel of protection had been abandoned to its enemies by the folly of its friends.

Mr. McMullen moved the adjournment of the debate.

ATHENIANS IN A FURY

A Revolution Seems Imminent at the Greek Capital.

STRONG FEELING AGAINST THE KING

Report From Paris That the Cabinet Has Resigned—King George Defends Himself—All the Trouble is Because of the Retreat From Larissa.

Athens, April 27, midnight.—The fall of the Ministry is now regarded as certain.

Cabinet Has Resigned.

London, April 27.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Paris says that the Greek Cabinet has resigned.

Looks Like a Revolution.

Athens, April 27.—Popular feeling points to a revolution in favor of a republic. The citizens are greatly excited at the revelations made by former Minister Ralli as to the conduct of the campaign. To-day large meetings have been held in Constitution-square and other places of public resort and fiery harangues have been delivered by well known orators in denunciation of "those who would betray Greece."

This afternoon 500 men formed themselves into a volunteer body, forced their way into the gunsmiths' shops, armed themselves with rifles and revolvers, and paraded the street in front of M. Ralli's residence. Several deputies addressed them, exhorting them to remain calm and to await the progress of events. Finally they proceeded to the Royal Palace, where, after making a demonstration, they dispersed without further disorder. But the incident has made a great sensation.

WAR NEARING ITS END.

Affairs in the East Indicate Early Intervention by the Powers.

London, April 27.—The Evening News this afternoon publishes a despatch from Athens, dated 10.30 p.m., and saying the people there are frightfully incensed at the retreat of the troops. The despatch further says that the bitterness against King George and his Government is intensified by the news that the Greek army in Epirus has been ordered to suspend operations, pending reconsideration of the situation by the Ministers. Continuing, the despatch says:

"Indeed, it looks probable that to-morrow will see the end of the whole business. There is reason to believe the Government is contemplating the withdrawal of the Greek troops from Crete, and an appeal to the powers to settle the troubles. This change upon the part of the Government is due to Edhem Pasha having intimated his intention of marching upon Athens."

Powers Will Not Occupy Greek Territory.

London, April 27.—In the House of Commons this afternoon, the Parliamentary Secretary for the Foreign Office, Mr. George N. Curzon, replying to a question of Mr. Henry Labouchere, advanced Liberal member for Northampton, said no agreement had been reached relative to the withdrawal of the Turkish troops from Crete. A majority of the powers, he added, were of the opinion that the Greeks must leave first. [Cheers.]

Continuing, Mr. Curzon informed the House that the admirals of the foreign fleets in Cretan waters had decided that the deportation of the Turks would imperil 49,000 Cretan Mussulmans in Candia alone. In conclusion, Mr. Curzon remarked that the powers had no intention of occupying any portion of Greek territory and declaring it neutral.

A Cabinet Crisis Imminent.

Athens, April 27, 3 p.m.—The Legislative Assembly in the absence of a quorum has postponed the extraordinary session until 10 a.m. to-morrow.

A majority of the deputies have signed a manifesto exhorting the people to be calm. Nevertheless, there are gatherings in various parts of the city, and especially on the square in front of the Palace, where M. Ralli and the other leaders of the Opposition are conferring with the King.

The organ of M. Ralli says that the meeting of the Legislative Assembly is the result of a conference of the leaders of the Opposition, Sotiropolo, Ralli, Moupolo, Stouloudis and Carapanos, with the King and his Ministers. These leaders had pointed out the necessity of preserving order and the necessary measures to meet the danger, and urged the immediate meeting of the Legislative Assembly as a possible solution. The King and his Ministers consented to this.

After the conference a representative of the Associated Press had an interview with M. Stouloudis, one of the Opposition leaders. He said the leaders of the Opposition had impressed the King with the fact that it was his first duty to organize the Greek forces. To this the King had assented. The leaders also pointed out that a new Ministry must be the product of a vote taken in the Legislative Assembly.

Russia Glad of the Greek Defeat.

St. Petersburg, April 27.—In political circles pleasure is experienced at the Greek defeat, as it is looked upon as calculated to avert dangerous complications in the Balkans, which might have jeopardized the peace of Europe.

Some Greeks May Stay.

Constantinople, April 27.—The Turkish Government, acting upon the recommendations of the Ambassadors of the powers, has authorized the Greeks in the service of the Consulates, hospitals, foreign missions and postoffices to remain in Turkey. All other Greeks, however, will have to leave the Empire.

Campaign Practically Ended.

Constantinople, April 27.—The campaign in Thessaly is considered prac-

THE FRENCH PEA.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—My attention has been called to a paragraph which has appeared in the daily press with regard to certain peas that are said to have been imported from France, and the impression has been created that these peas as imported have an insect inside which would be injurious to be sown as seed in this province.

As the original importer of the French pea into these parts I desire to say most emphatically and distinctly that the pea as imported in the first place is a perfect pea, and as clean as any other description of pea grown; in the second place the pea is not sold to the farmer—it is only furnished to good honourable farmers as seed, and after having been grown is turned back into the hands of our company, who agree to purchase the pea from the farmers at a stated price, under an agreement which is signed by both parties before the seed is taken away.

I desire to say, and I think that the farmers of this district will corroborate me when I say that our dealings have always been most satisfactory, and those who have dealt with our company in the past have dealings with us again, and we can only refer them to the Bank of Montreal in Peterboro' to see whether our transactions have not always been of the most honorable and straightforward character. It may be that in forty bushels of peas there will be an occasional pea with an insect, but will any person tell what pea is grown that has not got more or less black specks on them, which when opened will result in the finding of an insect of some description.

After the paragraph appeared in the press I visited Mr. James Cooney of Otonabee, who is said to have been the author of the paragraph, and I requested him to return the peas, if he was not satisfied and the company would give him back his agreement, but Mr. Cooney refused to do so, saying that he preferred to keep the peas and that the samples that he had had on Saturday were only a few of the peas he had selected from the whole fifty bushels—a most unfair and certainly injurious way of affecting the sale of our peas, which are meeting with the most ready sale and which are not grown in France, but in this very Province of Ontario, and have been for several years. These peas are not French peas, but Ontario peas, grown originally from an imported French pea, and I defy any person to say that they are not as good a pea and as clean and pure as any ever put on the market.

Our Company are fair dealing people and those who have dealt with us during the past three years of our business in Peterborough will, we [illegible], endorse what we say, that [illegible] with the farmers have been of the most pleasant and satisfactory character, and those who have sown our peas are anxious to sow them again, which is the best evidence we can offer that they are as free from specks as any other pea. Our peas may be seen in Peterborough, and we invite the farmers to call and see them.

Regretting that I have occupied so much of your space, I am,

Yours truly,
HOUDRY & SON,
France.

NEWS NOTES FROM OTTAWA

Talk Around the Lobbies—Tobacco Men Interview Mr. Fielding on the Tariff—Other Items.

Ottawa, April 22.—(Special.)—A report was current round the lobbies today that the Government had received a telegram from the Colonial Secretary stating that the Imperial authorities could not accept the reciprocal clause. The rumor created much talk, but on the highest authority your correspondent is in a position to say there is not a word of truth in it. As regards the question of the admission of Germany and Belgium to the privileges of Schedule D of the tariff, I understand that the Government admits that the point is a debateable one as to whether or not the most favored nation c...use will apply, but naturally they put the most favorable construction upon the matter, and, even supposing they are beaten, their action will have given a great impetus to the movement to get rid of these obnoxious treaties.

A proclamation was issued to-day in an extra of The Canada Gazette, appointing June 22 as a public holiday, on which to celebrate Her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee. It reads: Whereas it seems to us fitting that a day should be set apart for the purpose of affording our loving subjects, the people of Canada, an opportunity of celebrating the 60th anniversary of our accession in such a manner as to manifest their devoted attachment to our throne and person and their thankfulness for the prosperity which, under the blessing of Almighty God, they have enjoyed during our reign.

AN AGENT'S STORY.

HE WAS TROUBLED WITH A CONSTANT FEELING OF LASSITUDE.

Felt as Though he Could Lie Down Anywhere and go Asleep—Food Distressed Him and His Condition Was One of Constant Misery.

From the Parrsboro, N.S., Leader.

There is scarcely a man, woman or child in the busy mining town of Springhill, N.S. who does not know Mr. Moses Y. Boss, the trusty agent of A. R. Fulton, dealers in carriages and farm implements. Two years ago the writer first met Mr. Boss, and was struck with the extreme pallor of his countenance. He seemed, in fact, like one in the deadly grip of consumption. Recently business again brought him to the home of the writer, but a remarkable change for the better had taken place in the interval. Upon enquiry it was learned that failing health first induced Mr. Boss to go upon the road as salesman in the hope that a change of scene would prove beneficial. The result, however, did not meet with his expectation. The food he ate distressed him and the weakness and feeling of lassitude became intensified. To use his own words, he was so weak and nervous and used up that he felt he would have dropped down and gone to sleep anywhere." Driving tired him and when at home the slightest labour about his farm was irksome. He was in this hopeless and discouraged conditions when a friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He decided to try one box, and before they were gone he found some benefit from them. He then bought four boxes more, and each weak found an improvement in his condition. His stomach ceased to trouble him, the feeling of lassitude troubled him no more, and his labours were no longer irksome. By the time he had finished his fifth box, his health was fully restored, and has since continued to be excellent, and he is not backward in telling his friends the sterling worth of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all diseases arising from weak and impoverished state of the blood, such as anæmia, pale and sallow complexion, general muscular weakness, loss of appetite, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, pains in the back, nervous headache, all forms of female weakness, hysteria, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, rheumatism and sciatica. They invigorate the blood when broken down by over work, worry diseases, excesses and indiscretions of living. They act directly on the blood, supplying to the latter its life saving qualities. They are genuine only with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper round each box. Sold by all druggists or sent post-paid at 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

POISONED BLOOD.

Dreadful Death-Draught Comes from Diseased Kidneys

When Uric Acid Flows in the Veins, Life looks out of Darkened Windows, expecting soon the Close of Day.

The fashionable Italian poison of the XVI. century was Aqua Tofana. It was used by the Medicis and all the first families of Rome, Genoa and Naples. In five years historians tell us, over 600 wives used it to make widows of themselves.

In these modern days a more terrible and more prevalent poison is decimating the human family, and men have asked in vain for an antidote. It is the uræmic poisoning of the blood, caused by diseased kidneys. The poison which these useful organs should filter from the blood, is allowed to remain in the circulation and courses through the body, like

"Accursed Hebenon . . . whose effect
Holds such an enmity with the blood of man,
That with a sudden vigor it doth posset
And curd
Like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood."

To-day there is a remedy. Science has discovered a sure cure. All may have and apply it. It is sold under the name of DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

It is a specific for all Kidney ailments. It cures by restoring the Kidneys, so that they properly perform their natural functions. It is the only known cure for Diabetes, and Bright's Disease. For sale by druggists everywhere, and the Dodd's Medicine Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

Mr. VERNON BROMLEY, Trenton, Ont., says: "For a number of years have suffered severely from Rheumatism and Sciatica. Was induced to procure a half dozen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, which I have used, and from being a cripple I am a well man."

Mr. THOS. HARRISON, St. Mary's, N.B. says: "In spite of all other treatment I suffered for nearly a year with Stone of the Bladder. I was relieved by passing the same, after using one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and completely cured by a few boxes."

Mr. WM. MCEVELA, 275 Friel street, Ottawa, says: "Two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills have worked a wonderful cure in my case. Had been laid up with kidney trouble for months."

G. B. CONES, Orillia, Ont., says: "I most cheerfully testify that five boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured me of Diabetes from which I suffered two years."

For Weak People,

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for weak people having heart or nerve troubles, such palpitation, throbbing, spasms, dizziness, shortness of breath, smothering feeling, pain in the breast, etc., are an invaluable medicine as hundreds of certified cures bear witness. For anæmia, debility, after effects of Grippe and loss of appetite, they are a specific.

Captain Sweeney, U. S. A., San Diego Cal. says: "Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy is the first medicine I have ever found that would do me any good." Price 50c. Sold by John Nugent, 259 George Street.

Popular Ferment Partly Allayed.

London, April 27.—The correspondent of The Times at Athens will say to-morrow:

The popular ferment has been partly allayed by the dismissal of Constantine's staff, though the most violent section of the press still demands that the Crown Prince and Prince Nicholas be recalled. These newspapers do not say what would be gained by inflicting such an humiliation upon the Princes. It could not have been expected that at their age and with their experience of actual warfare they would suddenly display a heavenborn genius for strategy. The fault lies elsewhere, but it is not easy to say where. The number of scapegoats is certainly large enough."

What the King Says.

London, April 27.—The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Athens will say to-morrow:

"I am at liberty to affirm that King George emphatically repudiates all responsibility for the precipitate retreat of the army. He asserts that he received a telegram from his aide-de-camp, Col. Sapountzake, asking him to allow the retreat. The King replied: 'I am at Athens and cannot form an adequate judgment as to what should be done in Thessaly; whereas, you are on the spot, acquainted with all the data, and, therefore, in a position to act according to the circumstances of the case. Exercise your best discretion.'"

RESTLESSNESS AT ATHENS.

A Revolutionary Feeling Appears to Exist at the Greek Capital

London, April 27.—The most serious feature in the Graeco-Turkish emergency is the revolutionary feeling displayed at Athens.

Ex-Minister Rallí, leader of the principal opposition group in the Legislative Assembly, threatened that unless the military staff was changed he would issue a proclamation to the people. His statement acted like oil upon fire, and the popular excitement has flared up. Crowds assembled in the streets to discuss them, and wanted to march to the palace to read them to King George. Fortunately heavy showers drove the people indoors.

M. Delyannis, keenly alive to the necessity of immediate action, had an audience with the King, and after the interview announced that the staff of the Crown Prince would be recalled, and that ex-Minister Rallí, with three of his nominees, General Smolenski, General Mavromichali and Col. Dimopoulo, would be appointed to replace them.

M. Rallí in a published interview says: "The moment Constantine arrived at the seat of war the sole thought of the responsible commanders was not to attack or to withstand the Turks, but to effect a safe retreat if necessary. All orders emanated from the palace. Those issued by anyone else were ignored. When despatches were sent to General Mavromichali, he was not where he was supposed to be, having been moved on by superior orders."

M. Rallí attended the council at the palace.

Rallí's Conditions Accepted.

London, April 27.—The Daily Telegraph's Athens correspondent says to-day: "All of M. Rallí's conditions have been accepted. The King gives carte blanche to his Ministers. As the public begins to learn the truth anger against the palace party increases and a feeling of hostility against M. Delyannis is steadily growing. Late last night (Monday) crowds was parading menacingly in the vicinity of the palace.

"It is reported on good authority that arrangements are being made to enable the royal family to leave the country hastily in case of necessity. People had generally credited the rumors that the Crown Prince would be recalled and that the Government was willing to consider peace overtures. It is impossible to say what will happen when it is known that the war is to be continued and the Crown Prince retained in command."

Smolenski's Appointment Confirmed.

London, April 27.—The Athens correspondent of The Times confirms the appointment of General Smolenski as chief of staff of the Greek army in Thessaly, and adds: "Col. Stalkos and Limbritis and Major Constantinides have been recalled from Crete to serve on the staff of the Crown Prince. The Ministerial Palingenesia announces that all the officers of Constantine's staff have been recalled.

"A telegram received here to-day (April 26) states that the Turks are within an hour's march of Volo. The Greek troops have been withdrawn from the town and are taking the wounded from the hospitals. Among the arrivals from Volo are ex-Minister Rallí, leader of the largest opposition group in the Boule. He has been at the scene of war, and was at Larissa last Friday evening. He has published his views in the Athens newspapers and has already succeeded in concentrating upon himself the attention of the public. Some believe he is preparing to play the role of a Greek Gambetta.

"In an interview M. Rallí unsparingly denounced Constantine's staff, which he holds responsible for all that has happened. He denies that there was any real battle at Mati, says the Greek troops were never defeated at that point, and attributes the sudden decision to abandon Tyrnavo and Larissa to the cowardice and incapacity of the general staff.

"Whatever may be the value of M. Rallí's strictures," continues The Times correspondent, "they seem for the moment echoed by the votes of the multitude. The Greek populace in many respects resembles the French, and the old cry 'Nous sommes trahis,' is being raised. It is now the fashion to denounce persons in high places; and newspapers which only the other day were eulogising King George and M. Delyannis for having placed themselves at the head of a national crusade are now hounding on the people against the constituted authorities.

"Some are openly attacking the Crown Prince. Others go so far as to announce that he has been recalled, the wish apparently being father to the thought. Journals which formerly made war are now trying to make revolution. What may be the result of the present storm of obloquy it is difficult to foresee."

One Redeeming Act.

Constantinople, April 27.—The Turkish authorities have condemned to death the murderers of the agent who was distributing British and American relief funds at Diarbekir, Asiatic Turkey.

Turks Taking the Offensive.

Salonica, April 27.—The Turkish forces are assuming the offensive at Motsoro and Lures, Province of Epirus.

The Portuguese gunboat Guadiana arrived here to-day. Her commander reports having met two Greek cruisers and two Greek torpedo boats about 30 miles from this port. The commander of the Greek squadron ordered the commander of the Portuguese gunboat to go on board the largest of the Greek cruisers.

Winnipeg Was Very One-Sided—Macdonald Was Easy, Too—West Prince Was Close.

Winnipeg, April 27.—(Special.)—In all the history of Winnipeg it never witnessed so tame and lifeless a Dominion election contest as that which took place to-day. The Conservatives kept out of it entirely, taking no part whatever, and the result was an utter lack of interest and a very one-sided affair. Indeed, scores of people overlooked the fact that an election was going on. While at the last Dominion contest there were nearly 6000 votes cast, this time there are only 3000. Of this number, however, ex-Mayor Jameson, the Government candidate, secured nearly 1200 majority and if Mr. Taylor, the Independent candidate, saves his deposit, it will only be by two or three votes.

In Macdonald constituency Dr. Rutherford, the Government candidate, is elected by a good majority, but the returns will be incomplete until to-morrow. With those incomplete returns Rutherford has between 500 and 600 majority over his opponent, Kenneth McKenzie. Returns from the rural districts, however, may reduce this majority, as the Patrons are strongest in the outlying points.

A Very Close Thing.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., April 27.—An election for the Commons took place to-day in West Prince, to fill the vacancy caused by the unseating of Mr. Hackett, Conservative. The candidates were Mr. Perry, Liberal, and Mr. Hackett. At 8 p.m. Perry was seven votes ahead, with three places to hear from.

HAVE YOU CATARRH?

Use One Sure Remedy—Obtain It for 25 Cents, Blower Included, and be Cured.

Catarrh is a disagreeable and offensive disease. It usually results from a cold and often ends in consumption and death. The one effective remedy so far discovered for it is Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure.

Physicians failed to cure Geo. Belfrey, toll-gate keeper, Holland Landing road. Chase's Catarrh Cure did it.

One box cured William Kneeshaw and two boxes James T. Stoddard, both of West Gwillimbury.

Division Court Clerk Joel Rogers, Robert J. Hoover and Geo. Taylor, all of Beeton, voluntarily certify to the efficacy of Chase's Catarrh Cure.

J. W. Jemison, of Gilford, spent nearly $300 on doctors, but found no permanent relief until he tried a 25-cent box of Chase's.

Miss Dwyer, of Alliston, got rid of a cold in the head in 12 hours.

Henry R. Nicholls, 176 Rectory street, London, tried a box with excellent effect.

Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure is for sale by any dealer, or by Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Price 25 cents including blower.

Coughs, colds and bronchial troubles readily cured by the latest discovery, Chase's Linseed and Turpentine. Pleasant and easy to take. 25 cents.

Senator McInnes Wants a Mint.

Ottawa, April 27.—(Special.)—The Senate resumed this evening after a three weeks' adjournment.

Senator McInnes of British Columbia gave notice of motion: That it is desirable and expedient that the Government should, at the earliest possible moment, establish a mint in Canada for the purpose of coining all the gold, silver and copper currency necessary to meet the commercial requirements of the country.

Serious Runaway at Uxbridge.

Uxbridge, April 27.—About 3 o'clock today a spirited team belonging to Mr. H. H. Bishop of this town, and driven by himself, ran away, throwing Mr. Bishop violently against the corner of the market building, breaking his leg, cutting his head and causing serious internal injuries. Mr Bishop now lies in a very critical condition and little hopes of his recovery are entertained.

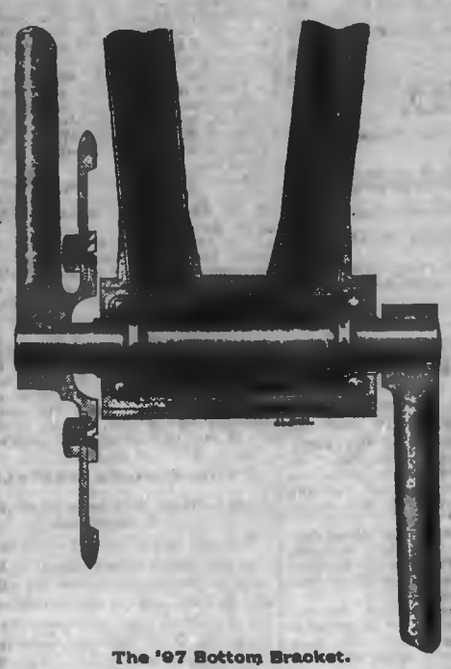
ADVERTISE IN "THE EXAMINER."

THE RED BIRD'S BOTTOM BRACKET.

ONE of the prominent features of the '97 Red Bird is its bottom bracket. It is a triumph of modern skill in bicycle building, designed with a view to promoting the pleasure and convenience of cycling. It is strong, durable and easily got at when an examination becomes necessary.



The '97 Bottom Bracket.

'97 Oiler.

Half Section of '97 Oiler.

Crank Axle with Improved Case being Removed from Bottom Bracket.

The two cups that form the bearings have ten 5/16 balls each. They are threaded and put on a sleeve that is turned perfectly true, and then all are ground to a uniform size on a universal machine made for only grinding purposes. The sleeve is then placed inside of bottom bracket and held by two bolts.

In case it is desired to remove, all that is necessary is to take off one crank and pull sleeve out as shown in accompanying illustrations. You then have all the working parts of your bicycle directly before you.

So carefully and ingeniously constructed are these bottom bracket cups that it is impossible for dust or grit to get near the bearings.

The patent ball oiler used exclusively on the Red Bird goes straight through the bracket and is fitted into the sleeve in such a way that it is impossible for oil to do otherwise than to go direct to the bearings. This patent ball oiler is convenient, simple and effective. In oiling it is merely necessary to push ball to one side with the point of the oil can, inject oil, and when the can is removed, the coil spring underneath brings the ball back into its original position.

It's a Mistake

To Think That Only the Rich Man Can Wear High-Class Garments.

We adopted the Cash System of Tailoring in Peterborough partly in order that men of moderate means might be as well dressed as the millionaire without any strain upon the finances. Suppose you need

A Genuine Scotch Tweed Suit, our Cash Price for Which is $17.50—

Isn't it easier to pay down the cash and be done with it than it would be to have a debt facing you for weeks or months, even if the price was the same?—but that could not be. No good Tailor could or would make it for less than $22.50 if he had to take his money in instalments, or, wait an indefinite time for it.

THE JAMIESON RAID.

Mr. R. M. Roy's Stereopticon Views Greatly Appreciated.

A grand stereopticon entertainment was given last night by Mr. Roy in the opera house, with the thrilling account of "Jamieson's Dash to the Transvaal." Mr. Roy's fine instrument threw the pictures on the canvass very plainly and with splendid effect. Those present could not fail to be highly pleased with the excellence of the programme presented. So realistic were the scenes that at times one would forget where he was, and thought he had been transported to that warm climate of Africa.

Mr. Roy also showed the dissolving views of magnificent English scenery, which were superb. The views of the mischievious monkey were also excellent and amused both young and old.

The views of "Jamieson's Dash" are excellent, and Mr. Roy certainly deserved a better house than he received. He may possibly show these views again at prices which will suit all.

BITTEN BY A DOG.

Mr. James Lockington Was Attacked Last Evening.

While Mr. James Lockington was walking down the lane running off Charlotte street just west of Bethune street, a hound caught his hand in its teeth and badly lacerated it.

The animal had puppies and was chained in the lane. The wound was attended to by Dr. Clarke. It presented a very swollen appearance this morning. Steps will be taken, it is understood, to have the animal destroyed.

CHANGE AT THE C. P. R.

Mr. W. Mackie is Transferred to Pontypool.

NEW BICYCLE CLUB.

The Victorias Organized and Elected Officers Last Evening.

At a largely attended meeting of enthusiastic wheelmen, last night the Victoria Bicycle Club, of Peterborough, was formally organized and the following officers elected:—

Patron and Patroness—Mr. and Mrs. James Kendry.
Hon. Pres.—J. R. Stratton, M. P. P.
President—A. H. Stratton.
First Vice-Pres.—H. LeBrun.
Second Vice-Pres.—W. L. Allen.
Secretary—H. R. H. Kenner.
Treasurer—W. J. Montgomery.
Chaplain—Rev. R. V. Stevenson.
Captain—Dickson Davidson.
1st Lieut.—W. J. Thompson.
2nd Lieut.—Fred Dixon.
Standard Bearer—Alf. Terrill.
Bugler—R. Wasson.
Racing Board—G. J. Horkins, Alex. Gibson, Frank D. Matthews, A. H. Stratton and H. R. H. Kenner.

Executive Committee—Dickson Hall, A. W. Spence, W. H. Bradburn, W. A. Sanderson and A. A. Hollingshead.

On the suggestion of Mr. Herb Hall the colours of the club will be royal purple, gold and white.

The fee was fixed at three dollars initiation and six dollars per year.

The following committee was named to draft a constitution—Messrs. H. R. H. Kenner, F. D. McKay, W. H. Bradburn, Herb Hall, A. H. Stratton and G. J. Horkins.

A committee consisting of Messrs. A. H. Stratton, H. LeBrun, W. L. Allen and H. R. H. Kenner was appointed to confer with the old club.

The new club is organized under the most favourable auspices and by the enthusiasm evinced at the meeting it is evident that Peterborough can now boast of a flourishing bicycle club. The object of the formation of the club is to promote the interests of wheeling and at the same time to provide snug quarters which will prove sufficiently attractive to keep the bicycle boys together during the winter months. Apartments will be at once procured and furnished for the use of the members of the club, which, it is understood, will be limited in its membership.

THE JUBILEE BATTALION.

Lt.-Col. Bell's Efforts to Have the 57th Represented.

The impression seems to have been made that the failure to have the 57th Battalion represented on the Jubilee Battalion, was due to the lack of promptitude of the officers and of the representatives of the East and West Riding. Correspondence is available to show that the officers at least are not to blame. At once the fact became known that the government was sending the battalion, Lt.-Col. Bell addressed a letter (April 19th) to Lt.-Col. Cotton, D.O.C., Kingston, urging the claims of the 57th to representation on the Jubilee Battalion, on the grounds of efficiency and capacity for furnishing a contingent that would reflect honour on the volunteer force. The letter, which stated also that the 57th had twenty-five noncoms, and men who had recently taken courses of instruction, Royal School of Infantry, Toronto, was forwarded by Lt.-Col. Cotton to the adjutant general, who yesterday returned the following reply:

No. 66,895. OTTAWA, 24th April, 1897.

From Adjutant-General to District Officer commanding Military District No. 3.

Be good enough to communicate to the officer commanding the 57th Battalion that only a small portion of the Infantry Battalions could possibly be selected to send representatives to England on the occasion of the Diamond Jubilee; that it was desired to make the contingent representative of all parts of the country, as well as all the Arms of the Service; that this involved consideration of the question from many points of view, and that the selections were finally made by the Government after consulting the Major-General commanding and after very careful consideration on their part.

Some of the best and most efficient corps in the country will be unrepresented in the force. This is to be regretted, but entirely unavoidable.

M. AYLMER,
Adjutant-General.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

School Inspector Walker reports that all of the town teachers were on duty on Monday, when the schools re-opened after the Easter term, and that there are 84 new pupils in attendance. The attendance at the different schools was as follows:

HIS SERVICES APPRECIATED.

The Quarterly board of the Methodist church of Havelock circuit, in requesting their pastor to return for the third year, which request was unanimously carried, also carried the following resolution:—Moved and seconded that this quarterly board desires to express to our pastor, Rev. H. McQuade, now at the close of his second year, a sense of our appreciation of the valuable service he has rendered on this charge since his arrival in our midst, for by an able and judicious management of all temporal matters in building up the charge he has proved a great success, and by faithful pastoral visitation, as well as sound and eloquent pulpit administration, he has contributed to our intellectual and spiritual welfare, and largely increased congregations are the result of his labours. The motion unanimously carried.

It is a soothing, effectual and never failing medicine, which gives immediate relief and speedily effects a cure.

THE BY-ELECTIONS YESTERDAY.

Three more added to the Government's majority, or a gain of six on a division. Winnipeg, which at the general election chose Mr. Hugh John Macdonald, the son of his father, by a majority of 126 last June, yesterday returned Mr. Jameson, the Government candidate, by a majority of 1,191. Macdonald, Man., where Mr. Boyd was elected—by crooked methods which cost him his seat—by a majority of 208, yesterday elected the Liberal candidate by a majority of about 300. In West Prince, P. E. I., the Government candidate replaced the unseated Conservative candidate by a small majority. Three additions to the Government's strength in the House is not bad work, and the fact that all these elections took place after the tariff was announced—one an urban and the two others rural constituencies—is pretty good proof of popular endorsation of the Government's tariff measure.

A BIG STREET FIGHT IN THE TOWN COUNCIL.

CHAIRMAN McWILLIAMS' STRONG DEFENCE OF HIS DEPARTMENT.

Reminiscences—A Big Batch of General Business—A Long List of Reports Presented—A Midnight Session of the Town Fathers.

The Council met in special session last night. Present: Mayor Yelland in the chair, and Messrs. Best, LaPlante, Robertson, Denne, Davis, Dawson, Cobb, McWilliams, Meldrum, Graham and White. After routine were read, as follows:—

From Lady Aberdeen, asking the Mayor's co-operation in making a success of the Canadian fund for the commemoration of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee, by founding the Victorian Order of Nurses in Canada.—Received.

From Mr. E. B. Edwards, enclosing by-law respecting agreement with the street railway, and setting forth difficulties in the way of carrying out the agreement. Also two other by-laws—Received.

From E. B. Edwards, enclosing draft by-law to amend by-law No. 755, and to amend the market by-law and new agreement and bond with Wm. Foster, for providing grounds, and by-law to authorize the execution of contracts for street-watering and for the rent of such grounds.

From R. A. Green, asking for the construction of another stock-pen.—Granted.

From Alfred Parker and ten others asking for the grading and repairing of College street.—Street and Bridge Committee.

From the City Clerk of Toronto, endorsing petition to the Governor-General-in-Council, against the request of the Bell Telephone Company, in regard to the raising of the rates.—Received.

From R. W. Reid, asking on behalf of the owner to have an approach made to lot 12, on River Road, north of Smith street.—Referred to Street and Bridge Committee.

From Wm. Morgan asking for an extension of time in which to pay his taxes.—Referred to the Court of Revision.

From Wm. Bogan asking for an extension of time in which pay his taxes.—Referred to Court of Revision.

From Frank Anthony asking that the license for peddling fruit be raised to $100 a year.—Referred to License Committee.

From the Town and County of Peterborough Historical Society,, asking the town's assistance in providing a place for the exhibition of articles of historic and scientific value. Mr. McWilliams, in view of it being a very important matter, moved, seconded by Mr. Graham, that the matter be referred to a committee of the whole council to meet the Historical Society.—Carried.

From Thos. J. Wilson and 107 others, asking for the construction of a sidewalk on the west side of Park street, just below Charlotte.—Referred to Street and Bridge Committee.

From Thos. Dawson and 105 others asking for the opening up of Bonnecord street, it being a direct means of communication between Park street and the Monaghan road.—Referred to Street and Bridge Committee.

From Hatton & Wood, on behalf of Jas. A. Patterson, claiming damages by reason of the creek undermining the cribwork on his property, and stating that it was caused through the improper loosening of the ice by a town official above his premises.—Street and Bridge Committee.

From the town of Gravenhurst, inquiring if Peterborough has a grievance against the fire underwriters, and asking what steps are being taken to remedy the matter—Fire, Water and Light Committee.

STREET INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

The first report of Messrs. Ranney & Innes was presented as follows:

To the Mayor and Council:

We beg to report as follows: The first work done on the streets has been to remove the accumulation of earth, which has been unavoidably delayed by severe frosts and rain. The earth has been taken to the low places on Water street to make up the grade at the "Goose pond" and to Townsend street, to make up the grade on that street over Spaulding's Bay. A very much larger quantity of earth has accumulated this year than usual. This was also increased by the side ditches not being properly cleaned as in previous years, to give free flow of storm water; also on some streets by the construction of sewers.

The action of the frost at the corner of Aylmer and King streets made it necessary to trench and drain it, the road bed being made of swamp earth. Some broken stone was put on at the worst places.

The west end of Charlotte street and other points between there and Park street, became impassable and dangerous from the failure of the pipe drain under the road. The fall in the street is so great that the pressure of the column of water burst the pipe and bubbled up to the surface of the road in several places. To obviate the difficulty, which has occurred frequently before, we put in a culvert at the head of the street (corner of Monaghan Road) down to the level of the broken pipe there, turning the water down the side ditches, which were opened out. We also renewed the culvert on the north side of the street. At another point, where the pipe had burst, we put in a blind drain to carry off the water.

It was necessary to water table Simcoe street, east of water, to run the water off the east side of Water street; also to renew the drainage of a lane from Queen street and prevent flooding the Gas Works yard.

We have not done anything to renew the Donegal street bridge (which has been closed for some time), pending the awarding of the timber and lumber contracts.

We have done a good deal of the patching of the sidewalks rendered necessary by damage done by snow ploughing and natural decay. The sidewalks generally are in very bad repair and require a number of men constantly renewing broken planks. This, of course, only provides a temporary relief.

We would recommend that the drainage of the streets be next undertaken before any grading is done. The water tables on many streets require to be made to uniform grades, so as to carry away the storm water promptly. At the present time these are in lumps and hollows and so irregular that the flow is obstructed, causing accumulations, ponds, etc.

We would also strongly recommend additional culverts being put along George and Water streets, so that the storm water can be quickly turned into the sewers, thus reducing the cost of maintaining the streets and water tables. Further, that the proper authorities require the Grand Trunk Railway to put culverts under their tracks on Hunter and Charlotte streets.

Also that arrangements be made whereby we can purchase from the most convenient places sand and gravel for use on the streets.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

RANNEY & INNES,
Street Inspectors.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. That the clerk procure and keep a stock book, in which he shall enter all purchases of machinery, appliances or material purchased by the corporation and that material shall only be taken out of stock on an order procured from the clerk, an entry of which shall be made in the stock book.

2. That when the steam fire engine is asked for by another municipality or by any person living outside the town of Peterborough, it shall be allowed to go only on the condition that the municipality or person applying for it shall agree to pay $100 for the use of it and also all expenses and for any injury occasioned to the engine.

3. That W. B. Kelly, of Bridgenorth, be billed for $2-0, and the village of Norwood for $100 for the use of the steam fire engine.

4. That the clerk be instructed to notify the village of Ashburnham, through the clerk of the village, that this town will not agree to continue the old agreement regarding the protection of the village from fire and that unless a new agreement is made the village will come under the terms stated in clause two of this report.

5. In reference to the account from the Water Co. for water used in settling the filling in the sewer, that the company be notified that the town did not order the water, and that the chairman of the Sewerage Committee states that he did not give directions to have the water used, as stated by the Superintendent of the Water Co. in his letter to the council.

6. That the Treasurer's salary be $800 a year, from May 1st, 1897.

7. That the following accounts be paid:

All of which is respectfully submitted,

H. DENNE,
Chairman.

On motion to adopt the report, an explanation of the first clause was asked.

Mr. Best explained that the inspector should be made responsible for all supplies in the lumber yard, etc. It was intended to prevent irresponsible parties helping themselves to lumber, etc., from which practice the town lost a good deal.

Mr. McWilliams agreed with the principle but thought the paragraph could be simplified.

Mr. Denne and Mr. Meldrum explained that the clause was inserted to keep a check on the use of tools and material owned by the town by entering them in the stock book.

Mr. Denne said the town had lost even wagons and didn't know where they were.

Mr. McWilliams—It's time then that something was done.

Mr. McWilliams didn't approve of the clause, charging the village of Nowood $100 for the use of the fire engine—considering the great loss they had sustained. The clause might apply to future occasions.

Mr. Denne said the engine had suffered considerable damage by such trips.

Mr. Meldrum said it was the practice of other towns to pay for such services and the clause was just.—Report adopted.

COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS.

To the Mayor and Council:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Committee on Appointments and Supervision of Police beg leave to report as follows:

1. Your committee asked for tenders for suits of summer clothing for the members of the police force, and awarded the contract for four suits to Messrs. A. Marcer & Co. at $10 each.

2. We recommend that Messrs. Hall, Gilchrist & Co. be paid for four waterproof coats for the police force at $30 each.

3. We also recommend that the Chief of Police be instructed to have one policeman patrol different outlying portions of the town each night, from 8 until 10 o'clock.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. DAWSON,
Chairman.

Mr. Dawson moved the adoption of the first two clauses, but thought it in the interests of the town to have the police force kept in the business portion of the town.

Mr. Best asked who ordered the waterproofs from Hall, Gilchrist & Co.

Mr. Dawson said the police had been promised coats, and as young Mr. Hall was going to England, the police ordered the coats with the understanding that if the town did not pay for them, they would do so themselves.

Mr. Best and Mr. LaPlante strongly objected to paying for the coats under such circumstances and they moved that the account for the coats be not paid.

Mr. Graham said that there was no need for four coats as only one policeman was out at a time and therefore one coat would do.—(Laughter).

Mr. Davis explained that under the circumstances the committee thought it was best to buy the coats, though they felt that the transaction was irregular.

Mr. Best referred to the dictation of the police in defining their own duties.

Mr. Dawson said the police were willing to do what they were told to do and did not wish to dictate. He thought that Mr. Best had a grudge against the chief and some of the members of the force. He should not complain—three members of the force who lived in No. 1 patrolled that ward three times a day.

Mr. Best said there was complaints on the part of the citizens of inefficient service by the police.

Mr. Meldrum was in favour of the police patrolling the outskirts. The police, he thought, did what they were wanted to do.—(Hear, hear.)

The report was adopted as a whole.

Mr. Robertson presented the report of

THE MARKET COMMITTEE.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN—Your Market Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:—

1. That the Market By-law be amended so as to exempt whole dressed hogs from the list of articles that may not be purchased by grocers, butchers and runners before eleven o'clock in the morning.

2. That the Treasurer be authorized to refund to H. P. Kennedy the fine and costs, amounting to $6.10, imposed on him for violation of the Market by-law, by buying on the market before 11 o'clock.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

C. B ROBERTSON,
Chairman

Mr. LePlante moved that the clause recommending the refund of Mr. Kennedy's taxes be not adopted. The last charge was the second on which he was brought before the magistrate, and after Police Constable Stewart had informed Mr. Kennedy of the law on the subject. In view of this Mr. Robertson moved the adoption of the first clause, and that the second clause be referred back to the committee.—Carried.

Mr. Cobb, chairman, presented the report of the

COMMITTEE ON PRINTING

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

Gentlemen—Your Printing Committee beg leave to report and recommend, as follows:—

1. That no action be taken on the communication of F. Smiley, in regard to advertising in the Summer Resort Guide.

2. Also that no action be taken on the circular of Arthur L. Willson, in reference to the Municipal Act Condensed and Classified.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. H. COBB,
Chairman.

Adopted.

Mr. McWilliams, Chairman, presented the report of the committee on

STREETS AND BRIDGES.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN:—Your Street and Bridge Committee beg leave to report as follows:—

1. Your committee advertised for tenders for street watering and received a number of tenders. We recommend that the contracts be awarded at the amounts named to the following, who are in each case the lowest tenderers: southern district, John Hoban, $800; western district, J. H. Cameron $180; northern district, Joseph Gagnon, $175, provided that sureties in each case be furnished to the satisfaction of the chairman of this committee.

2. Your committee also advertised for tenders for lumber and recommend that the lumber and timber required this year be purchased from the following at the prices named, the lumber and timber to be delivered in quantities as required:—From W. B. Kelly, 3 x 8 and 8 x 10 cedar, at $8.75, 3 x 8 cedar at $8.50, 2-inch cedar plank at $9, cedar paving blocks at $4 per cord, and 40,000 feet of 2-inch pine plank at $11.75 per M. From the Dickson Company, two-thirds of the pine plank required at $12. From A. McDonald, hemlock plank at $8, and one-third of the pine plank required at $12.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. R. McWILLIAMS,
Cairman.

Report adopted.

Mr. Best, in reference to the cedar contracted for, said that we had heretofore got the soundest and best cedar from the low-lands east and west of the town, and asked if the cedar was "live?"

Mr. McWilliams—Yes."

Mr. Best—(laughingly) How 'live?"

Mr. McWilliams—(laughingly also) A good deal 'liver' than some that was used in your time."

Mr. Graham, chairman, presented the report of the Committee on

PROPERTY AND HEALTH.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Property and Health Committee beg leave to report as follows:—

1. Your committee, as authorized, asked for tenders for a ground suitable for a dumping ground and for taking care of the same. The tender of Mr. Richard Lillico was the lowest, but Mr. Lillico has transferred his right to Mr. Wm. Forster, and your committee has arranged with Mr. Forster for the ground used last year at the price given in Mr. Lillico's tender, namely, $135.00.

2. Your committee has got the watering carts repaired and got ready for the season's work.

3. Your committee recommend that the chairman be authorized to procure half a dozen seats for the Dixon Park and to have trees planted in the park, one hundred to be ordered for that purpose and for other parts of the town.

4. Your committee also recommend that a new ceiling be put in the fire hall, and that the work be given to Mr. Thomas Rutherford at the price given by him to the chairman, $47.50, the work to be done in a first-class manner and to be paid for on the certificate of the chairman of this committee.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JAS. G. GRAHAM,
Chairman.

The report was adopted.

Mr. Denne said that, as all the parks were in the north part of the town, there were triangles at the corner of Park and Charlotte and Park and Hunter streets where trees should be put in.

Mr. LaPlante objected to purchasing seats for the Dixon Park before the ownership was settled.

Mr. White thought it best to get the seats. They would do for other parks if not needed for the Dixon Park.

Mr. McWilliams suggested that an overhead bridge be built at the park across the railway track.

Mr. Meldrum said Mr. Dixon was willing that part of the stipulated $300 be spent on streets in the vicinity of the park.

The report was adopted with the exception of the clause referring to repairs to the fire hall, which was referred back to the committee.

Mr. White presented the report of the committee on

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT:

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Fire, Water and Light Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. That a hydrant be ordered from the Water Company to be placed on Crescent street as directed by the members of the Council from No. 1 Ward.

2. That the Water Company be ordered to place the hydrant at the corner of Lock and Romaine streets which they agreed last fall to put in.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. M. WELSH,
Chairman.

LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY.

A deputation from the Little Lake Cemetery Company was heard in reference to additional hydrants.

Mr. Denne said that by the town adopting two hydrants, east of Lock and Crescent streets, the Company could get water for the cemetery at a much cheaper rate.

Mr. Moore pointed out that the cemetery was a matter of public interest—it answered the purpose of the park for the southern part of the town. The beauty of the cemetery was due to the energy of the directors. It was a public enterprise, in which the whole town was interested. It was not possible to divert a cent of the revenue from the park. He urged that the town should recognize the cemetery as a public enterprise, and help the Company to get cheaper water. The Company had to bear the expenses of piping from the gates, and to bear part of the expense of putting in mains. Water was needed, and the windmill was uncertain.

Mr. Denne pointed out that the Company was anxious to get a reserve fund while they were selling their lots, so that there might be means to maintain the beauty of the place when present sources of revenue were cut off.

Mr. James Stevenson endorsed what had been said, and urged the council to grant the request of the directors, who had some claim on the town's generosity by selling them debentures at 4 per cent. when they could get 5 per cent.

Mr. White presented a letter from the town solicitor stating that there was no provision in the contact empowering the Water Company to exact the placing of hydrants at any particular distance. The company was required to place hydrants according to the wish of the council and at the rate mentioned in the contract.

Mr. Best explained that the Water Works Company wished to have another hydrant so that they could charge the cemetery company less.

Mr. Davis thought the Water Company was trying to meet the Cemetery Company in a fair spirit and he favoured the town's co operation.

Mr. Dawson thought it was not fair especially to those who had no interest in the cemetery, and the council had no right to help the Water Company at the expense of the ratepayers.

Mr. Davis thought there was no feeling of dissent on the part of any creed to the expenditure and he would urge that the request be granted.

Mr. McWilliams said he thought the town would be dealing liberally by granting one hydrant.

Mr. Best moved, seconded by Mr. Meldrum in amendment to the report that the second hydrant, as requested by the Cemetery Company, be placed on condition that the second hydrant is to cost only $30 per year.

The motion was carried as an amendment to the report, which was adopted.

UNTOLD MISERY FROM

RHEUMATISM

C. H. King, Water Valley, Miss., cured by

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For five years, I suffered untold misery from muscular rheumatism. I tried every known remedy, consulted the best physicians, visited Hot Springs, Ark., three times, spending $1000 there, besides doctors' bills; but could obtain only temporary relief. My flesh was wasted away so that I weighed only ninety-three pounds; my left arm and leg were drawn out of shape, the muscles being twisted up in knots. I was unable to dress myself, except with assistance, and could only hobble about by using a cane. I had no appetite, and was assured, by the doctors, that I could not live. The pains, at times, were so awful, that I could procure relief only by means of hypodermic injections of morphine. I had my limbs bandaged in clay, in sulphur, in poultices; but these gave only temporary relief. After trying everything, and suffering the most awful tortures, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Inside of two months, I was able to walk without a cane. In three months, my limbs began to strengthen, and in the course of a year, I was cured. My weight has increased to 165 pounds, and I am now able to do my full day's work as a railroad blacksmith."

SHEEP IN THE SPRING.

Tagging Is the First Important Work to Be Performed.

The "keep" of sheep the preceding season tells whether they will be kept at a profit or loss during the latter season. Sheep that have been carelessly or poorly wintered come into the spring in poor condition and it will take all of the spring season to regain what we have lost; consequently sheep poorly wintered will be a loss through the spring months.

Sheep are inclined to scour when turned on fresh grass, so the first thing to do is to tag, and the ewes should be tagged before lambing time, at least two weeks. The wool should be cut clean, so that the droppings will not touch it. This is hard to do with the sheep lying on the floor or bench. We have constructed a bench (see cut), so that the holder can set the sheep with rump on the bench at 2, the holder sitting back on the bench at 3, with his feet on the rung 4, holding the sheep by the hind legs, so that it is in about the same position as if it was standing up. In this position we can tag them perfectly. We have a basket setting under the end of the bench at 2, to catch the wool. The other end of the bench can be fixed the same, so it will accommodate two taggers.

When turning out on grass we give our sheep a full feed of hay in the morning until they get used to the grass. Turn them on the grass for a few hours the first day, and so on for a few days, not giving them any salt to speak of, and they will soon go wholly on the grass and not scour much. The principal care for the rest of the season is watching them to keep them clean. By so doing we outgeneral the flies and maggots.—Ohio Farmer.

The old man who looks out at the world with clear and healthy eyes cannot help feeling great gratification at the thought that his children have inherited from him no whakness or tendency to disease. The healthy old man is the man who has throughout life kept his digestion good and his blood pure. No one in a thousand does it. Germs go through the healthy body without effect. Let them once find lodgment or let them find a weak spot, they will develop by the million and the blood will be full of them. Instead of giving strength to the tissues, it will force upon them in nutritious matter and the man will lose flesh and the more susceptible he is to disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the only medicine that absolutely and infallibly cures all blood diseases: and all disease are blood diseases. It isn't a medicine for some one particular so-called disease. It is a medicine for the whole body. It forces out all the germs of disease, and replaces impurities with rich, red blood.

GENERAL NOTES FROM OTTAWA.

Ottawa, April 28.—(Special.)—Col. Tilton, chairman of the Bisley Building Committee of the D. R. A., has been notified of the safe arrival in England of Major Perley, who has taken up his residence at Bisley in order to superintend the erection of the Canadian building. Sir Henry Fletcher, chairman of the National Rifle Association, turned the first sod. The association is rendering Major Perley invaluable assistance, and a portion of the foundation will, it is expected, be in by the end of the week. The site given by the National Rifle Association is not surpassed by any other on the range, and the building, when finished, will be a credit to Canada and an excellent model for the other colonies.

The Department of Militia recognizes the force of the objection that the rule laid down for the selection of men for the Jubilee Battalion that they must have certificates of qualification from one of the military schools of instruction cannot be carried out. Had it been insisted upon it is certain that the best men could not have been chosen. Commanding officers of the different corps asked to furnish men have now been notified that the order is withdrawn, and they can use their own discretion in the matter.

There is sad news for the mayors of leading Canadian cities who expect knighthood on the occasion of the Queen's Jubilee. It is authoritatively announced that no honors of this class are to be conferred. A difficulty would arise in making a selection. Supposing the Mayors of Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa were chosen, why should His Worship of Hamilton be overlooked and Halifax and St. John and Winnipeg and Victoria, and so on? It is felt, under the circumstances, that the best plan to avoid jealousy will be to confer a title on no chief magistrates. Consequently this intimation is made now, so that the expectant ones may not be disappointed when they take up their favorite family journal on the morning of June 22.

Tariff delegations are flocking to Ottawa to secure, if possible, modifications in the resolutions as they pass through committee. Representatives of the Montreal Rolling Mills were here to-day kicking against the tariff schedules, while tobacco manufacturers from all over the country are here to urge more favorable consideration to their position.

Dr. Bradley, Chief of The Hansard Staff, secured judgment in the Exchequer Court to-day on nearly every point in his suit against the Crown for the balance of the money due on account of reporting the Prohibition Commission.

Mr. Richardson gives notice of a bill respecting the attachment of the salaries of Dominion employes. The bill will provide for salaries of civil servants being garnished in the same way as the salaries of other employes.

Mr. Davin gives notice of four amendments to the motion to go into Committee of Supply: (1) That consistency and policy and good faith with the western farmer alike demand that the cheaper cottons shall be placed on the free list; (2) that agricultural implements be placed on the free list; (3) that coal oil, "a necessary of life," be placed on the free list; (4) that sawn boards, planks, deals or other lumber, undressed or dressed on one side only, be placed on the free list.

Mr. A. D. Hardy, brother of the Premier of Ontario, has been appointed County Judge of Brant, in the room and stead of Judge Jones, who retires.

Mr. Charles Moss, Q. C., of Toronto, has been appointed to the vacancy in the Ontario Court of Appeals, caused by the retirement of Chief Justice Hagarty.

Premier Greenway is in town on immigration business. There is also an outstanding claim which Manitoba has against the Dominion, and which Mr. Greenway may look into before he returns. He says that the Dominion Government will carry both seats in Manitoba to morrow.

An Opposition caucus is to be held to-morrow. It is said that the meeting is to consider the course the Conservatives should pursue in regard to the tariff. The general feeling now is that the best policy of the Opposition would be to look for prorogation as early as possible. This being the talk, the probability is that Parliament will be prorogued about the middle of June.

Rev. Mr. Winter of the West End Methodist Church is a redhot opponent of Sunday cars. Preaching yesterday, he stated that he had little sympathy with strikes, but he sincerely hoped every railway employe and other person forced to work on Sunday would go out on strike to have the day observed as a day of rest. He would recognize, he said, no necessity for people using the cars on Sunday.

The Plum in Japan.

The plum represents the highest type of fruits in Japan. Nevertheless the fruit of the plum tree is of secondary importance. The flowers are considered much more choice. In the blossoming season owners of trees break off large branches that are loaded with blossoms and carry them to market. The flowers bring a much higher price than a smaller branch laden with ripe fruit. The bulbs of the tiger lily are an article of food in that country also, and are extensively grown for that purpose. The flower stalks are pinched out and the second year the bulbs are dug for the market. They are cooked in sugar, and are said to be not disagreeable to the palate. The root stalks of a species of nelumbium (water lily) and also its seeds are much prized for food, the former are cut in slices and boiled till very tender. Our common burdock, by a process of cultivation akin to that which has put a head on the cabbage plant, attains the dignity of a garden vegetable among the Japanese and is as standard as our potato. The root has been cultivated till it is like a parsnip, and is raised from seed as an annual.

Madrid, April 28.—A despatch to The Heraldo from Manilla, capital of the Philippine Islands, says that 25,000 insurgents who have not submitted to the Spaniards have taken up a position in the mountains and are offering a stout resistance to the troops. The recall of Capt.-Gen. Polavieja, it is added, has produced a bad impression in the Philippine Islands.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT!

The Mason & Risch Piano Co. L'td.

Beg to announce that they have assumed the Agency for Central and Western Ontario of the Pianos manufactured by Chickering & Sons, Boston.

It would be superfluous to make extended reference to the reputation of this famous house, or to the pianofortes manufactured by them. It is sufficient to say that for three quarters of a century they have occupied the position of absolute leaders in Musical Art manufacture, and their reputation was at no time greater than it is at present.

INTENDING PURCHASERS OF PIANO

Now have the choice in our warerooms of goods manufactured by the acknowledged leaders of the American and Canadian trade. The association of such Instruments as Chickering & Sons and Mason & Risch Pianos beneath one roof forms a unique combination.

AS TO PRICES!

Pianos of high artistic merit must of necessity cost more than poorer instruments, but there is no question of the direction in which true economy lies. As an evidence of this it may be mentioned that the first Piano manufactured by Chickering & Sons 73 ago is still in an excellent state of preservation, and Pianos made by Mason & Risch over 20 years ago scarcely show any sign of wear. Write for Catalogues.

Life is a battle field. Every day brings its fierce, unceasing conflict; every night leaves its multitudes of dead and dying. The horrors of war are no greater than the horrors of disease. If all the nations of the earth were at war against each other there would be no such carnage wrought within the year as that which is accomplished annually by one dread disease—consumption.

And yet this most fatal of all diseases is not without its remedy. It is no longer the irresistible destroyer that it was considered thirty years ago. An entirely new aspect is put upon the possibilities of this dreadful malady by the astounding remedial action of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which cures consumption by nourishing the lungs with an abundant supply of pure, highly-vitalized blood.

This stops the formation of tuberculous matter, and builds up fresh tissue, muscular flesh and vital energy. It gives digestive power to the stomach which is too weak to assimilate oily emulsions.

Miss Lucy Kloeffler, of Armada, Mich., writes: "When I was about eight years of age I had inflammation of the lungs, and from that time up I was sick nearly all the time and had a doctor nearly all the time. I would take cold so easily it would go right to my lungs. At the age of nineteen I was very bad: there was pain in my lungs, tickling in my throat and my throat was studded with ulcers; there was hoarseness and partial suppression of voice, and difficulty of breathing. I doctored with one of our best physicians and he said he could not help me and just prescribed cod liver oil and told my mother I could not live longer than three months. I kept getting weaker every day, when at last a friend asked me why I did not try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I thought there was no use, no more help for me as consumption was in our family. My father and also my sister died with it; but after taking the first bottle I seemed to feel better. My appetite was better and I kept right on taking it, with a bottle of the 'Pellets' once in a while, until I felt quite well. Before taking it, I weighed one hundred and ten pounds, after taking it, one hundred and thirty. I have not had a cough this winter."

THE LITTLE WIDOW.

She is cunning, sometimes witty;
Free and easy, but not bold;
Like an apple, ripe and mellow—
Not too young and not too old;
Half inviting, half repellant,
Now advancing and now shy;
There is mischief in her laughter,
There is danger in her eye.

She has studied human nature,
She is schooled in every art;
She has taken her diploma
As the mistress of the heart!
She can tell the very moment
When to sigh and when to smile.
Oh, a maid is sometimes charming,
But a widow all the while!

Ah! "old fossils," nearly fifty,
Who are plotting, deep and wise;
Ye "Adonises" of twenty
With the love light in your eyes!
You may practice all the lessons
Taught by Cupid since the fall,
But I know a little widow
Who can win and fool you all.

A SISTER.

Army wives generally have unmarried sisters. These sisters always come out to visit them, and the rest goes by itself.

Mrs. Lorrilard had an unmarried elder. She was very attractive. She was far more attractive than ever Mrs. Lorrilard ever could have been. The girl's name was Spencer—May Spencer. She was 18 years old, if you took her word for it; and she was blonde and pink and white and pump. She came from some place in Ohio, and she visited the Lorrilards at Stanton, which is in New Mexico, 100 miles from the railroad, across Dead Man's Valley (there is always a Dead Man's valley) and some steep hills, and a lava bed a mile wide. If you have never seen a lava bed you cannot appreciate that. You might try to imagine the ocean lashed into a fury by a simoon, then fancy its great billows and swells changed suddenly to dark gray-brown stone at the height of the storm, and you may form a vague idea of what the lava bed between Fort Stanton and the railroad is like.

It frightened Miss Spencer badly. The ambulance went slipping and sliding and coasting and thumping and bounding over the one passable part, in the way that only an ambulance conducted by a driver who has spent his life on Arizona and New Mexico roads could possibly stand. It put all the laws of centripetal force and of equilibrium at naught. It and the four mules were laws unto themselves.

Miss Spencer was not accustomed to that sort of thing. She stood it as long as she could, and then she told Maj. Roche—in whose charge she was traveling—that she meant to get out and walk. She had bothered the major a good deal already, and he was getting tired, so he did not say anything, but simply told the driver to "slow up" and let Miss Spencer get out by herself.

She fell behind after a moment and the ambulance went relentlessly on, creaking, flapping its canvas, clanking its chains, its brake screeching shrilly. And as it disappeared, sometimes lost to sight in a great hollow, sometimes toiling up a smooth face of lava, Miss Spencer felt herself abandoned, indeed, in a New Mexico desert under that terrible midsummer sun. The heat was fiery, scorching, parching. The sky was like hot blue glass. She wondered why, when the lava was hot enough to burn her feet through the soles of her shoes, it did not melt or grow soft. She kept on walking because she was afraid to stop. Twice she slipped and fell and cut her hands. Under the porous, piled-up rock, rabbits and owls and quail were hidden; there were snakes, too, and lizards. At first she was frightened, when they scurried by her, but soon, with her head ringing and her eyes dazed with congested blood and her mouth open and as dry as flour, she did not even notice them.

She reached the end of the huge rock river at last and found the ambulance waiting. The driver was asleep, and the major was drinking beer. He offered her some, and when she had drunk it she held out her broad little foot.

"My shoes are all cut to pieces, and they were new and awfully heavy."

"You should have kept still," he answered.

Now, Miss Spencer wanted sympathy, and when she didn't get it she took a dislike to the major; and because she disliked him, she eventually made him sorry.

For the first fortnight of her visit she was not pretty. She was sunburned from her passage of the lava sea. Her face was red and swollen, then blotchy and lastly peely. After that she returned to the normal pink and white. She was the only girl at the post, and there was a bachelor, a brevet bachelor, a young contract surgeon, and Maj. Roche's son. The bachelor officer was studious—the kind that have much faith and think that the great fathers in Washington will reward lieutenants who pass high exams. and have ideas on Indians. He had no time for young women. He paid his one call and retired. The brevet bachelor is peculiar to the service. His wife is back east visiting her family. He differs from the real article only in that he is ineligible. He was devoted to Miss Spencer, but he did not count. There was also the contract surgeon. Of course, he was only the contract surgeon. Still, he was tall and blonde, and had a beguiling southern drawl. He fell in love with Miss Spencer.

But the exciting part of the story hinges on Maj. Roche's son. He was 20, but he was of no use on earth. He was just a boy and never would be anything more. He had failed in everything he had ever undertaken. He couldn't even dance, and he was afraid of a three-foot acequia when he rode. He depended on his papa for everything, and he thought he knew women through and through. Providence sent Miss Spencer to show him that he didn't—but the ways of Providence are inscrutable, and I can't be sure.

Well, the contract surgeon fell in love with Miss Spencer, but, like Viola, he never told his love. Now, as the bachelor was hidden, Miss Spencer couldn't fall in love with him, and no one could have fallen in love with Teddy Roche, so she reciprocated the contract surgeon's passion.

His name was Randolph—Curtis Randolph, to match his nice blue eyes and his charming drawl. His courtship was of the eternally-on-hand sort. The life of a garrison offers even greater advantages for this than that of a southern town. He was with Miss Spencer from guard mounting until long after taps. But Miss Spencer pined to see more of him.

"Mr. Randolph, I believe you're lazy!"

"Oh, now—Miss May—why? That isn't kind." He gazed at the flag on the flagstaff tenderly, and dwelt musically on each word.

"Because."

"It is the privilege of a lady to give that reason." His eyes sought the tennis court in tender, blue abstractedness.

"Well, I know you are."

"Won't you have pity on me, and tell me why?"

"Because you never are up until almost guard mount."

"Oh! deah, yes I am. I go over to the hospital at sick call, you know."

"Why don't I ever see you, then?"

"Perhaps you haven't risen yourself."

"I'm always up at reveille."

"No! Goodness; why do you do that?"

"I believe you go over to the hospital the back way and aren't half awake and don't even have a collar on."

"Now, Miss May—how unkind."

"Isn't it true?"

"I always have my collar on." He told a future truth. After this he would wear a collar.

"I hate lasy people."

"Oh, Miss May—how unkind. You don't hate me, I hope?" His eyes were on the pink ribbon that fluttered from her belt; he took hold of it and wound it around his finger, getting gradually nearer to her.

"I do, if you are lasy."

"How can I prove to you that I am not?"

"That's easy enough."

"Do tell me how."

"Just prove it."

"By rising early and letting you see me?"

"Well—yes."

"I shall do so to-morrow."

"But I always go for a ride before breakfast."

"May I not join you?"

"If you like. I don't care." Which is feminine for caring very much indeed.

So Dr. Randolph rode with Miss Spencer the next morning, and he breakfasted in the Lorrilards', and he sat on the Lorrilards' porch, to watch guard mounting, and then he played tennis with Miss Spencer, and when it was too late to do that any longer they sat on the porch again, shaded by the crowsfoot and morning glory vines, and read aloud by turns. They parted for luncheon, but immediately afterward they went again in the Lorrilards' sitting-room to practice the mandolin and guitar. Randolph dined with the Lorrilards', and then he and Miss Spencer walked up and down the line until taps, and after taps they sat on the porch once more and talked in undertones.

Occasionally the Roche boy made a third, and, though he was far from welcome, he never guessed it.

Now, it may seem incredible, but it is true, that though this went on without a pause for ten solid months, Randolph still modestly doubted if he were loved, and dared not voice his passion. Mrs. Lorrilard began to think that she had done quite all the family could expect of her, and she grew hopeless and weary, moreover, of boarding free two hungry young people. She told Miss Spencer as gently as possible that she might go the next time the ambulance went over to Carthage, which was the railroad station. Miss Spencer told Randolph she was going—and wept. And Randolph consoled her from afar, and actually thought she was weeping at leaving her little nephew and niece and her sister. There are men like that.

The ambulance went a week later to carry Maj. Roche and Teddy Roche to the railroad. Teddy was offered a position at Tuscon, and was going to take it; the major had government business at Carthage. The Carthage road is a branch; it joins the main line of the A.T. & S.F. at a station called San Antonio. The major would chaperon the young woman to Carthage; thence she would go to the main line and east, and Teddy to the main line and west. Only Teddy and May compromised. They both went to Socorro, which is on the main line a very little northeast of San Antonio.

The contract doctor and Miss Spencer had a harrowing parting. The latter lost her temper over her procrastination, and burst into tears. It nearly broke his heart and entirely silenced his tongue.

After she was gone, hopelessly gone, he determined to reveal the secret of his heart, by letter. But, being named Curtis Randolph, he put off doing it. Instead, he swung on his hammock all day, and thought of her blue eyes and pretty face and guileless smile, and regretted his erstwhile constant companion. The ambulance would return empty of its lovely load, in five days, he knew that. He would write when it returned.

So, on the afternoon of the fifth day, he sat, still swinging in the hammock and smoking a pipe, the ashes whereof besprinkled his coat, when the four mules and the ambulance rattled into the post. They stopped at the major's quarters in a cloud of dust, and two men and a woman alighted. There was no doubt about who the woman was. In his delight, Randolph lost his head. He strode down the broad walk to the Roches'.

Miss Spencer was still standing by the ambulance, hunting—with the driver's help—for something under one of the seats. The major and Teddy had gone indoors.

"Why, Miss May!" said Randolph, and this time there was no drawl—"how delightful! What brings you back?"

"Oh! my husband. Teddy and I got married in Socorro, and joined the dear old major again in Carthage the same day."

"How delightful," Randolph repeated weakly.

"Well, Teddy seemed to think so, but the dear, sweet old major didn't. Anyway, you know, he was so horrid about my shoes on the bad lands that day." She smiled demurely.

And that was all anyone ever knew about it.—Gwendolen Overton, in San Francisco Argonaut.

BUILT UP THE SYSTEM IN A WONDERFUL MANNER.

James A. Bell, of Beaverton, Ont., brother of the Rev. John Wesley Bell, B.D., prostrated by nervous headaches

A victim of the trouble for several years.

South American Nervine effected a complete cure.

In their own particular field few men are beter known than the Rev. John Wesley Bell, B.D., and his brother Mr. James A. Bell. The former will be recognised by his thousands of friends all over the country as the popular and able missionary superintendent of the Royal Templars of Temperance. Among the 20,000 members of this order in Ontario his counsel is sought on all sorts of occasions. On the public platform he is one of the strong men of the day, battling against the evils of intemperance. Equally well known is Mr. Bell in other provinces of the Dominion, having been for years a member of the Manitoba Methodist Conference and part of this time was stationed in Winnipeg. His brother, Mr. James A. Bell, is a highly respected resident of Beaverton, where his influence, though perhaps more circumscribed than that of his eminent brother, is none the less effective and productive of good. Of recent years, however, the working ability of Mr. James A. Bell has been sadly marred by severe attacks of nervous headache, accompanied by indigestion. Who can do fit work when this trouble takes hold of them and especially when it becomes chronic, as was, seemingly, the case with Mr. Bell? The trouble reached such intensity that last June he was completely prostrated. In this condition a friend recommended South American Nervine. Ready to try anything and everything, though he thought he had covered the list of proprietary medicines, he secured a bottle of this great discovery. A second bottle of the medicine was taken and the work was done. Employing his own language: "Two bottles of South American Nervine immediately relieved my headaches and have built up my system in a wonderful manner." Let us not deprecate the good our clergymen and social reformers are doing in the world, but how ill-fitted they would be for their work were it not the relief that South American Nervine brings to them when physical ills overtake them, and when the system, as a result of hard, earnest and continuous work, breaks down. Nervine treats the system as the wise reformer treats the evils he is battling against. It strikes at the root of the trouble. All disease comes from disorganisation of the nerve centers. This is a scientific fact. Nervine at once works on these nerve centers; gives to them health and vigor; and then there courses through the system strong, healthy, life-maintaining blood, and nervous troubles of every variety are things of the past.

A BIG STREET FIGHT IN THE TOWN COUNCIL.

explaining that the committee proposed the decoration of the town, and a parade of volunteers and societies, and asking the council to furnish a sum as an indemnity, which would be under the control of the town, he suggested that $300 or $400 would be sufficient. He hoped the council would do its part with other towns and cities of the Dominion as well as the Empire in becomingly celebrating the Diamond Jubilee.

Mr. Stevenson also put in a good word for Central Park, which should have at least $100 of the amount voted for the Jubilee Demonstration.

The matter was referred to the committee of the whole council to be called by the Mayor.

TREASURER'S SALARY INCREASED.

A bylaw was duly passed fixing the salary of the town treasurer at $500 per year—an increase from $300.

A by-law was duly passed amending the market bylaw, permitting the purchase of the whole carcase of a hog at any time.

A bylaw was passed authorizing the execution of contracts for street watering and dumping ground.

A motion was adopted authorizing the Market Committee to erect at once the extra stock pen on the market asked by Mr. Green, the market clerk—the expenditure to be limited to $40.

Mr. Dawson suggested that if Mr. Neill would not act as chairman of the Court of Revision, that a chairman be appointed and get the committee together so that applications for remission of taxes could be dealt with and Mr. Meldrum moved that if Mr. Neill failed to act on his return to town that the mayor be authorized to take action.

OPENING THE BALL.

Mr. Best remarked that there was complaint by persons of being discharged from the streets and outsiders employed.

Mr. McWilliams, chairman of the Street and Bridge Committee, said that he had found that there was only one man from Ashburnham and that was a deaf mute and he thought that it was a very small thing to object to such an unfortunate. His instructions to the inspector was to distribute the work as fairly as possible.

Mr. Best—What about Italians?

Mr. McWilliams—Italians who were ratepayers were as well entitled to work as any other ratepayers. In regard to the outside teams it was alleged were employed, he pointed out that one outside team was employed unwittingly but was allowed to go after drawing two or three loads of earth and another team that was objected to was now owned by a resident. He went on to point out that members of present Council should hesitate before they criticised so much. He invited the Council to look at the slop work on the George street bridge, at the cribbing at the goose pond, or at the Park street bridge, which though recently built, was in a bad condition. In regard to street work Mr. McWilliams showed that it was his policy not to grade streets till they were properly drained. He was in favor of giving Mr. Ranney fair play; though he was not Mr. McWilliams' choice, he having preferred Mr. Wade—he believed in giving him time to show what he could do. In order to test the sincerity of those members of the Council who pretended to have such an interest in the workingman, Mr. McWilliams would move the following resolution :—

Moved by Mr. McWilliams, seconded by Mr. White, that labourers employed by the Corporation and capable of doing a good day's work, receive $1.25 per day in future, and that the services of those who are not capable of doing the required work be dispensed with or they be employed at what the inspector considers reasonable pay for the work done; wages to be graded from 75c. to $1.25.

In regard to the matter of $1.25 per day to competent workmen, Mr. McWilliams said he had proposed $1.25 in the committee, but was not sustained in this demand; but he had, in compliance with his promise given the men $1.25 on his own responsibility and submitted the motion for adoption and in confirmation of his course.

At the time of his election he (Mr. McWilliams) had promised to give men employed on the town work $1.25 a day, and on that platform had been elected by the largest majority ever given in the ward or town, and the motion was a fulfilment of his promise.

Mr. Deane pointed out that he had as chairman of the Finance Committee refused to sign cheques for men and teams that were at different figures for a day's work.

Mr. McWilliams explained that from a discussion that took place in the committee Mr. Ranney understood that teams getting $3.00 were to be reduced, and he had accordingly reduced the pay of some of the teams.

Mr. Best inquired as to the novelty of the employment of a foreman and timekeeper.

Mr. McWilliams said it was understood that there was to be a foreman. A time-keeper was temporarily employed when there were fifty or sixty men employed on the streets, too many for Mr. Ranney to personally look after. He was only employed for a few days and Mr. Ranney's time was certainly more valuable than a time-keeper to take the men's time, who, when he was not thus employed was at work like the other men. In regard to the complaint that men who were supposed to be working were idling on the streets, Mr. McWilliams said that might apply to men trained under the late inspector, who then were not kept to their work. As to the teams being idle, he explained that when teams came to work in the morning or at one o'clock it was inevitable that some should be kept waiting a little till the wagons were filled. Mr. Ranney had used good judgment in handling the forces working on the streets. As to the charge of so much money being spent, Mr. McWilliams pointed out that their was more ground to cover this year a large amount of earth to remove and necessary water tabling had been done, work that had heretofore been neglected at great loss to the town through bad drainage and consequent injury to the streets, which, therefore needed more repair. The inefficient and comparatively useless culverts that had been put in were condemned. As to the way the work was done, Mr. Hazlitt, who had been perhaps the largest employer of labour in town, and Mr. Wade with a somewhat similar experience, said that they never saw men working better than they had done on the streets this year.

A FEW FIGURES.

Here Mr. McWilliams went into figures to show that in previous years more money had been spent on the streets. In 1894, under Mr. Best's supervision, in the first four months of the year there had been spent $6,399; in 1895 the sum for the same period was $9,893, and in 1896 the expenditure for the first four months was $4,544. This year the expenditure had been for the first four months $4,697. That however included a payment for 638 cords of stone at $1.75, which amounted to $1,151.50. There had been paid for breaking stone $1,376 50, making a total in round numbers of $2,528. Deducting this sum from the total expenditure this year so far; we had $2,169, as the sum that corresponded to the expenditure of last year, which was for the first four months. $4 544, a difference in favour of this year of $2,435, and this, in addition to giving credit to last year for 1432 cords of stone, which Mr. Best claimed had been used for back filling for the George street bridge piers. Mr. McWilliams failed to see how this great quantity of stone could have been used for that purpose. Mr. McWilliam's concluded his remarks by again expressing his policy of giving employment to taxpayers—Cheers.

Mr. Best briefly defended the past administration of the streets and explained that the council of 1895 had assumed the responsibility of the council of '93 in the matter of stone.

Mr. Meldrum was glad the matter had been brought up by Mr. McWilliams. Its ventilation would have a good effect. If the councillors who seemed to be antagonistic to the street inspector were as loyal to him as they were anxious to find fault, he would be helped in the discharge of his duties. He approved of Mr. Ranney's employment of an interim timekeeper. He (Mr. Meldrum) had heard men say that men had never been handled as well as they had been on the streets this year.

Mr. Robertson defended the employment of a foreman as a necessity, where large numbers of men were employed at different points. He was necessary in the absence of the inspector. Whenever men were employed in other works in large numbers it was the rule to have a gang boss.

Mr. Dawson objected to the foreman and to Mr. McWilliams acting independently of the committee. He (Mr. Dawson) was the first to advocate nine hours a day for the corporation workingmen. We had not had a foreman before.

Mr. McWilliams contended that it had been the custom to employ a foreman. In regard to acting independently of the committee, he said he had found it exceedingly hard to get the committee together, and in case of emergency he had to act by himself when he could not get a meeting of the committee.

Mr. Davis said in his private affairs he believed in paying good wages, and the same should apply to corporation working men. He thought that the friction might be overcome by the council as a body loyally supporting the inspector.

The motion was carried.

After some informal discussion regarding the riding of bicycles on sidewalks and one or two other matters, the council adjourned at a quarter to 12 o'clock.

ECZEMA TEN YEARS

Suffered Untold Agonies. Limbs Swollen so Could Not Get About.

Ablest Physicians Signally Failed. Was Absolutely Disheartened. Had Lost All Hope.

Gave CUTICURA a Trial Which Resulted in Absolute and Perfect Cure.

For ten years I suffered untold agonies from that dread disease Eczema, my lower limbs most of the time being so swollen and broken out that I could hardly go about. I had to wear slippers so that I could move about at all. My brother, a physician of thirty years' practice and extensive experience, had tried in vain to effect a cure and signally failed. I tried other physicians of splendid ability with like results, and had reached that point where I became absolutely disheartened, and in fact had lost all hope, when a friend (after long and continued persuasion) succeeded in inducing me to at least give Cuticura Remedies a trial. I shall never regret that I did so, and until my dying day I shall sing the praises of them. I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura (ointment), and it resulted in an absolute and permanent cure. I feel that I owe suffering humanity the debt of at least, in my feeble way, calling their attention to my case and absolute cure. I am now, I feel, perfectly cured, sound as a dollar, and the sweets of life are still mine, thank God, and to Cuticura Remedies I attribute my almost miraculous cure. I refer all interested to the Postmaster of this place, any of the ministers, the prominent business men, and all of the citizens of our vicinity indiscriminately, and especially to my friend, John A. B. Shippey, attorney at law, who succeeded in persuading me to give Cuticura Remedies a trial. With profound gratitude, I remain your most enthusiastic admirer, DAVID M. SAPP, Plymouth, Ill.

SAVED HER DRUNKEN HUSBAND.

She Finally Administered a Remedy Without His Knowledge and Cured Him.

A correspondent writes :—"I had once a happy home and a noble, big-hearted husband till he took to drinking, first through sociability, then because the fiendish desire would come over him, craving him for drink.

"I was heart-broken. My happy home was fast becoming one of misery till a friend told me to try a liquor cure called Anti Booze. I was willing to do anything, so I sent $1.00, as she suggested, to the Oriental Chemical Co., 20 St. Alexis street, Montreal, and by return mail, I received in a plain wrapper a little box of pills. I put one of these in his coffee every night and morning without him knowing it, (as they dissolve immediately), and in less than a week, to my delight, he stopped drinking entirely.

"Anti Booze has changed my drunken husband into a sober, industrious, happy man, and I feel it my duty to tell others about it. They will send full information without charges to any who will write them.

STONY LAKE.

From our own Correspondent.

The ice all went out of the lake on the 23rd inst.

Owing to the recent cold weather and hard frosts, the farmers are just commencing seeding. Yesterday was the first day that looked like spring in the fields.

Mr. James Miles is going to put up a new house this summer; he has been preparing for it the last three years, but he is going to put the cap sheaf on this year.

John Newall has all things ready to start with Fowlds Bro's drive of logs on the 26th instant. John is a good driver.

Mrs. S. Seaforth, suffered for years with what is called old people's rash. She was treated by many physicians without any result. Mr. Fear, the local druggist, recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment, which relieved the irritation at once and speedily effected a permanent cure of the skin eruption. Mrs. James also says Dr. Chase's Ointment cured her of itching piles which she has been troubled with for years.

Have You Ordered Your Awnings for Spring?

If not, I will be pleased to take your order now and have it ready to place in position as soon as you want it. I am also ready to start making tents, sails and all such work. For wet weather I can supply the best waterproof horse covers, lap rugs and oiled goods at lowest prices. Alf. Kingscott, Water street, opposite the market. dw

DISASTROUS DEFEAT.

The Greek Army in Epirus Suffers a Serious Rout.

TURKS CAME UPON THEM UNAWARES

A Desperate Hand-to-Hand Fight in Which the Ragged Cut and Hungry Greek Troops Were Badly Beaten—No Improvement in the Situation at Athens.

London, April 28.—A despatch to The Daily Mail, from Patras, dated Tuesday evening, says:

"The Greeks have suffered their first great reverse in Epirus, and the situation has changed with startling suddenness. When I last telegraphed the Turks were in full and disorderly retreat towards Janina and the Greeks were joyously advancing. For some unaccountable reason the absurdly inadequate force of only 1000 men was detached from Fillipiada to seize Pentepigbadia. On entering Pentepigadia some irregulars by mistake fired upon the Greeks. During the confusion which followed 3000 Turkish infantry arrived from Janina and instantly attacked the Greeks. A desperate and bloody hand-to-hand encounter ensued. The Turks uttered demoniacal yells and showed the greatest ferocity; while the Greeks, who had been without food all night long and were terribly outnumbered, were taken at considerable disadvantage.

"An hour after the fight began two companies of Turks occupied a hill on the Greek flank and opened a deadly fire. The Greeks broke in confusion and fled in hideous panic. With the greatest difficulty their officers rallied them and led them back to the front, where they renewed the battle against overpowering odds.

"Major Commundaro commanded them. All day he fought in the front line. Two horses were shot under him and he was twice wounded, but he seemed to bear a charmed life. A Greek lieutenant, an Italian volunteer and five privates rushed upon the Turks. Five of the seven dropped dead before they got anywhere near the enemy, and the sixth was wounded. Another private, when the Greeks fled, fought the Turks from behind a rock for five hours until he was killed.

"At 7 o'clock in the evening the Greek ammunition failed. The men were faint from want of food and the retreat was sounded.

"A second Greek force of infantry, cavalry and field artillery, advancing by another road, arrived an hour too late. This also retreated in great disorder.

"The Turks now hold Pentepigadia, which might, however, be attacked by artillery. The Greeks are greatly depressed and discouraged.

"The retreat is much discussed here and no one can explain it except upon the hypothesis that there was a risk of the Turks disembarking a force at Prevesa and so cutting off our escape. The Greeks have suffered a reverse, but Greek honor is not lost."

Larissa Given Over to Pillage.

London, April 28.—A despatch to The Times from Larissa, dated Monday, says:

According to the inhabitants left behind, the town was given over to pillage three days before the Turkish occupation. The pillagers were a mixed rabble of disbanded Greek soldiers, thieves and revolutionary members of the Ethnike Hetaria. These desperadoes also fought furiously among themselves and outraged women.

The Crown Prince Constantine was the last man to leave Larissa by the Sunday morning train.

Grumbkoff Pasha has started to return to Constantinople.

Again No Quorum.

Athens, April 28, midnight.—The Legislative Assembly met again this evening. Ninety-five deputies were present. As a quorum is 104, another adjournment was necessary. The adjournment was followed by considerable excitement and cries of disapproval from the gallery. It is rumored that the Greeks are still fighting in front of Pentepigadia.

Peace All is Over.

London, April 28.—Mr Henry Norman, The Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Athens, will say to-morrow:

All reports from the army at Pharsala are most discouraging. A strong man might perhaps succeed in galvanizing the nation into activity for a supreme effort, but unless such a man is forthcoming, I am afraid all is over."

THE PEOPLE DISSATISFIED.

Opposition Leader Raili Tells King George What He Thinks—Disorderly Conference.

Athens, April 28.—Former Minister Raili told the King this morning that the Ministry no longer enjoyed the confidence of the people or of the Legislative Assembly.

King George replied: "If this is true, why do you not summon Parliament and elicit an expression of opinion in that way?"

M. Raili and the Opposition seem determined not to accept the responsibility of office. On the other hand the Chamber will hardly vote confidence in the existing Government.

To-day (Tuesday) numerous disorderly outbreaks occurred at Piraeus (the port of Athens). The people invaded the cafes and smashed the portraits of the King.

A crisis in the Ministry of Marine has been caused by the receipt of a telegram from an officer with the eastern squadron, saying: "During the four days our fleet has spent at Skiathos we have been betrayed."

Hard on Constantine.

Paris, April 28.—The Matin to-day declares that the supersession of Prince Constantine, if made by a Royal decree, is equivalent to his renunciation of his rights to the crown. The Matin asserts that the replacing of the Premier, M. Delyannis, by M. Raili, the Opposition leader, will not serve to arrest the course of popular indignation against the Royal family, adding that the Ministerial crisis, therefore, only precedes a dynastic crisis by a few days.

King George is credited with desiring to abdicate in favor of his second son, Prince George.

The Panic at Tyrnavo.

London, April 28.—The Times this morning prints the following from its correspondent at Volo:

After comparing many conflicting accounts of the panic at Tyrnavo, I believe the following to be substantially correct:.

About sunset it was observed at the point selected for the headquarters for the Greek staff that the right wing was being turned by the Turkish cavalry. Accordingly orders were issued that as soon as it became dark the force should retire on Larissa. At the same time this intelligence was transmitted by flash signals to the Greek troops on the heights beyond in order that they might take the necessary steps for their own safety.

These orders reached the first line about 8.30, and the movement to retire began immediately. The men were tired out and hungry and sullen, having been kept all day under artillery fire without the excitement of real fighting. Those who have experienced real warfare know how raw troops under such circumstances are apt to lose cohesion and discipline and how, as the result of some little accident an orderly retreat may degenerate into a disorderly stampede.

In this case the accident seems to have been the flash signals on the heights, which were interpreted to mean that those positions were being taken by the Turks. Simultaneously the cry was raised, nobody knows how, that the Turkish cavalry was advancing. In the darkness it was impossible to distinguish friend from foe. The first fugitives from the front arrived at Larissa about 1 a.m., when everybody was in bed. The news spread like wildfire and soon the whole town was in movement, everybody packing his goods and chattels, and preparing to flee from the doomed city, which, once delivered into their hands, would speedily be sacked by the blood-thirsty Bashi Bazouks.

A Greek Defeat.

Constantinople, April 28.—An official despatch received here from Salonica says that in an engagement at Lostakia the Greeks were compelled to retreat with a loss of 400 killed and many wounded.

The report of the bombardment of Karaburun is denied in this despatch. It is explained that the Greek fleet manoeuvred in the vicinity of Karaburun, but did not fire upon that place.

ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE.

Opposition Deputies of the Greek Chamber Call for Maintenance of Order.

Athens, April 28.—The Opposition deputies have issued the following address to the people:

"Fellow-citizens: In the critical period through which the country is passing, the summoning of the Chamber is considered necessary. The Opposition believes it to be its duty to address to all citizens a recommendation and a request to do all in their power to contribute to the maintenance of order, which is indispensable, not only for the safety of all, but because it constitutes an indispensable element for safeguarding the honor and rights of the nation.

"Let us not forget that the enemy is treading the soil of our country and that our army is confronting it. At such a moment anyone attempting to disturb order would be nothing but an ally of the Turks."

This address is signed by all the Opposition deputies now in Athens.

Special trains have been placed at the disposal of the Provincial deputies, in order to enable them to arrive in time to take part in the extraordinary session of the Legislative Assembly.

The French Minister here, M. F. A. Boutree, has telegraphed for the French warship Latouche Treville to return immediately to the Piraeus.

The merchants on Hermes-st. have organized a private guard to protect their stores and patrols have been placed in the streets near the bourse and telegraph office.

The address of the Opposition deputies had a calming effect upon the people. A better feeling now prevails here and there is little probability now of a dynastic crisis.

Turks Welcomed at Larissa.

London, April 28.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Larissa, by way of Elassona, dated Sunday evening, eulogizes Edhem Pasha's conduct of the campaign. The correspondent says: "We first drove back the Greeks by correct and patient strategy, without hurry and without loss, and then we crowned our General's cautious moves by a bold, irresistible blow. The greater part of the Greeks had taken to wild, disorderly flight before the Turks arrived. There was literally no limit to the Greek disaster.

"The Crown Prince Constantine fled yesterday (Saturday) afternoon in the utmost fear of capture by the Turkish cavalry. According to all accounts they were close at his heels. Only another hour or two and Edhem Pasha might have brought off his greatest coup.

"The Greeks and the Turks fraternize. In a word, the Turkish army entered the town in the guise of friends rather than of conquerors. Turkish sentinels are placed at the corner of every street, but this was really unnecessary. Greeks and non-combatant refugees were not molested, and when they discovered this they began to promenade the streets freely. When the main body of Turkish troops entered the inhabitants received them with the wildest joy, with salutes, embraces and kisses. I myself was kissed on both cheeks, dragged to a cafe and compelled to drink because I wore a fez.

"This apparent anomaly is explained by the fact that the arrival of the Turks was the home-coming of many who had been driven away by the Greeks a month ago and who had gone to Salonica and there volunteered to fight under the Turkish flag. As illustrating the moderation and discipline displayed by the Turks I can truthfully say that an ordinary crowd of Englishmen on Derby Day is much more difficult to restrain."

Attack on the Greeks.

London, April 28.—A special despatch from Volo, the port of Thessaly, announces that the Turkish advance forces have attacked the Greeks at Velestino, about eight miles west of Volo and on the railroad connecting the latter place with Larissa and Pharsalas. The Turks, however, the despatch says, were repulsed with heavy losses and driven back as far as Tehortis.

General Smolenski, on hearing of the attack upon Velestino, made a sortie from Pharsalas in order to suppor the Greek force at Velestino.

Macedonians are Restless.

Sofia, April 28.—A large open air meeting of Macedonians was held here yesterday morning, at which many Bulgarians were present. The speakers denounced the policy of the Government and accused Prince Ferdinand of culpable inactivity. They declared that the present Russophile policy of Bulgaria could do nothing but work injury to the country. The crowd undertook to get up a demonstration in honor of the Greek diplomatic agent, but the police interfered.

IN THE RED CHAMBER.

Sir Oliver Mowat Asks for Reprinting of His Bill Concerning the Criminal Code—British Japanese Treaty.

Ottawa, April 28.—(Special.)—In the Senate to-day Sir Oliver Mowat moved the second reading of the bill to amend the Criminal Code, and asked consent to have the bill reprinted, with marginal notes explaining the effect of the clauses amending the law as it now stands. His reason for doing this was that some of the proposed amendments had been misunderstood. Marginal notes would explain the scope and intent of the amendments proposed.

Mr. Power thought a new clause should be added to the bill, making it a criminal offence for persons who obtained a divorce in the United States, which were not recognized in Canada, and re-married in that country, returning to this country and living in a state of adultery. A bill of this kind had been introduced into Parliament some time ago, but had been abandoned. This glaring omission in our criminal law, he thought, should be remedied at once.

Sir Oliver Mowat said that the matter had been brought to the attention of the Government. There was, however, some doubt as to the jurisdiction of the Canadian Parliament in constituting an act performed in a foreign country, where it was not criminal, a crime in Canada, even though under our laws such an act, if committed in the Dominion, would come under the criminal law relating to bigamy. Should, however, any person in Canada leave this country for the purpose of securing such a divorce, re-marry, and then return to Canada they would be liable under our laws. He was not prepared to draft such a clause as that suggested by Senator Power.

Senator Boulton thought that the ban of illegitimacy on the issue of such a couple was sufficient punishment.

A bill for the relief of Adeline Myrtle Tuckett Awrey of Hamilton was read a second time.

Senator Boulton gave notice that he intended to ask the Government if the date on which notice is required under the terms of the treaty negotiated between Great Britain and Japan in 1894 had elapsed, and if not whether it is the intention of the Government to be included in the most favored nation treaty.

RED RIVER FLOOD.

No Danger at Winnipeg and Signs of Recession at Emerson and Morris—The Bye-Elections.

Winnipeg, April 28.—(Special.)—The water of the Red River at Winnipeg has now been stationary for two days, and to-night shows a tendency to fall. There is no further anxiety of a flood. At Morris the water is stationary, and at Emerson and other points is receding. At Morris and Emerson, where the flood was the worst, there will be serious loss, but the flood-bound settlers have suffered a good deal of hardship.

The majority for Jameson, the Government candidate, in Winnipeg, is 1107. Mr. Taylor, the independent candidate, saved his deposit by 50 votes.

The majority for Rutherford, the Government candidate in Macdonald, is about 800, with returns as yet incomplete.

Mr. Jameson leaves for Ottawa on Saturday, and will be introduced in the House next week by Mr. Sifton. Mr. Rutherford may be delayed a week or so.

Discussing the bye-elections in Manitoba, The Tribune says: "Mgr. Merry Del Val will take note of the fact that Manitoba regards the school question as so settled that the champions of Archbishop Langevin's cause did not even seriously think of placing any opposition in the field to the Laurier candidates."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

One Conservative journal, speaking of the tame election in Winnipeg, says that the Conservatives "kept out of it entirely.' That explains why they were "not in it."

The Grand Trunk railways officials do not fear that the United States will retaliate for the Dominion tariff by removing the bonding privileges; and the Grand Trunk has considerable at stake in this matter. If it doesn't feel alarmed, we can rest easy.

The Hamilton Spectator is afraid the "Grits" will steal the name of the Liberal Conservative party. This solicitude is natural—the name is the only thing perhaps that is of value in the party at present. Where is the party?

The World asserts that the clause of the tariff which permits the Governor-in-in Council to regulate combines and trusts by reducing or removing the duty on articles supposed to be controlled by such trusts or combines, is "a dangerous power." It is certainly dangerous to the combines, but the consuming public will have no quarrel with it.

The Toronto News and other Conservative journals are condemning the government for expenditure on the Trent Valley Canal. What would the News have? There has been a very large expenditure upon the canal, and a comparatively little further expenditure will suffice to complete it and make it a most valuable medium of transportation. Whatever strictures may be made as to past expenditures, it is evident that the present government, if for no other reason, is justified in completing the work so that the large expenditure already made may not be a dead loss. No doubt the present government is anxious to economize as much as possible but it would be a most mistaken economy to withhold expenditure on the Trent Valley Canal required to make large past expenditure of use.

GOOD ROADS.

The agitation for improved roads is rapidly gaining ground throughout the Province. The Provincial Road Commissioner, Mr. A. W. Campbell, has within the past few weeks attended large and representative meetings at Brampton, Oshawa, St. George, Lyndon, Oakville, Walkerton, Port Dover, Kincardine and a number of other points and believes that a considerable measure of reform will result. In every instance the plans suggested have been approved by resolutions unanimously adopted. The applications from municipal councils for Mr. Campbell's services have been so numerous that he finds it impossible to comply with all.

THE FRUIT PROSPECT.

Mr. E. Leigh writes:—"During the past week I have examined many orchards from Niagara westward and am glad to find that the prospects of a big crop of apples, peaches, pears, plums and small fruits was never better. The trees will soon be a mass of bloom, and I may add that farmers assure me that the wheat and clover have wintered safely and the outlook for good returns were never more promising."

NORTH HARVEY SCHOOL QUESTION.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Kindly allow me space in your paper to reply to the libellous epistle which appeared in the last issue of the Examiner under the title, "North Harvey School Question." Under the same heading appeared last winter like slanders which I did not answer, because I imputed them chiefly to wilful and inexcusable ignorance of the facts of the case. Most unreasonable length has now been reached.

In the first place I may state that "J. B." has selected the wrong nail and consequently been expending, unnecessarily, a vast amount of energy hammering it in more vacuum. I am sure the "Justice" can't know nothing whatever of his letter until it appeared in print. Hence, all the sarcasm and falsehoods flung at me were misdirected for and abusive.

In the second place J.B. did not understand or have accurate information about the circumstances causing the Easter holidays to be taken a week earlier than the prescribed time. I was unable to teach the beginning of the week previous to Easter Monday, and so, not knowing how long I might be prevented from resuming duties, arranged to have that week and began teaching Tuesday, April 20th, thus giving the pupils and myself just the lawful length of vacation. And school did re-open April 20th. No mention whatever had been made of making up lost time in the summer holidays, as erroneously stated by the libeller.

It were much better in more ways than one (think you not?) for "J. B." to make inquiry and be sure of conjectures before stating them in print as facts. Also, it will be of advantage to this "J. B." to learn and remember that libel is a crime, and "may be criminally punished."

A spot curse:—

"He does the devil's basest work—no less—
Who stabs in coldness—who throws the mire
On snowy lips whose hem he dare not press
His foul lips on. The pity of it!"

The agony means letters written by "J. B." and "L. T. H." have been, to say the least, cowardly; and I, writing for the first time on this subject, cheerfully and honourably sign myself,

The Teacher,
S. S. No. 2, Harvey.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to pass a few remarks on the letter that appeared in your last issue on the North Harvey School Question, over the signature of J. B. Having read with care all the previous letters, it seems to me that by the last article J. B. is trying to blow through the same quill as L. T. H. if the past—still trying to blow our teacher into a small spot in eternity for deeds which she—J. B., if I may be permitted to use the feminine gender—thinks is desperately wrong, and still trying to force culpability on the trustees of this school.

We have trustees—thanks to the unselfish electors in this section, who have shown by the large majority of votes given to the present trustees—that are men who do their duty openly as trustees; not by proxy, as stated by J. B. about the wood affair. They do not have to employ an advocate, as J. B. says, to defend them in their dealings before the readers of your paper, for right shall win the day, even if such as J. B. do charge them with proxy, and with being culpable, which in the cases referred to for correctness are as Justice said in her last (permitting me to use the feminine gender.) And as for the teacher's illness, "somehow" the lost time has all been made up already, while our last teacher—who was so much admired by the friends of J. B.—was spending her Easter holidays visiting in the neighborhood, and, as those can testify who have suffered with the prevailing sore eyes and la grippe, such as our present teacher was afflicted with it, would be a difficult undertaking to teach a decimated school such as ours would be if the children of such as J. B.—who is always railing at and about the teacher—were attending. What if the teacher did attend wedding festivities or swing the clubs, when recovering from her illness? And as for the teacher driving six miles to presumably shop is entirely untrue. Perhaps J. B. attended wedding festivities, etc., also at some previous date. Somehow it is strange how some people do strain at a gnat, sometimes they catch it (the gnat) and sometimes vice versa.

Yours truly,
Vox Populi.

[The correspondence on the above subject seems to us, who have no personal knowledge of the subject, to have gone far enough. It does not appear that further correspondence on the subject will be to the advantage of the interest of the school, which both parties to the controversy seem—though in different ways—to be aiming at. There are indications of the development of personal feelings which makes it highly desirable that the controversy should cease.—Ed. Examiner.

"HE HATH THE FALLING SICKNESS."

—Shakespeare.

Epilepsy or the "Falling Sickness" has been known for many centuries, and for as long a period of time no cure has been discovered, till Ryckman's Kootenay Cure came upon the scene and revolutionized the healing art. Julius Cæsar, one of the greatest men of ancient times, was a victim to it, and no physician of his day could effect a cure. Napoleon, the greatest warrior of modern times, fell a prey to it, and among all his conquering hosts there was not one that could conquer this insidious disease.

But here is Samuel Duffin, residing in the Township of West Nissouri, eight miles from the City of London, who makes a sworn statement before a Notary Public, that about eight years ago he had a paralytic stroke, and has ever since been subject to Epileptic Fits, which came upon him so often that it was unsafe for him to be left alone. He was treated by five of the best physicians in the province, and spent hundreds of dollars, to no avail, in endeavoring to get relief. Then he tried Kootenay Cure, which contains the new ingredient. Note the change.

"I have taken between three and four bottles." "I have now a good appetite, sleep well every night, and best of all, the fits have almost entirely left me." "My friends see a change in my appearance, and ask me what I have been doing, I gladly tell them I have been taking Kootenay. My general health is wonderfully improved, and I certainly feel, after twelve years of terrible suffering, I have been given a new lease of life by Kootenay Cure, the Greatest Medicine of the Age."

The price of Kootenay Cure is $1 50 per bottle. If your druggist does not keep it, send to the Ryckman Medicine Co., Hamilton, Ont. Chart book free on application. One bottle lasts over a month.

HARVEY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Friday last we were visited by what might be designated a cloud-burst—it could hardly be compared to anything else, the way the rain came down. It was something terrible for a few minutes. Seeding was getting on famously until it came, but it soon put a stop to operations, as all the flat land is wetter now than at the time the snow disappeared, and will be some time ere it is dry again.

Kennedy Davis & Son have two new smoke-stacks on their mill, each one being eighty feet long, which will make a splendid draught, as some of the mill-men jocularly remarked, it will draw the wood out of the carts when they back up to the furnace. The mill would have been started before this, but owing to the prevailing high winds they were unable to raise the smoke-stacks, although they expect to start this week.

Our teacher, Miss Strachan, is fully recovered from her sore eyes and la grippe with which she has been troubled and opened school last week as per agreement and made up the lost time. I think we are very fortunate in having so devoted a teacher, as I do not think it is compulsory to make up such time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Col. Prior Wanted Information Yesterday.

MR. DAVIN WAS ALSO IN EVIDENCE

A Good Deal of Discussion Over the Dismissal of Mrs. McManus, Postmistress of Northfield, B. C.—The Tariff Debate Continued by Mr. McMullen and Others.

Ottawa, April 28.—(Special.)—The tariff debate is progressing, but for the present interest in it seems to have flattened out. There are one or two Ministers yet to speak—notably the Premier and Mr. Davies—and much interest centres in their utterances.

After opening, the Premier, answering Mr. Davin, said the Government was at present investigating the outstanding accounts in connection with the Northwest Exhibition.

To Mr. Prior the Premier replied that it is the intention of the Government this year to prosecute surveys for the purpose of finding out the best route from the Pacific into the Yukon country.

The Government, Mr. Laurier said, in answer to another question by Mr. Prior, were aware that large quantities of goods were being smuggled through the Yukon country, but were not aware as to the best method of stopping it. The matter was, however, under consideration.

Mr. Prior enquired: Is it the intention of the Government to at once place a fast steamer on British Columbia waters to put a stop to the smuggling now carried on from the American side, and also to stop the poaching by American vessels in our deep sea fisheries?

In reply, Mr. Davies said last autumn the Government steamer Quadra was sent into Hecate Straits to enquire into the matter, and the official report did not justify the rumors of extensive smuggling. The department, however, had appointed, in conjunction with the customs, a special agent to go along the northern coast and make thorough enquiry into the complaints of smuggling and illegal fishing.

Mr. Prior was also informed that the Government intended to have the wreckow San Pedro removed from Victoria Harbor, but it would be necessary, however, to have an Act of Parliament passed to secure the Government against incurring damages and causing the removal of the wreck.

Mr. Prior further asked: Is it the intention of the Government to allow British Columbia fishermen to use fish traps in Canadian waters, when American fishermen are using traps in waters contiguous thereto?

Mr. Davies replied that he had declined to authorize the use of traps in Boundary Bay because of his promise to the fishermen out there to make no changes until Prof. Prince, the Commissioner of Fisheries, had made a thorough enquiry into the subject. Prof. Prince would leave shortly for the coast and would spend a long time there in order to look fully and carefully into the matter.

Mr. Davin called attention to an answer given by the Postmaster-General in answer to a question of his concerning the dismissal of Mrs. Isabella McManus, postmistress of Northfield, B.C. Mr. Mulock's reply was that the woman was dismissed because of her overbearing conduct and that of her husband towards many persons who were obliged to visit the postoffice.

To this Mr. Davin had observed that the woman's husband was not living, adding, "Has her husband been overbearing since he died?"

The reminder of the Postmaster-General was that the husband is living and the woman was dismissed on the report of the inspector.

"Now," said Mr. Davin, "I wish to say that the husband died last February, was buried three days afterwards, and I have not heard of any miracle being performed."

Continuing, Mr. Davin complained of the hardship that the woman had suffered by being dismissed, and that for a trivial complaint, so soon after her bereavement. He had a letter from the lady, in which she alluded to the fact that her husband, who was a mail carrier, died from the effects of an injury received while on duty; that he had seen active service as a British soldier, and had served in the Northwest Rebellion, without subsequent reward. These facts Mr. Davin corroborated from his own personal acquaintance with the dismissed postmistress and her deceased husband.

Mr. Mulock said this widow of his (Davin's), Mrs. McManus, had been dismissed on the report of the inspector on account of her overbearing manner; many complaints of a trivial character had been received against her.

Mr. Davin said the Postmaster-General's words were inexcusable in a Minister of the Crown. It was a piece of brutal flippancy on his part. He could only characterize Mr. Mulock's action as tyrannical. He had no doubt politics was behind all this, but it capped the climax when a poor widow was dismissed. Mrs. McManus was a former resident at Qu'Appelle and was a most respectable woman.

Mr. Foster said he thought Mr. Davin's language was not too strong. He must join in condemnation of the mean insinuation made by Mr. Mulock.

Mr. Lister: What was the insinuation?

Mr. Foster: Is the hon. gentleman the keeper of the Postmaster-General?

Mr. Lister: What was the insinuation? [Loud cries of order.]

Mr. Foster: The insinuation is well known and was uttered designedly.

Mr. Mulock: I made no insinuation. I cannot allow the hon. gentleman to charge me with making an insinuation.

Mr. Foster: The hon. gentleman was most unfortunate then in the choice of his language. He read from the report of the Postoffice Inspector, which said: "There hardly seems to be sufficient ground in the evidence of the petitioners to support the charge of mismanagement." The Postmaster-General had deliberately omitted that paragraph from the inspector's report. [Opposition cheers.] As for the observation that Mrs. McManus was overbearing, that same remark would apply to the Postmaster-General. [Hear, hear.]

Mr. Davin said that he knew Mrs. McManus when she lived at Qu'Appelle and kept a temperance hotel there, where she sold good whiskey. She also kept a dance house of not very reputable character. [Oh, oh.]

Mr. Quinn said it was evident from the slanderous statement of the last speaker that this matter was a question of politics. He felt bound to raise his voice against the pernicious system introduced by the Postmaster-General, and he called upon Mr. Fitzpatrick to endeavor to secure the reinstatement of Mrs. McManus.

Mr. McInnes, in whose constituency Northfield is, said the complaints against Mrs. McManus came from Conservatives. On one occasion, instead of handing out the mail, she had paraded up and down behind the wicket with a six-shooter in her fist. [Loud laughter.] When her husband met with an accident he was not engaged in carrying mails. He happened to be in a condition which coincided very much with the statement made by Mr. Davis. Dismissal took place before the man died, and when he was on a fair road to recovery. [Laughter.]

Sir Charles H. Tupper said it appeared from the Postoffice Inspector's report that the charges were practically dismissed. They were not supported by the evidence taken.

Mr. Osler said he felt humiliated, as a member of the House and a citizen of Canada, to think that our politics have reached such a condition that a dismissal had taken place on such evidence as had been read to the House. [Cheers.] He undertook to say that much stronger evidence could be procured against any postmaster in North York than in this particular case.

Mr. Prior said at least one case of offensive partisanship had been found, not as regards this poor woman, but the parties who sought to deprive her of her livelihood. Mr. McManus was a loyal citizen, one who had belonged to the Imperial army for many years and had fought and bled for his country. Seemingly from what Mr. McInnes stated, one woman had frightened the hon. member and his constituents.

After observations from Messrs. Laurier, Sutherland, McCleary and Lount the matter dropped.

Mr. McMullen resumed the debate on the budget. He said if the Opposition did not understand the tariff certainly the people of the country did, as was shown by the bye-elections yesterday. Mr. Chamberlain also apparently understood it, for he had expressed his approval of it. He proceeded to compare the Mackenzie and Fielding tariffs to show that as a rule duties would be lower under the latter than under the former. The Liberal tariff was diametrically opposed to protection. They did not propose to wear the filthy rags of protection. The slogan cry of the Liberal party was "Death to monopoly." He carefully analyzed the new tariff, and claimed that the Liberals had fulfilled their pledges to the country. Canada was now entering on a new and prosperous era.

Dr. Sproule after recess made a strong attack on the tariff as regards some of its features. He twitted the Liberals with having gone back on their ante-election pledges and wanted to know how Sir Richard reconciled it with his former cry of death to protection. The reciprocal tariff was very objectionable. He believed the Government had no right to enforce it, as it was a violation of British treaties. The violation of a treaty was the next thing to a declaration of war, but, even supposing the tariff was satisfactory, it would be giving Great Britain something for nothing. [Hear, hear.] Canada's duty was to look after her own interests first. This reciprocal clause, moreover, would involve a loss in revenue of three millions a year. He would like to know how the Government proposed to make up that deficiency.

Mr. Richardson followed, and immediately embalmed Kipling's new poem on Hansard. Then he discussed the tariff, from a Manitoba standpoint, to put out the dissatisfaction under which that province labored by way of customs tariff and freight rates. He mentioned that fruit was seldom seen on the table of a farmer. The cost of lumber was such as to compel settlers to live in poor houses and it checked mixed farming, because the settlers could not afford to erect barns for housing stock. Coal, and oil and agricultural implements were also high in price. He hoped there would be a further cut in coal oil. He claimed that the agricultural industry was entitled to every consideration at the hands of the Government.

Mr. Kloepfer called attention to the Liberal changes on tariff matters since 1891. Now their tariff amounted to putting another man's hat on their own heads. He went carefully over the tariff schedules and showed how in these items that Mr. Fisher claimed the Government had practically destroyed the industries affected. As a Canadian he believed in protecting Canadian interests first, so that our workingmen could earn a living. Personally he was an out and out protectionist. He believed in giving the home market to the farmers. Referring to the sewing machine business, in which he (Kloepfer) was interested, he said the reduction in duty in 1894 had had a most disastrous effect on the industry. Many American machines came in and a manufacturer at Guelph had a quit the business.

Mr. Wood (Hamilton): He did that before.

Mr. Kloepfer: You don't know anything about it. [Laughter.]

Continuing, he said a plant which cost $250,000 would not sell for $50,000. Certainly Mr. Wood would be the last man to buy it at that figure. [Laughter.] In conclusion, he expressed himself as opposed to the tariff proposals.

Mr. Douglas moved the adjournment of the debate.

The House adjourned at 11.10 p.m.

Mr. Prior enquired: Is it the intention of the Government to at once place a fast steamer on British Columbia waters to put a stop to the smuggling now carried on from the American side, and also to stop the poaching by American vessels in our deep sea fisheries?

In reply, Mr. Davies said last autumn the Government steamer Quadra was sent into Hecate Straits to enquire into the matter, and the official report did not justify the rumors of extensive smuggling. The department, however, had appointed, in conjunction with the customs, a special agent to go along the northern coast and make thorough enquiry into the complaints of smuggling and illegal fishing.

Mr. Prior was also informed that the Government intended to have the wreckew San Pedro removed from Victoria Harbor, but it would be necessary, however, to have an Act of Parliament passed to secure the Government against incurring damages for causing the removal of the wreck.

Mr. Prior further asked: Is it the intention of the Government to allow British Columbia fishermen to use fish traps in Canadian waters, when American fishermen are using traps in waters contiguous thereto?

Mr. Davies replied that he had declined to authorize the use of traps in Boundary Bay because of his promise to the fishermen out there to make no changes until Prof. Prince, the Commissioner of Fisheries, had made a thorough enquiry into the subject. Prof. Prince would leave shortly for the coast and would spend a long time there in order to look fully and carefully into the matter.

Mr. Davin called attention to an answer given by the Postmaster-General in answer to a question of his concerning the dismissal of Mrs. Isabella McManus, postmistress of Northfield, B.C. Mr. Mulock's reply was that the woman was dismissed because of her overbearing conduct and that of her husband towards many persons who were obliged to visit the postoffice. To this Mr. Davin had observed that the woman's husband was not living, adding, "Has her husband been overbearing since he died?"

The reisinder of the Postmaster-General was that the husband is living and the woman was dismissed on the report of the inspector.

"Now," said Mr. Davin, "I wish to say that the husband died last February, was buried three days afterwards, and I have not heard of any miracle being performed."

Continuing, Mr. Davin complained of the hardship that the woman had suffered by being dismissed, and that for a trivial complaint, so soon after her bereavement. He had a letter from the lady, in which she alluded to the fact that her husband, who was a mail carrier, died from the effects of an injury received while on duty; that he had seen active service as a British soldier, and had served in the North-west Rebellion, without subsequent reward. These facts Mr. Davin corroborated from his own personal acquaintance with the dismissed postmistress and her deceased husband.

Mr. Mulock said this widow of his (Davin's), Mrs. McManus, had been dismissed on the report of the inspector on account of her overbearing manner; many complaints of a trivial character had been received against her.

Mr. Davin said the Postmaster-General's words were inexcusable in a Minister of the Crown. It was a piece of brutal flippancy on his part. He could only characterize Mr. Mulock's action as tyrannical. He had no doubt politics was behind all this, but it capped the climax when a poor widow was dismissed. Mrs. McManus was a former resident at Qu'Appelle and was a most respectable woman.

Mr. Foster said he thought Mr. Davin's language was not too strong. He must join in condemnation of the mean insinuation made by Mr. Mulock.

Mr. Lister: What was the insinuation?

Mr. Foster: Is the hon. gentleman the keeper of the Postmaster-General?

Mr. Lister: What was the insinuation? [Loud cries of order.]

Mr. Foster: The insinuation is well known and was uttered designedly.

Mr. Mulock: I made no insinuation. I cannot allow the hon. gentleman to charge me with making an insinuation.

Mr. Foster: The hon. gentleman was most unfortunate then in the choice of his language. He read from the report of the Postoffice Inspector, which said: "There hardly seems to be sufficient ground in the evidence of the petitioners to support the charge of mismanagement." The Postmaster-General had deliberately omitted that paragraph from the inspector's report. [Opposition cheers.] As for the observation that Mrs. McManus was overbearing, that same remark would apply to the Postmaster-General. [Hear, hear.]

Mr. Davis said that he knew Mrs. McManus when she lived at Qu'Appelle and kept a temperance hotel there, where she sold good whiskey. She also kept a dance house of not very reputable character. [Oh, oh.]

Mr. Quinn said it was evident from the slanderous statement of the last speaker that this matter was a question of politics. He felt bound to raise his voice against the pernicious system introduced by the Postmaster-General, and he called upon Mr. Fitzpatrick to endeavor to secure the reinstatement of Mrs. McManus.

Mr. McInnes, in whose constituency Northfield is, said the complaints against Mrs. McManus came from Conservatives. On one occasion, instead of handing out the mail, she had paraded up and down behind the wicket with a six-shooter in her fist. [Loud laughter.] When her husband met with an accident he was not engaged in carrying mails. He happened to be in a condition which coincided very much with the statement made by Mr. Davis. Dismissal took place before the man died, and when he was on a fair road to recovery. [Laughter.]

Sir Charles H. Tupper said it appeared from the Postoffice Inspector's report that the charges were practically dismissed. They were not supported by the evidence taken.

Mr. Osler said he felt humiliated, as a member of the House and a citizen of Canada, to think that our politics have reached such a condition that a dismissal had taken place on such evidence as had been read to the House. [Cheers.] He undertook to say that much stronger evidence could be procured against any postmaster in North York than in this particular case.

Mr. Prior said at least one case of offensive partisanship had been found, not as regards this poor woman, but the parties who sought to deprive her of her livelihood. Mr. McManus was a loyal citizen, one who had belonged to the Imperial army for many years and had fought and bled for his country. Seemingly from what Mr. McInnes stated, one woman had frightened the hon. member and his constituents.

After observations from Messrs. Laurier, Sutherland, McCleary and Lount the matter dropped.

Mr. McMullen resumed the debate on the budget. He said if the Opposition did not understand the tariff certainly the people of the country did, as was shown by the bye-elections yesterday. Mr. Chamberlain also apparently understood it, for he had expressed his approval of it. He proceeded to compare the Mackenzie and Fielding tariffs to show that as a rule duties would be lower under the latter than under the former. The Liberal tariff was diametrically opposed to protection. They did not propose to wear the filthy rags of protection. The slogan cry of the Liberal party was "Death to monopoly." He carefully analyzed the new tariff, and claimed that the Liberals had fulfilled their pledges to the country. Canada was now entering on a new and prosperous era.

Dr. Sproule after recess made a strong attack on the tariff as regards some of its features. He twitted the Liberals with having gone back on their ante-election pledges and wanted to know how Sir Richard reconciled it with his former cry of death to protection. The reciprocal tariff was very objectionable. He believed the Government had no right to enforce it, as it was a violation of British treaties. The violation of a treaty was the next thing to a declaration of war, but, even supposing the tariff was enforced, it would be giving Great Britain something for nothing. [Hear, hear.] Canada's duty was to look after her own interests first. The reciprocal clause, moreover, would involve a loss in revenue of three millions a year. He would like to know how the Government proposed to make up that deficiency.

Mr. Richardson followed, and immediately embalmed Kipling's new poem on Hansard. Then he discussed the tariff from a Manitoba standpoint, and put out the disabilities under which that province labored by way of customs tariff and freight rates. He mentioned that fruit was seldom seen on the table of a farmer. The cost of lumber was such as to compel settlers to live in poor houses and it checked mixed farming, because the settlers could not afford to erect barns for housing stock. Coal, coal oil and agricultural implements were also high in price. He hoped there would be a further cut in coal oil. He claimed that the agricultural industry was entitled to every consideration at the hands of the Government.

Mr. Kloepfer called attention to the Liberal changes on tariff matters since 1891. Now their tariff amounted to putting another man's hat on their own heads. He went carefully over the tariff schedules, and showed how in these items that Mr. Tilley changed the Government had practically destroyed the industries affected. As a Canadian he believed in protecting Canadian interests first, so that our workingmen could earn a living. Personally he was an out and out protectionist. He believed in giving the home market to the farmers. Referring to the sewing machine business, in which he (Kloepfer) was interested, he said the reduction in duty in 1894 had had a most disastrous effect on the industry. Many American machines came in and a manufacturer at Guelph had to quit the business.

Mr. Wood (Hamilton): He did that before.

Mr. Kloepfer: You don't know anything about it. [Laughter.]

Continuing, he said a plant which cost $250,000 would not sell for $50,000. Certainly Mr. Wood would be the last man to buy it at that figure. [Laughter.] In conclusion, he expressed himself as opposed to the tariff proposals.

Mr. Douglas moved the adjournment of the debate.

The House adjourned at 11.10 p.m.

A RUNAWAY.

No Damage Sustained Other Than the Breakage of the Shafts.

Mr. Alex. Elliott's horse ran away this morning while left standing at the door of his store. The animal ran down George to Charlotte street when it attempted to turn the corner, but as an electric car came up just then it swerved again, but in attempting to continue on down George street the wagon struck the telegraph post and was upset. The horse was caught at this juncture, before it could recommence its career. No damage was done other than the breaking of the shafts.

THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH BREAKS FROM HER FASTENINGS.

And Without Steam Endeavours to Navigate the Local Section of the Trent Valley Canal.

The other day when Capt. Clare Calcutt was engaged in looking over the City of Peterborough, which along with two scows was tied up at the wharf, the moorings suddenly gave way and the three boats floated out into the lake.

So busy was Captain Clare that he never noticed his predicament until far out from the shore. Then the spectators were amused to see the celerity with which he clambered around the City and the two scows trying to devise a means of escape.

All were afraid that before anything could be done the boats might get into the current and be carried to the dam at the locks, which would probably mean the destruction of the steamer when the bridge was reached.

Capt. Calcutt cut the line tying the three boats together, when, to the surprise of all, they formed into line and made their way directly to the mouth of the Trent Valley Canal and actually drove in between the piers at the entrance. The occurrence was a most peculiar one and Capt. Calcutt is in a position to say that he is the first man to have a steamer in this section of the canal.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Chrysanthemum Show—To be "Victoria Park" Instead of "Court House Park."

A meeting of the directors of the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society was held in the office of the Secretary, Mr. F. Brownscombe yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. There were present: Dr. Burnham, President, Messrs. J. H. Roper, D. W. Dumble, T. A. S. Hay, John Irwin, H. Nesbitt, T. E. Bradburn, R. D. Hamilton, W. H. Foord.

Arrangements were fully discussed for the Chrysanthemum Show, and the prize list prepared, and it is to be printed at once. Mr. T. E. Bradburn has very kindly placed the old council chamber at the disposal of the society for the purposes of the exhibition, and from the interest developed it is more than probable that the first chrysanthemum show will be a fine success.

On motion of Mr. J. H. Roper, seconded by Mr. T. A. S. Hay, it was resolved that on and after June 22nd next, the name of Victoria Park shall be substituted for that of Court House Park, in honour of Her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee, and a copy of the resolution is out of courtesy, to be forwarded to the county council.

After the discussion of matters connected with the annual exhibition of the society, the meeting adjourned.

OBITUARY.

Further Particulars Concerning the Death of Edward Crowe.

The Campbellford Herald says:—"After four years of failing health and suffering, the life of Edward Crowe, of Campbellford, terminated on Sunday morning last. Mr. Crowe came here from Peterborough six years ago, and entered into the dry goods business on Front street, in partnership with Mr. Charles Drennan. Two years ago his health failed and he retired from business, since which time he has resided quietly at his home near the railway station. The early stages of his illness appeared in the form of catarrh, which subsequently developed into consumption. Mr. Crowe was a native of Tipperary, Ireland, and has resided in this country since he was four years of age. He was a man of generous mind, openhearted and friendly, and was highly respected for his good character and excellent citizenship. He was a devoted member of the Roman Catholic church. A wife and six sons—the youngest 13 years of age—survive to bear in memory a kind husband and father. Deceased was 49 years of age. His remains were conveyed to Peterborough on the 6.45 train on Tuesday morning for interment in that town. A large number of friends assembled at the residence to show their sympathy for the family and to take a last look at the deceased.

MR. CALCUTT'S ENTERPRISE.

In another column will be found a full description of the buildings and plant of an important new local industry, Mr. H. Calcutt's Lager Beer Brewery. This is in keeping with Mr. Calcutt's loyalty to local interests and his spirit of enterprise. It is well known that during the summer season no little quantity of lager beer is consumed and as there is a demand for this mild and thirst-quenching stimulant and since to meet the demand it will have to be procured by importation, unless locally produced, the enterprise of Mr. Calcutt deserves encouragement. By means of it not only will a fresh supply of excellent quality always be available, but the amount consumed in materials and the employment of labour will be an important factor in assisting the industrial interests of the town and village. Besides it has been and is seriously contended, and by good temperance men too, that the fostering of a habit of drinking lager beer, instead of spirits, is an important step in the direction of promoting greater temperance in the community. It is held that a man may use lager beer to an extent that might be considered intemperate without any of the immoral and debasing effects that follow the intemperate use of spirits. Therefore, in view of this consideration, and in view of the fact that trade is stimulated and labour largely employed to produce a beverage of best quality, which will be imported anyway if not made at home, the new industry of Mr. Calcutt may be regarded as an important addition to our manufacturing concerns, and his success will be wished for and regarded with pleasure by the numerous friends his bluff integrity of character has made.

THE WINTER WHEAT.

Reports of Serious Injury by Late Frosts.

Farmers coming to town report that late frosts have had a very serious effect upon winter wheat. The few fields that seemed to have overcome the effects of the earlier frosts succumbed to the heavy frosts of Monday and Tuesday nights. It is stated that large breadths of fall wheat will be ploughed under and the land devoted to some spring crop. Clover has also been badly lifted by the frost.

LAST EVENING'S CONCERT.

In Aid of the South Ward Mission Building Fund.

A concert was held in the South Ward Mission Building last evening for the purpose of augmenting the building fund.

The programme was opened with a piano solo, "Perle du Nord," by Miss Florence Bell, which was well executed. Little Lois Ostrom then recited and had to respond to an encore. Mrs. G. A. Smith's brilliantly rendered piano solo was well received, as was a vocal solo by Rev. W. L. Armitage. Master Holden Blackwell's recitation was very ably given.

The play "Beauty and the Beast," was then presented by Misses Mary Sawers, Josie Bell, Lillian Rush and Florence Bell, and Messrs. Charlie Stone, Clarence Bell and Roy Stone. The efforts of the young artists were greatly appreciated, and proved most entertaining. The programme was concluded by the execution of a pretty fairy drill by the Misses Mulholland, the Misses Bullen, Miss May Gilbert, Miss Latimer, Miss McLellan and Miss McFadden.

Mrs. S. Seaforth, suffered for years with what is called old people's rash. She was treated by many physicians without any result. Mr. Fear, the local druggist, recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment, which relieved the irritation at once and speedily effected a permanent cure of the skin eruption. Mrs. James also says Dr. Chase's Ointment cured her of itching piles which she has been troubled with for years.

Whiskey Goes up.

After taking some thousands of gallons of whiskey out of bond at the old rates of duty, the Canadian distillers have now advanced the price of their goods, the reason given being that the duty has been made higher. The liquor dealers in this city are in receipt of a new price list, which announces an increase in all round. The principal increase is in the price of case goods, which have been advanced 35 cents per two-gallon case. The actual advance is 17 cents per gallon, but the extra cent is charged for interest, whatever that may mean. The distillers stand to make a very handsome thing out of this, but the local hotels and saloonkeepers are not so well satisfied. They say that the advance price is not large enough to justify them in charging ten cents per glass for whiskey, but yet in the same way the advance will have to come out of the consumer. Local retailers met yesterday, but arrived at no conclusion regarding the advance in price.

Fathers or Mothers.

Treat your boys to a new Easter suit. Teach them taste and economy by fitting them out for the season at the City Clothing Store. You can have your pick from a heaping stock of dressy new suits at special Easter prices. Bright new outfits for boys and youths is what we take pride in selling. Juvenile suits that last longer, fit neater, and look better than the general run. Our special Easter prices for two-piece suits are $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50, and are well worth your quick investigation. For three-piece suits for youths, the prices are $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 and up to $7.00. We like mothers to visit our store and do their buying personally. Fair, square prices for reliable children's and youths' clothing can be counted on every time you buy here. We ask the men to see our large assortment of popular selections in spring tweed and cloths for ordered suits and spring overcoats. We turn out the finest and lowest-priced spring clothing for men that ever left the tailors' hands. You also find every good kind of ready-to-wear clothing in spring suits and overcoats. Stacks of them to select from that will please and fit you, made by men that know how. Men's serge suits as low as $3, $4, $5 and up to $8. Tweed suits as low as $3.50, $4, $5 and up to $10. Fine black worsted suits at $8, $10 and $12. See our attractive window display of handsome Easter neckwear and furnishings—the latest out—right in style and the "top-notch" novelties of the day. Here's a snap—500 pairs of all-wool tweed pants, well made, strong worsted pants, for only $1.25 a pair—the best value we ever offered.—H. LaBARR & Co., City Clothing Store, George street. dw

A NEW INDUSTRY ADDED TO PETERBOROUGH.

Description of the New Lager Beer Brewery in Ashburnham.

The addition to H. Calcutt's brewery for his new branch of business, i.e. lager beer, is a fine brick building 50 feet high with three stories. The top story is 15 feet high and 31 feet square. The walls are 14 in. brick plastered on the brick and strapped by 2x1 strips and covered with P. and B. building insulating paper. It is then sheeted with inch tongued and grooved hemlock sheeting. These walls are double sheeted in this manner with paper between each layer of sheeting. This is done in in order to retain the heat that would otherwise strike through the walls, from coming in contact with the ice, as this story is filled with ice 15x31 ft. square, weighing about 400 tons. This is called the cold storage, from which by means of cold air chambers running into the two cellars below, the cold air is carried down, thus creating a good circulation, besides keeping the lower cellars at a temperature of 38 degrees. The joists which hold up the ice are 4x12 tamarac, with a two and a half inch tamarac floor laid on them with 12x12 beams across from wall to wall. These are supported by 12x12 oak pillars, with the lower end set on stones 3x3 feet square and a foot thick. The joists are dressed on all sides, making a nice clean appearance. Mr. J. W. Hickey, of Port Hope, now residing in Ashburnham, did the caulking of the floor on which the ice rests.

The second or middle flat is used for the fermenting room. The walls are 18 inches thick, and plastered, stripped and sheeted with insulating paper between, the same as the above story.

This fermenting room contains six open fermenting tubs, 5 ft. high, 6½ feet in diameter, in which can be brewed 40 bbls. at a brewing; and also three storage tanks, 7 ft. high and 7 ft. in diameter, holding about 60 bbls. each. The latter tanks are perfectly air tight, with manholes fitted on the side of the tanks to allow the workmen to get inside to clean them out. These are finely-built tanks, and reflect much to the credit of Mr. R. Tivey of Ashburnham, who built all the tanks for Mr. Calcutt's lager branch. Storage tanks are out of the general run of work except by men who make a specialty of such work. And they are the first of the kind with double heads which have been built around this section. The lager ferments in the open vats in 14 days, and from there it is pumped to the storage tanks, —"Rhue" tanks, is the German name. It rests in these tanks two weeks longer or until its gets perfectly clear, then from this room it is let into the lower cellar, which contains seven puncheons or chip casks as they are called. These casks hold about eighteen barrels each and the lager stays in these from eight to ten days longer. It is from these puncheons that the lager is finished and filled into the kegs and is ready for the market. It therefore takes six weeks from the time that the first brewing is made until the lager is ready for use. The floors in these cellars are made of concrete and can easily be kept clean. The bottom cellar walls are of stone three feet in thickness and are plastered on the stone and are kept at a temperature not higher than 38. Everything in the building includes the latest modern improvements. Mr. J. Hayes did the stone and brickwork, and Mr. Stewart Wright superintended the carpenter work.

Mr. Calcutt has had two coopers all winter engaged in making new kegs for the lager trade. He will have over 500 to start with for this summer's trade, and he will have different sized kegs; also, the lager will be sold in bottles made especially for the lager trade.

The cost of the building, including the plant, will amount to about $5,000. Mr. D. Hummell is the lager brewer and promises a first-class article, which he says will be ready about May 15th. He intends making a few special brewings for Jubilee week.

BRITAIN ENDORSES CANADA.

The Proud Mother Appreciates the Dutiful Daughter.

The pro-Canada feeling which the announcement of the Dominion's tariff with the preferential clause in favour of England has aroused in London has been intensified by the journalistic comments recently published, and everywhere Canada and the Canadians are spoken of in enthusiastic terms. Political parties of all shades unite in laudatory expressions about the Dominion and her action in regard to trade relations with the Mother Country, and it is safe to say that her visiting political, military, and other representatives will be licensed at the jubilee festivities. As a proof of the cordial manner in which the news of Canada's action is received in England, the accompanying fine poem by Mr. Rudyard Kipling, published in the London Times on Tuesday, will be convincing:

OUR LADY OF THE SNOWS.

By Rudyard Kipling, in the Times, London, Eng., April 27, 1897.

A nation spoke to a nation,
A queen sent word to a throne:
Daughter am I in my mother's house,
But mistress in my own.
The gates are mine to open
As the gates are mine to close,
And I bet my house in order,
Said Our Lady of the Snows.

Neither with laughter or weeping,
Fear or the child's amaze,
Soberly under the white man's law
My white men go their ways.
Not for the Gentile's clamour,
Insult or threat of blows,
Bow we the knee to Baal,
Said Our Lady of the Snows.

My speech is clear and single,
I talk of common things,
Words of the wharf and market-place,
And the ware the merchant brings.
Favour to those I favour,
But a stumbling-block for my foes,
Many there be that hate us,
Said Our Lady of the Snows.

I called my chiefs to council,
In the din of a troubled year,
For the sake of a sign ye would not see
And a word ye would not hear.
This is our message and answer,
This is the path we chose,
For we be also a people,
Said Our Lady of the Snows.

Carry the word to my sisters,
To the queens of the east and south,
I have proved faith in the heritage
By more than the word of my mouth.
They that are wise may follow,
Ere the world's war trumpet blows,
But I, I am first in the battle,
Said Our Lady of the Snows.

A nation spoke to a nation,
A queen sent word to a throne,
Daughter am I in my mother's house,
But mistress in my own.
The gates are mine to open
As the gates are mine to close,
And I abide by my mother's house
Said Our Lady of the Snow.

[The above title—"Lady of the Snows"—is evidently taken from a poem by that eminent Canadian poet and statesman, the late Hon. Thomas D'Arcy McGee, entitled "Our Ladye of the Snow"—a legend of the old French regime in Canada. Then the church of Notre Dame des Neiges occupied a situation on the southern slope of the mountain, and was the centre of the habitations of the converted Indians and the missionaries.

TROUT FISHING.

It is Illegal to Catch the Speckled Beauties Until Monday Next.

It has been erroneously given out from Ottawa, says the Belleville Intelligencer, that the fishing of speckled trout may commence on May 1st. This is an error, and anybody who has arranged to go fishing on Saturday, should cancel his arrangements at once. The Act expressly reads: "No one shall fish for, catch, kill, buy, sell or possess any speckled trout, (salvelinus fontinalis) between the 15th day of Sept. and the 1st day of May, both days inclusive in each year."

This year fishing cannot commence until May 3rd. May 1st is included in the close season and May 2nd is the Lord's day, to fish on which is a breach of the game laws.

The Game Warden states that the law will be rigidly enforced in spite of the Ottawa announcement.

Mr. A. Fletcher is spending a few days a town.

The English line was the scene of a very exciting race a few days ago, the contestants being a resident of North Dummer driving, and the undertaker from Lakefield on a wheel. The undertaker attempted to pass but the driver objected and played on the "bud" and for a few minutes nothing could be seen for dust. The man with the rig had the best of it though until his horse ran into the ditch and started to kick; then he got the worst of it.

Geo. Forbes is doing the stonework on A. Choate's new house.

The saw mill has closed down for the summer.

The high wind of last week demolished a few smokestacks.

It is our sad duty to record the death of Mr. Archie R. Reid, which occurred at the residence of his father, Mr. G. W. Reid. Deceased was 24 years of age and was a member of the Presbyterian church. The funeral was largely attended and the floral offerings, which were both beautiful and numerous, showed the high esteem in which he was held.

New Temperance Lodge in Ashburnham

Mr. H. Calcutt has just completed a new lager brewery in Ashburnham that will do more to help temperance than all the lodges in the country. Do away with whisky, encourage people to use a light drink that will not intoxicate, and you will accomplish one great step in temperance. 6d95

ALLANDALE.

The Funeral of the Late Thos. Hastie.

The funeral of the late Thos. Hastie took place at Allandale on Monday, a very large number attending—over ninety carriages following the remains to the cemetery. The deceased was held in high esteem by all. The service was conducted at the residence by the Rev. F. Andrews, Presbyterian, assisted by Rev. Mr. Liddy, Methodist, and Rev. Mr. Reed, English church. Floral wreaths were placed over the remains by Keene Y.P.S.C.E., and Miss Miss Kate McNevan; flowers by the Misses Renwick and the Misses Fife, and a large lily by Mrs. David Mastie. Among those who attended to pay their respects from a distance were noticed Mr. Wm. Anderson, Warden; Mr. T. Blezard, M.P.P., Mr. Wm. Drummond and others—some coming over eight miles to show their sympathy for the parents. The undertaker was Mr. W. T. Mathers and the pall-bearers were the three brothers and three brothers-in-law of the deceased, who was held in high esteem by all classes, and deep regret was felt for his sudden death. All join in sympathy with the father, mother, brothers and sisters in the bereavement implied in the removal. In so sudden a manner, of one so greatly beloved, and according to human ideas, just on the threshold of an honoured and useful life.

The bereaved family wish to take this means of most cordially thanking Miss Bessie Read, of Keene, for the handsome wreath placed over the remains of their loved one by the Y.P.S.C.E. of Keene.

UNTOLD MISERY FROM

RHEUMATISM

C. H. King, Water Valley, Miss., cured by

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For five years, I suffered untold misery from muscular rheumatism. I tried every known remedy, consulted the best physicians, visited Hot Springs, Ark., three times, spending $1000 there, besides doctors' bills; but could obtain only temporary relief. My flesh was wasted away so that I weighed only ninety-three pounds; my left arm and leg were drawn out of shape, the muscles being twisted up in knots. I was unable to dress myself, except with assistance, and could only hobble about by using a cane. I had no appetite, and was assured, by the doctors, that I could not live. The pains, at times, were so awful, that I could procure relief only by means of hypodermic injections of morphine. I had my limbs bandaged in clay, in sulphur, in poultices; but these gave only temporary relief. After trying everything, and suffering the most awful tortures, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Inside of two months, I was able to walk without a cane. In three months, my limbs began to strengthen, and in the course of a year, I was cured. My weight has increased to 165 pounds, and I am now able to do my full day's work as a railroad blacksmith."

BRITAIN AND DELAGOA BAY.

Foreign Officials are Reticent, But it is Believed That a Deal is on With Portugal.

London, April 27.—The officials at the Foreign Office are reticent on the subject of the rumor that Great Britain has purchased Delagoa Bay and will fortify Inyak Island. But the opinion gains ground among close observers of the situation in South Africa that this is the objective point of the negotiations now known to be in progress between London and Lisbon. These negotiations began at the time of the last visit of the King of Portugal to England, which, though nominally undertaken for pleasure only, was really designed to lay the basis for a large Portuguese loan. Portuguese finances have grown worse rather than better during the last 18 months, and British capitalists are taking advantage of Portugal's necessity to drive the best bargain they can with her for the control, permanently or temporarily, of Delagoa Bay.

The Foreign Office officials declined to-day either to admit or to deny that the rumored purchase of Delagoa Bay is a fact. Should Great Britain acquire and fortify Inyak Island this would be her base of supplies in the event of hostilities with the Transvaal.

NEWS FROM WINNIPEG.

Mr. Sifton Hearing Deputations—The Flood Situation Unchanged—Emerson and Morris in a Bad Plight.

Winnipeg, April 27.—(Special.)—Hon. Clifford Sifton will on Friday receive a deputation from the Winnipeg Board of Trade and City Council, which deputation will urge the building of locks at St. Andrew's Rapids, and thus making the Red River navigable for steamboats. On Friday evening Mr. Sifton leaves for Ottawa.

Joseph Tennant, Customs collector at Gretna, is one of the latest officials to be dismissed for alleged partisanship.

There is absolutely no change in the high water situation so far as Winnipeg is concerned. For thirty hours or more now the water of the Red River has been stationary. At Emerson the water is going down, and at Morris it is stationary. The worst stage has evidently been passed. Emerson and Morris, however, will feel the effects of the flood for some time. It will be a fortnight before business can be resumed in either town.

THE TRAIL OF DEATH

It begins at the Throat and ends at the Grave How many a human life is unnecessarily sacrificed.

There are many remedies on the market for the cure of consumption, but consumption, once it reaches a certain stage, cannot be cured. In professing, therefore, to do what is impossible, these remedies prove themselves to be simply humbugs.

Consumption is a disease which destroys the tissue of the lungs. Once gone, no medicine can replace that tissue. Good medicine may arrest the disease even after one lung is wholly gone, as long as the other remains sound. Once both are attacked, however, the victim is doomed.

Just why people should risk their lives to this dread disease and go to great expense afterwards to check it, it is hard to conceive. It is much easier prevented than cured. Throat troubles and severe colds are its usual forerunners. A 25-cent bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine will drive these away. It is, without doubt, the best medicine for the purpose to be had anywhere.

THANKS TO CANADA

For the Fiscal Policy of the Government.

SIR CHARLES E. HOWARD VINCENT

Gives Notice of Motion in the British House of Commons of Gratification at the Preference Allowed to British Goods—Mr. Chamberlain Voices Government Appreciation.

London, April 27.—In the House of Commons to-day Sir Charles E. H. Vincent, Conservative and Fair Trader, member for the central division of Sheffield, announced that he would move the following resolution a month hence:

"The House expresses grateful and fraternal recognition to the Government and people of the Dominion of Canada for the generous fiscal changes in favor of British trade and labor announced on Friday by the Parliament at Ottawa, and already in force, and hopes this first step towards a commercial federation of the Empire will be followed by Australia, South Africa and the other colonies."

The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, replying, said the Government cordially appreciated the friendly spirit shown by the tariff action of Canada. "And," he added, "I understand the proposals do not depend upon any alteration of the system of free trade established in the United Kingdom."

London, April 27.—Sir Charles E. Howard Vincent, Conservative, and fair trader, member for the Central Division of Sheffield, moved in the House of Commons to-day. That in view of the great increase in the imports of foreign manufactured articles, and the consequent loss of employment to working people of this country, such goods should pay a toll of 10 per cent., the proceeds to be devoted to a fund for providing pensions for deserving helpless persons over 65 years of age.

Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Government leader in the House, and First Lord of the Treasury, replied. He said it was dangerous to admit a resolution to protect manufacturers without also protecting husbandry. Besides, he added, much could be said in favor of Great Britain's simple fiscal system, while the question of old age pensions was premature.

The motion of Sir Charles E. Howard Vincent was eventually negatived without a division.

London, April 27.—Sir William Vernon Harcourt, leader of the Liberal party in the House of Commons, addressed a large and important meeting of Welsh Liberal electors to-night at Abertillery. Discussing Cretan affairs, he declared that Great Britain had never before occupied a position of which she had so much reason to be ashamed. "The union of Crete and Greece," he said, "is the proper ultimate solution of the difficulties. If that had been permitted, there would have been no war. The powers are only anxious to preserve Turkish integrity as long as it suits themselves. The whole integrity formula is a sham. It has been said that a ukase has gone forth to let Greece perish. If that is the decision of England, and if the concert of Europe results in the doom of freedom in Greece, it will arouse in the breasts of all Englishmen sentiments of the sternest indignation and the deepest disgust."

Levee Broken at Keokuk.

Keokuk, Ia., April 27.—Punt Levee, on the Illinois side, 12 miles below this city, broke this morning unexpectedly and threw the inhabitants into the wildest state of alarm. Twenty-five thousand acres of rich land will be overflowed. People had felt secure and were not prepared for the break. A wild rush to get families and stock out of the bottoms is being made. Much stock will be drowned, and there may be loss of human life.

The old man who looks out at the world with clear and healthy eyes cannot help feeling great gratification at the thought that his children have inherited from him no weakness or tendency to disease. The healthy old man is the man who has throughout life kept his digestion good and his blood pure. No one in a thousand does it. Germs go through the healthy body without effect. Let them once find lodgment or let them find a weak spot, they will develop by the million and the blood will be full of them. Instead of giving strength to the tissues, it will force upon them in nutritious matter and the man will lose flesh and the more susceptible he is to disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the only medicine that absolutely and infallibly cures all blood diseases: and all disease save blood diseases. It isn't a medicine for some one particular so-called disease. It is a medicine for the whole body. It forces out all the germs of disease, and replaces impurities with rich, red blood.

Papyralith For Floors and Walls.

A new roofing material, also suitable for flooring, lining bath rooms, walls, etc., which is made from waste paper and sawdust treated chemically, is reported by the American consul at Zurich as a flourishing new industry of that place. It is made in three separate bodies, a moist powder, a dry powder and liquid, which, when mingled together, produces a mixture of the consistency of mortar. It is then spread over a foundation of wood or stone, as the case may be, and in the same manner as asphalt or cement stamped down, leveled, left to dry for two days and then polished. It becomes as hard as stone, perfectly water-tight, fire-proof, a non conductor of heat, cold and sound, and being spread out in a solid mass it has no joints, and consequently does not collect the dust or afford lurking places for microbes. All these properties make it especially desirable for schools, hospitals and other public places, and the authorities, recognizing this fact have had it laid in several schools, and certain public museums there have also had hallways covered with this material. For flooring it is lighter than any other material used and perfectly water proof. A company has engaged in its manufacture which has grown to be quite a large industry, with prospects of a still greater growth. The cost is stated to be about $1 a square yard, although the cost of manufacturing it is not known.

Hakluyt's Zeal.

The great work of Hakluyt is the "Principal Navigations," in three folio volumes, a monument of useful labor. Nothing could stop or daunt him when there was a chance of obtaining new information. He rode 200 miles to have an interview with the last survivor of Master Hore's expedition to America in 1536. He saved numerous journals and narratives from destruction and the deeds they record from oblivion. His work gave a stimulus to colonial and to maritime enterprise, and it inspired our literature. Shakespeare owed much to Hakluyt's "Principal Navigations." Milton owed much more. As the years passed on Richard Hakluyt, in his own quaint language, continued "to wade still further and further in the sweet studie of the histoire of cosmographie," and he achieved his great task, which was, in his own words, "to incorporate into one body the torn and scattered limbs of our ancient and late navigations by sea." He declared "geography and chronology to be the sun and moon, the right eye and the left, of all history."—Geographical Journal.

STOP, LOOK and LISTEN.

Have you ever stopped to think how the restless energy and terrible strain of modern life affect both the Heart and Nerves?

In the rush, hurry and worry of to-day, we overwork the heart; keep it going all day at a feverish pace, stimulate it with tea, tobacco, or if they will not suffice, whip it to greater action with alcoholic stimulants.

If the heart is strong and healthy it can obey promptly the demands of the system. But if it be weak or debilitated from any cause, serious troubles ensue, such as palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, dizziness, shortness of breath, distressed, smothering feeling, spasms or pain through the breast and heart, morbid anxious feeling, sleeplessness, nervousness, anæmia, loss of appetite, etc.

To combat and cure these evils we have to consider two points, i.e., the Heart itself and the Nervous System, and provide a medicine which will act upon and strengthen both to the proper fulfilment of their functions.

This is found in Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They have a soothing and calming effect on the nervous system, combined with a tonic, invigorating, and restoring action upon the heart itself, which renders them a perfect remedy for all Heart and Nervous troubles.

THIS IS POSITIVE PROOF.

MESSRS. T. MILBURN & CO., TORONTO:

DEAR SIRS—There is light in Asia after all, and the man that advised me to try your Heart and Nerve Pills was a friend indeed and truly a friend in need. Before I started to take them I was languid, weak, sleepless and nervous. My brain was beclouded and I could not collect my thoughts; I had gone through an operation in the hope of relief, but still remained generally broken up, my appetite was gone, and I was almost without hope or ambition.

Now I feel thoroughly rebuilt through the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and it took only three or four weeks to do the work.

I often think of the years of suffering I might have escaped had I only known of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in time; but I am grateful to be restored to health at last, and gladly recommend the medicine that cured me.

ANTONE WALTERS, Artist, Pasadena, Cal.

(Mr. Walters is a former resident of Toronto, and went to California in search of the health that was finally given to him by Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. These pills are sold by all druggists, at 50c a box, or 3 boxes for $1.50, mailed on receipt of price by T. MILBURN & CO., TORONTO. 78

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT!

The Mason & Risch Piano Co. L'td.

Beg to announce that they have assumed the Agency for Central and Western Ontario of the Pianos manufactured by Chickering & Sons, Boston.

It would be superfluous to make extended reference to the reputation of this famous house, or to the pianofortes manufactured by them. It is sufficient to say that for three quarters of a century they have occupied the position of absolute leaders in Musical Art manufacture, and their reputation was at no time greater than it is at present.

INTENDING PURCHASERS OF PIANO

Now have the choice in our warerooms of goods manufactured by the acknowledged leaders of the American and Canadian trade. The association of such Instruments as Chickering & Sons and Mason & Risch Pianos beneath one roof forms a unique combination.

AS TO PRICES!

Pianos of high artistic merit must of necessity cost more than poorer instruments, but there is no question of the direction in which true economy lies. As an evidence of this it may be mentioned that the first Piano manufactured by Chickering & Sons 73 ago is still in an excellent state of preservation, and Pianos made by Mason & Risch over 20 years ago scarcely show any sign of wear. A Desperate Woman.

Experts in insanity tell us that when anyone goes insane, frequently their whole nature is reversed. They do and say exactly the opposite things to what they would do in their sane minds. A mother whose mind breaks down under extreme nervous tension may turn upon the one object in all the world most precious to her—her baby.

The terrible nervous tension under which many women live and suffer because of some weakness or disease of their sex, keeps them on the very verge of insanity. The constant drag and drain upon the complicated and delicate organism affects the whole nervous system and works upon the brain with an almost irresistible madness.

Thousands of suffering women have been literally saved from the insane asylum by the timely influence of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the one perfect and positive specific for every derangement of woman's special organism. It is a scientific and permanent cure for those severe, chronic, complicated cases which doctors usually consider hopeless. It is the only medicine of its kind devised by an educated and skilled physician.

Mrs. Sarah E. Rains, of Dayton, Cass Co., Mo., in a letter to Dr. Pierce, writes: "It was in the winter of 1890 that my sufferings commenced. It was close to my time of confinement. I took the grip, and that with the labor pains all went to my head. I suffered dreadfully, and when I gave birth to my little boy I kept getting worse. I doctored but nothing did me any good. I had nervous spasms and was delirious—Oh, no tongue can express my sufferings. I was advised by a lady to try your medicine and I did. I got one bottle of the 'Favorite Prescription' and one of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I had taken two-thirds of the medicine when it commenced to work. I began to feel better, and still continued getting better. In a short time I felt like another woman. I gained strength and flesh. I am now forty-one years of age. This is true, and it was your medicine that saved my life."

Dr. Pierce's 1000-page book, "The People's Medical Adviser" sent, paper-bound, free for the cost of customs and mailing only, 21 one-cent stamps; or, cloth-bound 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

STRAWBERRY TESTS.

The Varieties Most Suitable For Profitable General Cultivation.

At the recent meeting of the Ontario Experimental Union, held at the Agricultural College, Guelph, Prof. H. L. Hutt, the experimenting horticulturist of the institution, gave a report on the results of the recent experiments with strawberries grown on the college grounds. He has observed an extra growth of plants as a result of the careful removal of the blossoms of the first season. This only confirms our old experience, that in order to secure the heaviest crop the second year (which is the main and usually the only fruiting year, as strawberries are handled by good growers), we have to adopt the practice of preventing all fruit setting the same season that the bed is established. Then in order to have a full crop, we must have full matted rows. With varieties that are good plant-makers, like Wilson, Crescent, Haverland, Bubach, Warfield, etc., we have no difficulty in securing the full stand of plants, in an average fair season, even in starting the bed we put the plants two feet apart. This is the distance which Prof. Hutt recommends for planting such sorts, while 18 inches is as much as poor plant-makers should be spread apart in the row at the start.

Next, for a heavy yield, we want the heavy yielders. Among them, Warfield was found to be at the head. After these, and, in a pinch, might be used for the same purpose. Haverland and Warfield are among the earliest to give ripe fruit. Rio stands second in the list, although it stands third in the order of yield. Michel's Early, stands third for early and gives a large yield for an early sort, but the fruit is small and soft. Warfield stands fourth for earliness, and is the great berry for the west, and for heavy land and plenty of moisture, but seems not so good for light, dry soils. Among the latest varieties, Prof. Hutt mentioned Edgar Queen, Equinox and Mrs. Cleveland.

The Currie strawberry, illustrated above, was originated by M. T. Thompson's Sons, of Rio Vista, Va., from seed of the Haverland. It has been thoroughly tried from Canada to Texas. Its season of ripening is from medium to early, and from all that have tried it is claimed to be superior to the parent. Professor Green of the Ohio experimental, says it bears some resemblance to the Haverland in habit of growth and shape of berries, but the berries are larger, better colored, more glossy and firmer. It is scarlet color, with a nice green calyx, making it very showy when in crates.

KING RED RASPBERRY.

ton is much like it. Warfield has a good leaf and a very firm berry. Haverland is one of the best for home cultivation. Bubach was the 13th, and Crescent the 23th, in the order of best yielders. Haverland was found at the head in general health and power to resist rust. Among the perfect flowering sorts (those named all being pistillates), Saunders was found first in productiveness and vigor. Prof. Hutt prefers to grow the imperfect and perfect bloomers in alternate rows, in order to insure full fruit setting and therefore best yield. The question is what varieties to plant together. Haverland was the first to show bloom. Van Deman, a perfect-flowering sort, is also an early bloomer and might be used to furnish pollen for the other. Lovett's Early and Gandy bloom soon

Early History of the Codling Moth.

At the Cornell Experiment Station at Ithaca last year the early life history of the codling moth worm was very closely watched. It was found that when the worm hatches out it is not strong enough to attack the skin of the green apple except where it has been kept tender by the calyx of the blossom. Hence the great advantage of spraying just after the apples are set, and before their increase in weight turns the fruit downward. In its upright position some portion of the arsenic is caught on the calyx and is deposited on the skin of the apple, just under it. As the codling moth lays her eggs near the blossom end the young worm does not go far before he gets a fatal dose, the very smallest quantity of arsenic proving always fatal to him. It shows also that to prevent the codling worm's depredations there is no need of spraying until after the blossoms have fallen, and there is no danger of poisoning bees in search of honey.

SIEVES ON THE FARM.

ers how he ever got along without them. They will sort and "size" various articles, beans, peas, grain, etc., and will clean the dirt out of many farm products. They will take out the coarsely-cracked corn for the older fowls, and separate the finer parts for the chicks, and so one might go on enumerating their conveniences.

Sieves are easily made. Get wire-cloth with mesh running from coarse to fine, and saw sections from grocery boxes for frames, on which to tack the wirecloth. Nail a small strip of wood over the edges and the sieve is complete. The cut shows a deep sieve with an arrangement for "sizing" an article into three or more grades. The sieve in the position indicated by the dotted lines is permanently fastened in place, and is very coarse in mesh. Below are two sliding frames with meshes finer and still finer. Thus with one shaking three, or even four, assortments can be made.

A Grindstone Device.

A correspondent of The Rural New Yorker has devised a contrivance for turning a grindstone by means of which one can both turn and grind at the same time with comparative ease. The inventor gives the following instructions for constructing the device, which is shown in the accompanying cut.

Take the small sprocket wheels and chain from an old worn binder or other farm machinery, and gear it two to one; that is, the lower or crank shaft wheel must have twice as many cogs as the one on the stone shaft. Use a stone 20 or more inches in diameter, and be sure to get a good one. An Amherst is better than a Berea for all purposes. If geared higher than two to one, it will not turn fast enough. It is the fast motion that cuts. One may find an excellent pair of cranks from some old bicycle; a friend gave me mine.

"Half a span of angry steel" will produce no more fatal results than a neglected cold or cough. For all throat and lung diseases, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best remedy. It is invaluable in cases of croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, and in grippe.

Mrs. T. S. Hawkins, Chattanooga, Tenn. says: "Shiloh's Vitalizer 'Saved my Life. I consider it the best remedy for a debilitated system I ever used." For dyspepsia, liver or kidney trouble it excels. Price 75c. Sold by John Nugent 339 George Street.

Damp Weather and Roup.

There is more roup in the spring months than in winter, due to spring rains and dampness. While the drafts of air in the poultry-house may not be cold, yet they are damp and chilly, rendering the fowls very uncomfortable. It is at night that fowls seem to take disease. During the day they are active and at work, but at night they cannot change their positions on the roost, an dare consequently helpless to avoid damp drafts of air. The longer days and warmth at midday induce the fowls to remain outside during the spring season, and they consequently do not resort to shelter in damp spells. It is then that they are frequently attacked by roup. A little extra attention until dry weather sets in will greatly aid in preventing roup and the liability of disease.

Surplus of Women.

The surplus of women in France is returned at less than a tenth of what it is in Germany, and less than an eighth of the excess in England.

No other oil and no other medicine has ever been discovered which can take the place of Cod-liver Oil in all conditions of wasting. New remedies come, live their little day and die, but Cod-liver Oil remains the rock on which all hope for recovery must rest. When it is scientifically prepared, as in Scott's Emulsion, it checks the progress of the disease, the congestion and inflammation subside and the process of healing begins. There is the whole truth. BUILT UP THE SYSTEM IN A WONDERFUL MANNER.

James A. Bell, of Beaverton, Ont., brother of the Rev. John Wesley Bell, B.D., prostrated by nervous headaches

A victim of the trouble for several years.

South American Nervine effected a complete cure.

In their own particular field few men are beter known than the Rev. John Wesley Bell, B.D., and his brother Mr. James A. Bell. The former will be recognised by his thousands of friends all over the country as the popular and able missionary superintendent of the Royal Templars of Temperance. Among the 20,000 members of this order in Ontario his counsel is sought on all sorts of occasions. On the public platform he is one of the strong men of the day, battling against the evils of intemperance. Equally well known is Mr. Bell in other provinces of the Dominion, having been for years a member of the Manitoba Methodist Conference and part of this time was stationed in Winnipeg. His brother, Mr. James A. Bell, is a highly respected resident of Beaverton, where his influence, though perhaps more circumscribed than that of his eminent brother, is none the less effective and productive of good. Of recent years, however, the working ability of Mr. James A. Bell has been sadly marred by severe attacks of nervous headache, accompanied by indigestion. Who can do fit work when this trouble takes hold of them and especially when it becomes chronic, as was, seemingly, the case with Mr. Bell? The trouble reached such intensity that last June he was completely prostrated. In this condition a friend recommended South American Nervine. Ready to try anything and everything, though he thought he had covered the list of proprietary medicines, he secured a bottle of this great discovery. A second bottle of the medicine was taken and the work was done. Employing his own language: "Two bottles of South American Nervine immediately relieved my headaches and have built up my system in a wonderful manner." Let us not deprecate the good our clergymen and social reformers are doing in the world, but how ill-fitted they would be for their work were it not the relief that South American Nervine brings to them when physical ills overtake them, and when the system, as a result of hard, earnest and continuous work, breaks down. Nervine treats the system as the wise reformer treats the evils he is battling against. It strikes at the root of the trouble. All disease comes from disorganization of the nerve centers. This is a scientific fact. Nervine at once works on these nerve centers; gives to them health and vigor; and then there courses through the system strong, healthy, life-maintaining blood, and nervous troubles of every variety are things of the past.

THE YUKON COMPANY

Seeking Enormous Powers From the Government

THEY WANT TO RUN EVERYTHING

And Ask the Ministry to Guarantee Three Per Cent. on Bonds to the Extent of a Million and a Quarter Dollars —The Business of the Railway Committee.

Ottawa, April 28.—(Special.)—The British Yukon Chartered Company is seeking enormous powers by a bill now before the House. Besides authorising construction of railways, running of steamers, and carrying on mining, etc., it seeks to do postal and police service for the Dominion Government, compensation therefor to be paid by a royalty on precious metals mined in the Yukon territory. The capital of the company is to be a million pounds in shares of £1 each, of which 750,000 will be preference shares. These preference shares are to rank first for dividends up to 5 per cent. If the profits do not reach that figure the 250,000 ordinary shares receive no dividend. The company also seeks power to issue bonds to the amount of £10,000 per mile upon its railway. As previously stated the company wants a guarantee from the Government on a million and a quarter dollars at 3 per cent.

Mr. W. B. McMurrich of the Toronto branch of the Navy League, and A. J. Wickham, secretary, accompanied by Messrs Lount, Osler and Russell, M. P.'s, waited upon Mr. Laurier this morning and pressingly urged that the Government should take the initiative in the furtherance of the memorial sent to the Governor-General in December last asking that the Home Government be requested to adopt a comprehensive scheme for protection of inter-British trade routes by mercantile cruisers, manned and officered by a reformed royal navy reserve, which would permit the enrollment abroad of colonial seamen. It was pointed out that the Home Government had already allowed this concession in regard to Hong Kong, and were it extended to Canada it would have the effect of getting many of our young men into the navy. Mr Laurier said the subject was entirely new to him, but he sympathized much with the object the deputation had in view, and would bring the matter before his colleagues for consideration.

The special committee on the railway bills of Messrs. Casey and Maclean held a meeting this morning. Among the railway men present were Messrs. William Wainwright, assistant to the General Manager of the G. T. R., and Thomas Tait, Assistant General Manager of the C. P. R. It was the intention of the committee to hear the employes first, but as none of them turned up, the evidence of the employers was taken. Mr. Wainwright said that, bill or no bill, the Grand Trunk was doing the work called for. They were equipping freight cars with air brakes at a rapid rate, and already 2291 had been so equipped. Last year $40,000 was spent in raising all classes of box cars to a uniform height.

Mr. Tait stated that there was a standard height for the draw bars of freight cars, but it was impossible to have the tops of loaded cars of a uniform height, owing to the varying nature of the contents. In the future he did not think there would be any inconvenience or danger to trainmen. The C.P.R. intended to put on air brakes as fast as possible. The Westinghouse Company held all patents, and if Mr. Maclean's bill compelling the equipment of freight cars with air brakes was carried it would force the railways to buy from the Westinghouse Company at their own terms. In 1895 there were 2023 engines in Canada, of which 1500 freight engines were not equipped with air brakes. To equip these would cost $750,000. There were 57,447 freight cars, to equip which would cost $4,900,000, and the companies would have to borrow for this purpose. Last year the C.P.R. equipped 1463 cars and 53 engines, and this year he had authority to equip 3000 cars and 100 engines. Mr. Tait considered the fact that the railways were making fair progress should be sufficient for Parliament and for the men.

On the whole the railway companies opposed the devices and appliances which were asked for in both Mr. Casey's and Mr. Maclean's bills, considering that they were not equal to those now in use.

Mr. Foster, who is still a wheelman, presented a number of bicycle petitions to-day. Several other members are taking to cycling. Messrs. Flint and Davin ride the silent steed, and Clarke Wallace is negotiating for a tricycle.

The body of Joseph Girouard, a mill hand at J. R. Both's mill, who was drowned last fall, was found yesterday near Gatineau Point. Girouard was working at a band saw when a stick flew back, striking him with terrible force, sending him head foremost through a trapdoor to the water below. The body was not very much decomposed.

Mr. James Cotton, a well-known gentleman in this locality, died at Coteau du Lac at the advanced age of 86 years. Mr. Cotton in the early fifties was a very prominent figure in Western Canada, and as a contractor was interested in many important and extensive public works, notably in Port Stanley and the York county roads. In 1865 he came to Ottawa, bought out the old Union newspaper and established The Ottawa Times, and conducted it till about 1873, during which time it was known as the Conservative Government organ.

Mr. Ross Robertson will ask if the report of the commission which investigated the affairs of the Q. O. R. of Toronto had been received and if the report recommended the reinstatement of Col. Hamilton.

Hon. A. G. Blair is confined to his bed by a high fever.

Hon. Mr. Tarte and Mdme. Tarte entertained a number of ladies and gentlemen at luncheon in the Senate restaurant this afternoon.

Progress in the East.

I have in my mind the answer of a punkah puller to an English lady, who encouraged him to improve his position. "Mem Sahib," he said, when he at last grasped her meaning, "my father pulled a punkah, my grandfather pulled a punkah, all my ancestors for four million ages pulled a punkah, and before that the god who founded our cast pulled a punkah over Vishnu!"—From Sir Grant Duff's Diary.

Crichton's Accomplishments.

James Crichton, better remembered as "The Admirable Crichton," could read, write and dispute in twelve different languages. He was an expert swordsman, a civil and military engineer, a mathematician, a dramatist, and although but 21 years old at the time of his death he was the master of all the science and learning of his age.

Council Meeting.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The Council met in special session in the Township Treasurer's office, on Saturday, April 24th, having been called by the reeve to open and consider tenders that had been received for road grading, and to let the contract therefor, also to adopt some improved method of road construction and repairing, and rules and regulations governing the same. All the members were present: The Reeve, Mr. J. McIntosh, presiding. The minutes of the last meeting were left to be read and approved at the next regular session.

The Clerk presented and opened the following tenders for road grading, as advertised for:—Adam King, to operate grader at $1.75 per day; J. W. Taylor, to operate grader at $1.50 per day; Robt. Fowler, one team and driver, at $3.00 per day; James M. Davidson, to operate grader, at $1.75 per day; James M. Davidson, one team and driver, at $3.00 per day; R. Parnell, an operator and two teams with drivers, at $7.50 per day; Foster Moncrief, an operator and two teams with drivers, at $6.25 per day.

Moved by Messrs. Hunter and Yelland, that the tender of Foster Moncrief, to supply men and teams to operate the road grader, at the sum of $6 25 per day, be accepted, and the Reeve and Clerk are hereby authorised to execute the approved regulations and agreement governing the same with the said contractor.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Yelland and Bradburn that the Reeve and Councillors Hunter and Madill be a committee to consult with a committee of Council of Cavan and arrange for road repairing for 1897, upon the boundary between Cavan and Monaghan.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Yelland and Bradburn that the reeve and Councillors Hunter and Madill be a committee to consult with a committee of council of Cavan, and arrange for road repairing for 1897 upon the boundary between Cavan and Monaghan—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Bradburn and Yelland, that, whereas, in the opinions of this council in order to obtain better results from the control and expenditure of labour in the maintenance of the public roads in this township, it is desirable to introduce and adopt an improved and more modern system than the one existing at the present time. Be it therefore resolved that the clerk be and is hereby instructed to draft and submit to this council a bylaw for passing at a meeting to be held in the Town Hall May 25th—to authorise the commutation of statute labour throughout the entire township at a rate of 50 cents in lieu per day thereof; and also to unite the present 28 road divisions proportionately so as to make four road districts in the place thereof—Carried.

The clerk was then instructed to notify parties in any way occupying or obstructing the public highways in this municipality that the enactment of bylaws prohibiting the same will in future be stringently enforced.

Council then adjourned until May 25th, to meet as a Court of Revision on the roll of 1897, and for the transaction of public business.

LOCAL LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

[Supplied by H.P. Kennedy, live stock dealer, 240 George street, Peterborough.]

The demand for live stock is again increasing, as the local dealers are now rid of their Easter stock and prepared to buy readily. The market continues firm for all choice butchers' and shipping stock. Export steers and heifers are bringing readily 4c per lb, but these cattle must weigh 1,200 lbs and upwards. Choice butchers' stock steers and heifers are bringing 3½c to 3¾c. There has been a good demand for stockers this spring for the Northwest and American markets at prices ranging from 3c to 3c for steers weighing 800 to 900, with year olds and two year olds selling at $17 and $25 per head, respectively. Fat sheep are bringing 3c to 3½c per lb, and yearlings 5c to 5½c; spring lambs, choice, $3.00 per cwt. Fat hogs are offering freely at $4.75 to $4.90 for selects and $4.25 to $4.50 for heavy fats. Mr. H. P. Kennedy says he is prepared to pay the above prices for all the different kinds of stock as he is shipping every week.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The Debate on the Budget Will Close To-Day

BY AGREEMENT OF THE LEADERS

Several Questions Asked and Answered, After Which Rev. Mr. Douglas Took Up the Tariff Debate and Was Followed by Mr. E. Clarke Wallace of West York.

Ottawa, April 29.—(Special.)—The leaders of the parties have agreed that the debate on the Budget shall be concluded to-morrow.

Mr. Laurier, replying to Mr. Lariviere, who is very persistent in asking for information on the school question, said that the negotiations which took place were confidential. When they were concluded the terms of the settlement adopted were communicated to the press, taken to Manitoba by the Manitoba Government, and afterwards embodied in an act of the Legislature.

Mr. McCleary started in to discuss the dismissal of Mr. Fairbrother, postmaster at Beamsville. He referred to the brutal treatment of Armenians by Turks, but such treatment was mild compared with that to which the Government had subjected one of its employes. He was about to enter into a discussion of the merits of the case, when Mr. Davies took the point that Mr. McCleary was out of order, as he had a notice on the paper governing this matter.

Mr. Speaker ruled that the point was well taken, and accordingly Mr. McCleary was shut off.

Mr. Paterson, replying to Mr. McNeill, said that he has not determined whether the tariffs of Germany and Belgium were on the whole as favorable to Canada as that made in schedule D of the new tariff—the reciprocal clause—is to those countries.

Mr. McNeill said it would seem, then, that the Government had placed this resolution on the paper in blank ignorance. Mr. McNeill proceeded thus far when he was interrupted by loud cries of "Order."

Mr. Davies arose and said the hon. gentleman could not anticipate the tariff discussion, and that was plainly and palpably what he was doing by expressing such an opinion.

Mr. Speaker said if Mr. McNeill was discussing a subject which arose out of the tariff resolutions he was not now in order. If it were a subject which had arisen since the tariff resolutions were placed on the table of the House, he did not see how he could prevent him from going on.

Mr. McNeill once more, therefore, returned to the charge and made remarks about the conduct of the Government in placing these resolutions upon the order paper without knowing what effect they would have. He was again interrupted by loud cries of "Order," and great confusion existed, but the Speaker succeeded in restoring order and good humor all round. He ruled, however, against Mr. McNeill discussing the matter when it was properly before the House in the tariff debate.

Mr. Maclean (East York) called attention to an advertisement in a Montreal paper yesterday, signed by the Belgian Consul-General, stating that Belgium would insist upon goods from that country receiving the most favored nation treatment in Canada. He asked the Government what was their intention in regard to this announcement.

The Premier: The answer of the Government is what has already been stated. The Government do not admit that the German and Belgian treaties apply to the resolutions now before the House.

Mr. Foster: I want to ask whether it was to be understood or not that when an order was given to the Customs officials to allow British goods in at 1-8 reduction, that that included or excluded the British colonies.

Mr. Fielding: The decision of the Controller of Customs is that the only country at present entitled to the privileges of the reciprocal tariff is the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. There may be other countries which may become entitled to those privileges upon representations, but the decision of the Customs Department is to apply that tariff at present to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and to no other country.

Mr. Foster: Has any report been made by the Controller of Customs up to the present, in accordance with that clause to the Governor-General-in-Council, and have the Government acted formally upon that report?

Mr. Fielding: The judgment of the Government is that the Controller of Customs has ample authority under the terms of the resolution to act for himself, subject to any later action which the Governor-in-Council may be pleased to take, and therefore no report from the Controller of Customs was necessary to immediate action, and I think I am correct in stating that, while the Controller of Customs has discussed the subject, no formal order has been passed up to this moment.

Mr. Paterson, in answer to Mr. Ivan, said he would lay on the table the instructions sent to the different Customs officials calling for proof of the British origin of goods admitted under the preferential arrangements.

Rev. Mr. Douglas continued the debate on the tariff. He said he proposed to show that it affected the Great Northwest, where he lived. He would be disposed to accept the tariff, but there were some things he must bring to the notice of the Government. He was not in a position to agree to everything that had been done. He took exception to the duty on agricultural implements. He held that protection had not done the West any great service, and it was a matter for regret that the new tariff should do more for the manufacturer than the old tariff, because the duty on agricultural implements had been retained. Continuing, he claimed that the freight on coal oil from Petrolea to Lethbridge, $6.06 per ton, was three times what ought to be a fair rate, so that the reduction of one cent per gallon was but a slight relief. However, the people of the Northwest did not want to destroy the Petrolia industry, and if the Government would but allow the coal oil to go through in tank cars, that would be equivalent to a reduction of 3 1-2 cents. He also wanted the duty reduced on implements and fruit. The people of the Northwest were pretty well satisfied with the tariff, recognising that it was but an instalment. He could understand the Opposition's vexation because their policy had been scooped from them. [Hear, hear.] If England took our surplus agricultural products we should take English manufactured goods, if they were better and cheaper than we could make in Canada.

Mr. N. Clarke Wallace replied that if, as the hon. gentleman boasted, the Government had scooped the Conservative policy, it meant that their tariff was largely protective, and how did the honorable gentleman's satisfaction with that square his own and his friends' campaign speeches? [Hear, hear.] But Mr. Wallace did not agree that the tariff was wholly a protectionist one; neither did it fulfil the pledge of free raw material. For instance, there was the duty on coal, and the duty of over 100 per cent. upon uncleaned rice. What the Government ought to do was to impose an export duty on saw logs and pulp wood. Then the ex-Controller proceeded to analyze the tariff changes.

Taking the tariff as a whole, said Mr. Wallace, in conclusion, he favored it in so far as it remained unchanged, but whenever changes had been made they would result in the wiping out of Canadian industries that furnished cheap and honest goods to the people. Mr. Laurier could satisfy his free trade supporters by pointing them to the speeches of the Finance Minister and Sir Richard Cartwright; and when his protectionist friends complained, he could point them to the nine-tenths of the Tory tariff left untouched. Because he believed the prosperity of Canada was bound up in a protective tariff, and that when the Government had departed from it they had made a very grave mistake—for those reasons he hoped the resolutions would not pass. [Cheers.]

Mr. Macdonald (Huron) defended the tariff as a great reform of the fiscal system. He highly eulogized Mr. Laurier as a statesman and leader.

Mr. Bennett said that there was a grave commercial crisis in Canada at present, due to the Government's bungling over the tariff. He asked Mr. Laurier what had become of his promise of free coal and free iron. Then he proceeded to discuss the lumber industry and strongly advocated the imposition of an export duty on logs.

Mr. Davis (Saskatchewan) accepted the tariff as a great boon to the Northwest. He was pleased that the luxuries had been taxed. He would have liked to see a duty on tea. He wanted the Government to grapple with the transportation problem. He said the freight on a carload of apples from Seaforth to Prince Albert was $5.18.

Mr. Kendry defended the principle of specific duties, particularly that on woolens. The removal of specific duties would cause Canada to be flooded with cheap shoddy goods from England. The closing of the woolen mills would mean a loss to farmers, as it would deprive them of their market for wool.

Dr. Roche (Marquette) told a story of broken political promises by the Liberals with embellishments, which created great applause among his own friends.

Mr. Wilson (Lennox) in the course of a practical review of the tariff proposals, quoted from the evidence given before commissions and showed that the views of at least two industries—the pork packers and furniture manufacturers—had prevailed with the Government. What the Canadian manufacturer had to dread was surplus manufactures from the United States, which would be disposed of in Canada at slaughter prices. He sympathized with the desire to extend preferential treatment to Great Britain, but not with the tendency of the tariff to discriminate in favor of the United States, and in this connection he protested vigorously against the free corn proposal, as American corn would simply displace Canadian coarse grains in the home market.

Mr. Casey moved the adjournment of the debate, and the House adjourned at midnight.

DESPERATION OF LOVE.

The Hired Man Wanted the Farmer's Daughter, the Old Folks Objected and Three Deaths Followed.

Fresno, Cal., April 29.—A triple tragedy was committed yesterday at Red Banks, a farming settlement 20 miles from here. As a result, Mrs. John Quail and her daughter are dying and their assailant, James Brooks, is dead. Brooks, who was formerly employed as a laborer on Quail's ranch, was discharged for persistently making love to Miss Lulu. He appeared at Quail's yesterday, armed with a shotgun, and shot the girl and her mother. Brooks left after setting fire to the house. He then went to a neighboring barn, to which he set fire, went inside and was burned to death.

NEW CABINET FORMED

King George Now Has a Different Set of Advisers.

TURKISH ATTACK ON PHARSALA.

The Victorious Troops of the Sultan Follow Up Their Success at Larissa — M. Delyannis Informed by King George That His Resignation Would be Acceptable.

London, April 29.—The Athens correspondent of The Standard says:

The Turkish army, or its advance guard, has followed up the success before Larissa, and at 6 o'clock this evening (Thursday) began an attack in force on the Greek position at Pharsala.

The Official List.

Athens, April 29.—The following is the official list of the new Cabinet Ministers, as corrected this evening:

Premier and Minister of Marine, M. Ralli; Minister of War, M. Tsamavos; Minister of Finance, M. Simopoulo; Minister of Education, M. Carapanos; Minister of the Interior, M. Teokaski.

Demetrius Ralli, the new Premier, and Minister of Marine, was the leader of the Opposition. He has been Minister of Justice and Minister of Interior and is well known as an able lawyer and orator. He is 50 years old and studied at the Universities of Athens and Paris.

Admiral Canaris and M. Deligeorgis as well as M. Sotiropoulo, having declined portfolios, the new Ministry will take on a composite character and rely for its support upon a coalition of followers of M. Ralli and Tricoupists.

M. Delyannis made the following statement this afternoon: "Yesterday King George summoned me to the palace and declared that exceptional circumstances compelled him to replace the Cabinet and to form a new Ministry from the ranks of the Opposition. He begged me to second his efforts. I refused to tender my resignation, not because of my love of power, but in order that such a step might not be misinterpreted. I urged the King to use the privilege of the crown, declaring that I was ready to sign the Royal decree, provided the latter cast no blame upon us. I added that there was no reason to fear that such a measure would be considered by Europe as a censure upon the Government's policy. Judgment would be formed as to that after the new Cabinet had been tried."

M. Delyannis added: "I cannot divulge the policy which I considered necessary. I can only say that the country would have emerged from its trial without loss of territory, and could have obtained a rectification of the northern frontier by abandoning Crete according to the demands of the powers. The latter measure would have facilitated the task, inasmuch as the principle of Ottoman integrity would not have been impaired, while the peace of Europe would have been assured because of the rectification of the frontier line adjudged in the treaty of Berlin."

Fighting Going On.

Athens, April 29.—(11 p.m.)—The correspondent of the Associated Press says that according to a despatch from Pharsala General Smolenski's brigade has been engaged since 1 p.m. to-day in a fierce conflict with the Turkish army corps beyond Velestino, in the direction of Alviale. A battalion of Evzones and a battery of artillery have been sent to reinforce the Greeks, whose position appears to be favorable.

Trikhala Falls.

Athens, April 30.—(1 a.m.)—A despatch just received from Pharsala, dated yesterday (Thursday), at 4 p.m., says that a Turkish army corps from Larissa has occupied Trikhala unresisted. The Greeks have fallen back on Pharsala. Railway communication between Volo and Pharsala has been restored. The advance guards of the Turkish divisions have moved forward from all points and taken up various positions on the Thessalian plains. Both armies are now in immediate contact and a great battle is believed to be imminent.

Women and Children Died.

Rome, April 29.—A despatch from Athens to The Messagero says that 600 women and children died during the terrible retreat from Tyrnavo to Larissa.

Delyannis Bounced.

Athens, April 29, 4 p.m.—The King summoned M. Delyannis, the Premier, this morning, and called upon him to tender his resignation. His Majesty subsequently entrusted the Opposition leaders with the task of forming a new Cabinet.

FLOURING MILLS BURNED.

Vick & Sons' Establishment at Orillia and George Reid's Mills at Dunnville Gone Up in Smoke.

Orillia, April 29.—Early this morning Messrs. George Vick & Sons' large roller flour mill was completely destroyed by fire. Loss about $50,000; insured in the Canadian Millers' Mutual Insurance Company of Hamilton for $5000; the Millers' & Manufacturers' Insurance Company of Toronto for $1500, and the Phoenix Insurance Company of Montreal for $3000. The cause of the fire is a mystery, it having originated in the grain warehouse in which was stored about 7000 bushels of wheat, besides a quantity of flour, etc.

Mill Burned at Dunnville.

Dunnville, Ont., April 29.—A serious fire occurred here about 9 o'clock this morning, destroying the large flour and feed mill of Mr. George Reid. The loss was $8000. Insurance $1500 in the London, Mutual & Waterloo. Cause of fire unknown.

Saloon Keeper Shot Dead.

Chicago, April 29.—Emil Sohlern, a saloon keeper at 197 Wells-street, was shot and instantly killed just before midnight last night by one of three men who had entered the saloon for the purpose of robbery. Twenty men were in the place at the time drinking, but none of them made any effort to capture the robbers or offer resistance, and the murderer and his companions escaped.

A MANUFACTURER TALKS SENSE.

All our manufacturers do not want a complete "cinch" in the way of protection, for some are willing to make some allowance for energy and enterprise.

Members for the Maritime Provinces are quoting with much satisfaction a statement by Mr. Jas. Pender, the wire nail manufacturer of St. John, N.B., that after having carefully considered the tariff as it affected his line, he was perfectly satisfied with it—in fact, he had made up his mind to increase the output of his factory very largely. The conditions would make his profits somewhat less, but he would greatly extend his operations and would thus be able to manufacture more cheaply. In this there would be a benefit to the consumer, who would get his nails more cheaply, and to himself in that he would have the advantages which always go with the largest factories. He did not know what action the Ontario men would take, but he supposed they would stick to the work and meet all possible American competition. They could do it. In the United States there are three nail-making machines in existence for every two in operation, and no doubt there were numbers of people who would be ready to carry them across the lake and compete for the Ontario and general Canadian business. The tariff, while lower than had been anticipated, was still large enough to enable the Canadian manufacturer with grit to stick to and hold his market.

This man talks sense and has evidently got beyond the nursery stage of his business.

THE DIAMOND JUBILEE.

There is is no doubt of our loyalty, yet we do not seem to be taking steps that will result in providing any palpable and enduring monument of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee. During the celebration of her Majesty's golden jubilee in 1887, there were brought forth from their place of safe keeping by old men, medals they received as children on the occasion of the jubilee of George III in 1810. Why not get some public-spirited citizen to take steps to bring about the striking of a diamond jubilee medal to be presented to all the school children of the town on the 22nd of next June? This would not be a costly matter, and such a medal would constitute a souvenir that would be treasured during life and transmitted to future generations, as an emblem of an an event that is not likely to be repeated in British or the world's history—a sovereign reigning the long period of sixty years and growing in the love and veneration of her millions of subjects every year of her reign.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THOUGH the margin is narrow sometimes, the Liberal always seems to get there. The recount in Colchester is ended. Firman McClure, Liberal, is elected by six of a majority over Dr. Muir, the Conservative candidate.

NOTHING succeeds like success. With failure the idol of yesterday becomes the despised of to-day. The Greek reverses in the field have caused the overthrow of the ministry at Athens, and the [illegible] tion is now [illegible] cabinet.

THE Conservative journals had considerable reference to the downward tendency of the stock markets shortly after the elections of June 23, that put the Liberals into power. Now is their chance to make a few remarks upon the upward tendency of the market since the new tariff was announced. But we shall not have any comments on that subject. It doesn't please them. Canadian stocks are quoted firmer.

WHY do the town council pass bylaws if certainly it would seem not to be enforced. The curfew bylaw is violated every night, and the bicycle bylaw runs in the same class. We see the walks occupied by bicyclists every day by the dozen. Under such circumstances the capture and punishment of a stray rider is very like an injustice—if not it is not equal justice for which one is fined a score escape.

Mr. Alex Gunn is the new Kingston postmaster. He will enter upon his duties on May 1st. His appointment is very popular in the Limestone city. It is a good appointment, such as the Laurier Government is in the habit of making. The Whig says: "Mr. Gunn is one of Kingston's best known and most highly respected citizens. He is known and esteemed by the large majority of Kingstonians irrespective of party leanings. He has been a life-long Liberal, and carried the colours of the party to victory in this city against the greatest Conservative Canada has ever known, and, notwithstanding that the contest was a very spirited one, Mr. Gunn came out of it with the warm esteem and respect of his political friends, and all who know him—'Tories' as well as 'Grits'—will sincerely congratulate him on his appointment."

ENGLISH CHEESE SITUATION.

A Few Points of Interest to Cheese Men.

Mr. A. W. Grant, the well known cheese importer, had something interesting to say to the Montreal Gazette regarding the situation on the other side.

"The cheese situation in England," said Mr. Grant, "is a very peculiar one—about 60 per cent. of the retailers are selling cheese to the public at less than the wholesale price. Some of the biggest shopkeepers in England are selling cheese as low as 5½d. and 6d. per lb. retail, when the same cheese could have been sold wholesale at 6d. to 6½d. per lb. The other 40 per cent. are cutting up cheese at 7d. per lb., but of course those who are retailing cheese at 5d. and 6d. a lb. are doing 80 per cent. of the trade. There is a feeling in England in some quarters that cheese should at no time be sold at over 5d. and 6d. a lb. retail to the public. In order for the retailers to sell cheese at these prices we should buy cheese here at not more than 7c to 8c per lb. Some of the big firms in England who have shops are practically dictating to the dairy farmers of this country what price they shall sell their cheese at, or in other words they say, We shall not give you more than 'so much' for them, and we won't allow our competitors to give you any more than we will give, for the reason that we shall sell the cheese to the public at 5d to 6d a lb. retail, compelling them to either meet our competition or go out of the business. So now it is a fight between the dairy farmers of this country and the big retail shopkeepers in England as to who shall make the prices. It usually takes two to make a bargain.

"I think fully as many of our best cheese could be sold in England at 6d to 7d a lb retail as are now retailed at 5d to 6d per lb. If my conclusions are correct the farmers of this country would realize the difference, or about from 1c to 2c per lb more for their cheese, but unfortunately this is not likely to be the case.

"The statistical position of cheese in England to-day is the strongest for the past seven years. There are practically no English cheese, and the new Cheshire cheese when I left England, on the 7th of April, was selling at 70s per cwt., or equal to 15c per lb. Of course these prices will not be maintained.

"I am very glad that factorymen have seen it to their advantage to make as few fodder cheese as possible, and I hope those who have made them will keep them on the shelves until they are about two or three weeks old, so that they will be cured and meaty when they are sent forward, as the cheese does not properly cure in the box.

"As regards butter, there is a very kindly feeling towards Canadian butter in the British markets, and the mechanical refrigeration on the steamers with a maximum temperature of 35 will mean that our butter will be laid down in almost perfect condition, and we would realize 1c or 2c per lb. more, simply on account of condition and freshness in comparison with previous seasons when refrigeration was so poor.

"Everything looks prosperous for the dairy interests of this country."

PLANTING TREES.

Hints on Preparing the Ground—The Improved Nursery Pruning.

Perhaps the most important operation in planting an orchard is the preparation and planting of the trees. In digging trees in the nursery all the roots are generally cut off by the spade or digger within one foot or less of the collar, and are very much in the condition illustrated in Figs. 1 and 2. In many cases the trees have only two or three main roots and very few laterals, the former very often torn and bruised as in Fig. 2. Now when the trees come out of the package the pruning they require to fit them properly for planting is, first to cut off smoothly all injured ends of the roots with a sharp knife. Then, as a large amount of the roots are destroyed, a balance between the top and root must be made by cutting the top back severely, as shown by the dotted lines at a, Fig. 1. In this pruning careful attention must be given to the formation of the head, and such branches as will injure the form of the head must be cut away entirely.

In pruning, a hole must be dug sufficiently large to allow the spreading out of the roots in a natural position. Surface soil should be thrown by itself, and if not of good quality some fertilizing material like fine ground bone, well decomposed stable manure or mild phosphate should be thoroughly mixed with it. Now place the tree in a proper position in the hole about one inch deeper than it stood in the nursery, and work in this soil around and under the roots, covering about three inches deep before treading it down. After this amount of soil has been thoroughly trodden down, throw in the remainder of the good soil loosely and the subsoil over all without treading down.

With the peach and pear trees and grapevines there is some danger of applying too much fertilizer, but with the apple, plum and quince there is little danger with the average cultivator of making the soil too rich. On ordinary soils from two to five large handfuls of fine bone, or two or three shovelfuls of fine manure well incorporated with the soil may be used with safety. Most fruit trees as received from the nursery have the main branches of the head not over four feet from the ground, and if the land is to be cultivated, in a few years they will interfere much with the use of the team among them. To form the head higher the matter must be attended to at or before planting. If the tree is in the condition shown in Fig. 1, all the lateral branches at a must be cut away, leaving a clean central leader from which new lateral branches start out as indicated from the dotted lines at b.

The main thing in forming a perfect head is to have the lateral branches distributed as far apart upon the axis as possible. If they all come out at nearly the same point, as illustrated at d, Fig. 2, the tree is liable to injury by splitting down when loaded with fruit. Especially is this true of the peach tree. Trees in the condition shown in Fig 2 should have some or all of the laterals cut off, as shown by the dotted lines at d, and a new head formed on the leader, as shown by dotted lines at c. The preparation given to the tree at time of planting is but a small part of that required to complete a shapely and well-proportioned head. During the summer the trees should be examined every two or three weeks and all buds starting into growth where not needed rubbed off, and any shoots tending to outgrow the others should have the end bud pinched out. With proper preparation at planting and a little care during the summers, at the end of the second or third year every tree should be perfectly formed, and this without the use of any instrument except the thumb and fore-finger nail. A well-started head is shown in Fig. 1, an improperly formed one in Fig. 2.—Farm and Home.

THE BRITISH BUDGET.

Gratifying Statement by Sir Michael Hicks-Beach.

A SURPLUS OF NEARLY £2,500,000

National Debt Reduced by Over Seven and a Half Millions During the Past Year—Trade Increased Five Per Cent.—The South African Policy Announced.

London, April 29.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, read the budget statement in the House of Commons to-day. The balanced account for 1896-'97 shows the exchequer revenue to be £103,950,000 and the expenditures £101,477,000, leaving a surplus of £2,473,000.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, who was heartily cheered, added that the national debt had been reduced £7,584,000 during the year, and that the total value of British trade during the last financial year was £738,000,000, an increase of five per cent. He dwelt upon the increased prosperity shown by this more than by the beer drunk and the tobacco consumed.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, the Liberal leader, referring to the £200,000 set apart in the budget estimates for strengthening the British garrisons in South Africa, said this sum was for a war policy in South Africa, which the Opposition was determined to resist.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, denounced the Liberal leader's remarks as being "pernicious, dangerous and unpatriotic."

Sir William Harcourt accused Mr. Chamberlain of trying to arouse a war feeling, and of using, in all his recent statements, "exasperating language, calculated to excite feelings of racial hatred in South Africa, which, however," he added, "thank God, have failed."

Sir William Harcourt's remarks were met with cries of "Oh!" Continuing, he said the policy of the Secretary of State for the Colonies intending to create a racial war was defeated by the good sense and feeling of the people of Cape Colony, and he pointed to the adoption of the recent conciliatory motion in the Parliament of Cape Colony as being a condemnation of this war policy, adding that he was happy to say the peaceful policy was supported by the Government of Cape Colony.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, here entered the House, and, amid cheers, Sir William Harcourt remarked: "In the presence of Mr. Chamberlain, I repeat that it was a defeat of an utterly unjustifiable attempt to excite ill-feeling.

"When we are asked to refuse a remission of the taxes of Great Britain in order to contribute money to promote warlike, aggressive operations in South Africa—[Oh! Oh!]—we oppose a most determined resistance. The proposal to apply money to unjustifiable purposes against the will of the people and Government of Cape Colony is one of the most injurious things with reference to the Empire ever submitted to the House of Commons."

Mr. Chamberlain said he had not expected to have to reply to such "pernicious and dangerous language." He classed Sir William Harcourt's utterances as being "unpatriotic in the highest degree, embarrassing to the Government, and injurious to the cause of peace."

Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain asserted that Sir William Harcourt's statements to the effect that the Government's policy had been rejected by the Cape Government and people were absolutely inaccurate. The policy of the Government, he explained, had not changed from the first. Only circumstances had changed to some extent. The Government's policy, Mr. Chamberlain added, is to maintain its obligations, not to engage in any aggressive operations, nor to attack the independence of a friendly state, but "to maintain our own rights and the rights of the nation.

"I had hoped," continued Mr. Chamberlain, "that our policy would continue to be non-partisan, but that hope has disappeared in the face of Sir William Harcourt's speech, and I now challenge him to raise the issue. [Cheers and counter-cheers.] Are the Opposition prepared to take issue with us when we say that, while we intend to observe our own obligations, we intend that obligations towards us shall also be maintained? The question between us and the Transvaal is not interference in the internal affairs upon our part, but breaches of the convention on the part of the Transvaal, and we are calling upon them in friendly terms to give us satisfaction."

Sir William Harcourt here interrupted Mr. Chamberlain by remarking: "You are asking for £200,000."

"What nonsense!" exclaimed Mr. Chamberlain, hotly.

Prolonged cheering greeted the sharp answer of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, who continued:

"We ask for £200,000, when everybody knows the Transvaal is asking for a million and for hundreds and hundreds of thousands.

"The Transvaal has been arming to an extent absolutely unjustifiable by an ordinary policy of defence. We have not complained, but the result has been that the present armaments of the Transvaal are altogether disproportionate to the defensive resources of Cape Colony, and the Transvaal's armaments, after spending considerably over a million upon them, are still going on. Batteries of artillery and Maxim guns, millions and millions of cartridges and hundreds of thousands of rifles have been imported into the Transvaal."

Mr. Chamberlain concluded with saying: "I do not believe there is a feeling to repudiate the policy of the Government. On the contrary, I believe the feeling of every loyal British subject at the Cape to be one of gratitude and satisfaction with Her Majesty's Government. I understand that they recognise their position as the representatives of the paramount power in South Africa, and are determined, in the often-used words, to maintain the integrity of all our rights under the convention."

The conclusion of Mr. Chamberlain's remarks were the signal for a tremendous outburst of cheering upon the part of the Conservatives.

Later, replying to Mr. Thomas Warner, Liberal member for the Lichfield division of Staffordshire, Mr. Chamberlain said that the despatch of a regiment of British infantry and a brigade of British artillery to Cape Colony was intended as a permanent increase of the Cape garrison.

Mr. Balfour, the First Lord of the Treasury, and the Government leader in the House, also deprecated Sir William Harcourt's language, and protested that the policy of the Government was not provocative.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, replying to Mr. Balfour, expressed his satisfaction at the statement just made by the First Lord of the Treasury, but said no one could doubt the existence at the Cape of a very widespread impression that war is imminent. Nor, he added, can anyone wonder that the Boers are arming after the Jameson attempt.

In conclusion, he expressed the hope that Great Britain did not and would not entertain such a suicidal and disgraceful policy as the incitement of a race war in Africa.

Sir William Harcourt's sudden and vehement attack caused a tumult on the Tory side of the House, and the Government front bench fell at once into animated colloquy. Mr. Balfour sent Mr. T. W. Russell, Liberal-Unionist member for South Tyrone, to bring Mr. Chamberlain into the House. When the Colonial Secretary arrived he was furious, and did nothing to conceal his rage.

Sir William Harcourt was saying, as Mr. Chamberlain entered the chamber: "I have said this was a war plot; I repeat it in his presence. This was a war plot, a war plot which missed fire."

Mr. Chamberlain snatched up a piece of paper, and Mr. Balfour and Mr. Goschen, First Lord of the Admiralty, rapidly told him what had passed, while he made quick notes of Harcourt's phrases. The excitement of the House was maintained at white heat, with cheers and counter cheers throughout both speeches.

Mr. Balfour did his best to calm matters down, and promised to give a day for discussion of the proposed grant at the earliest possible date.

The House then emptied into the lobby to discuss the scene.

CROW'S NEST RAILWAY.

Western Superintendents on the Way to Montreal to Be About Construction - Winnipeg News.

Winnipeg, Man., April 29.—(Special.)—General Superintendent Whyte of the Western division and Superintendent Maripole of the Pacific division are en route to Montreal to consult with Sir William Van Horne regarding the construction of the Crow's Nest Pass Railway. It is understood that the Government arrangement is now complete and the C.P.R. will go on with the work at once.

The Red River is now falling at all points and the worst of the flood is past. Winnipeg did not suffer at all, but Morris and Emerson were heavy losers by the overflow.

Hon. Clifford Sifton arrived here to-day. To-morrow he receives a deputation of the Board of Trade and City Council urging the Government to make the Red River navigable to steamboats between this city and Lake Winnipeg. On Saturday he returns to Ottawa, accompanied by Mr. Jameson, the member-elect for Winnipeg, and P. L. McMillan, Provincial Treasurer.

Monsignor Mery Del Val's visit here next week is awaited with interest. Those Catholics who desire to see the school settlement given a fair trial will present him with addresses setting forth their views.

The petition to unseat Mr. Lauson, the recently-elected member of the Legislature for St. Boniface, on the ground of undue interference by Archbishop Langevin and the priests, came before the courts to-day. It was adjourned to await the evidence of Mr. Pendergast, who is now in Ottawa.

JUBILEE ATTRACTIONS.

Miss Melville is now showing a very unique assortment of Jubilee Pins and Belts, 424 George Street.

A NEW SECRETARY FOR THE Y. M. C. A.

The Board Decides on Mr. Williamson, of Petrolea.

At a largely attended meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Board last night called for the purpose of selecting a new secretary, Mr. Cole, travelling secretary of the Association, was present. The chair was occupied by the President, Mr. Alfred Parker.

The names before the Board were Mr. Ridgeway, of Berlin, Mr. R. J. Colville, of Toronto, and Mr. Williamson of Petrolia.

After quite a lively discussion the choice was between Messrs. Colville and Williamson. Mr. Colville, was of course, well-known to the majority of the Board, as well as to the citizens of Peterborough, he having acted as secretary here before in a very acceptable manner. However, Mr. Williamson, who is a young man, was highly recommended by Mr. Cole, travelling secretary, at the suggestion of Mr. C. S. Crowski, chairman of the Provincial Committee, as being a man capable of filling the present vacancy in Peterborough.

As Mr. Colville could not be secured at a salary less than $1,000 per annum, a unanimous call to Mr. Williamson at a salary of $900 was decided on by the Board. As it will be utterly impossible to carry on the work in the new building without the aid of a physical director at a salary of from $500 to $600, the Board felt that it would be too much of an undertaking to raise $1,600 in salaries, together with the other necessary running expenses.

It is felt that from the encouraging reports received as to Mr. Williamson's former success in the different branches of his work, also the present financial condition of the local Association, that the Board have adopted a wise course, and they urge upon all interested in the young men's work, in the town and vicinity, the heartiest support possible to the Board and Secretary, when they open their new building.

PERSONAL.

STONY LAKE COTTAGES ENTERED.

The Summer Residences of Mr. R. W. Grubbe and Mr. John Craig, M. P., Despoiled.

Mr. Clarke Brewson, the caretaker left at the American Camp at Stony Lake every year, reports that the cottages of Mr. R. W. Grubbe of town, and Mr. John Craig, M. P., of Fergus, were broken into during the winter, and that in the latter case nearly everything in the way of furniture had been carried off. An unsuccessful attempt had been made to break into Mr. R. J. Winch's cottage.

Almost every year cottages are broken into at the lake, and as strong suspicion is directed towards certain parties an effort should be made to trace the crime to its source and punish the offenders in such a manner as to guarantee that the cottages will not be molested in future.

MARK THE YEAR WITH A JUBILEE TREE.

A Hint to the Directors of the Horticultural Society.

What could be a more simple, interesting or appropriate way for the directors of the Horticultural Society to mark the diamond jubilee year than by planting a jubilee tree in the Court House Park—an elm, or oak, or some similar sturdy and long-live tree and have it named and cared for as the Diamond Jubilee Elm or Oak, as the case may be? The smaller the tree the better, as it would be something to date from and its continuous growth could be noted by generation after generation, and the legend of its planting, bringing remembrances in touch with the past would be perpetuated. Such a tree could be planted with some simple ceremony and it would stand for decade after decade a monument of the loyal thoughtfulness of the citizens of Peterborough.

The mayor and corporation could, as their contribution, plant a tree in Central Park, which certainly would be none the worse for getting some little attention. Indeed it would be a first-class thing if the Diamond Jubilee should be celebrated by the corporation beginning the beautifying of the park and redeeming it from the neglect which makes its appearance anything but a pride to the citizens or credit to the town. And very appropriately it might be re-named Diamond Park—which would be a doubly appropriate title—first, as a memorial of her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee and as a reminiscent contrast to the neglected days when the baseball diamond of the small boy was one of the prominent features of the square.

Whatever is done in regard to either park must be done at once. The season for tree planting does not last all summer.

DEATH OF WM. HUNTER.

His Demise Occurred Yesterday Morning in Otonabee.

Mr. Wm. Hunter, of Carlisle street, Ashburnham, died yesterday morning while visiting his son, Mr. Wm. Hunter, jr., Otonabee. The deceased was troubled with his heart and was quite ill on Saturday last, but rallied to such an extent as to lead to the belief that he had recovered his usual health. Wednesday night, however, he was again attacked and lingered until morning.

The deceased was born in Otonabee in 1831 and had resided in that township continuously until his death. He was married to Miss Maggie Swan, who, with a family of three sons and four daughters, survives him. The daughters are Mrs. James Dixon, of Otonabee; Mrs. John Chapman, of Toronto, and Mrs. Henry McCall, of Douro. The sons are Thomas, William and Warren, all of Otonabee, and James, of Saginaw, Mich. The funeral takes place from the residence of his son, lot 21, concession 11, Otonabee, on Saturday afternoon at one o'clock. Interment will be in the Little Lake Cemetery.

DIED VERY SUDDENLY.

Demise of Mrs. George Warde, of Ashburnham, at the age of 80.

Yesterday morning, in Ashburnham, the death occurred very suddenly of Louisa Ramsey, widow of the late Col. George Warde. The deceased appeared to be in good health the day before, when she was out walking, and on the morning of her death ate a hearty breakfast at half past eight o'clock, but immediately afterwards complained of feeling unwell and in five minutes her demise occurred.

Mrs. Warde was born in Devonshire, England, on Feb. 11th, 1817, being a daughter of Capt. Ramsey, R.N. She was married to Col. Warde in Holy Trinity church, Rochester, and shortly afterwards went with her husband to take up her residence in England on the family estates of the latter. In 1870 Col. and Mrs. Warde came to Canada again, (Col. Warde having some time previously paid the country a visit), and for some years resided on Dickson street, Ashburnham, when considerable money was invested in real estate in and around Peterborough.

The death of Col. Warde occurred about seven years ago, after which Mrs. Warde went to live with her son, Mr. George F. Warde, of Hamilton. A few years ago the family moved back again to Ashburnham, and again took up their residence on Dickson street, from where the funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Mrs. Sloman, of Hamilton, only sister of the deceased, is in town attending the funeral.

NEWS NUGGETS.

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—Division Court in session to-day.

—There was a lively demand for dog tags to-day, as the police will start out after delinquents on Monday.

—This was pay day for the corporation labourers and the town treasurer's office was crowded after dinner.

—Bicyclists were out in large numbers on George street last night. The roadway is becoming rutty for the wheels in places.

—The Lindsay Post says that Mr. Isaac Richardson, of Millbrook, shipped a load of hogs from that station Wednesday to the Matthews Co., at Peterborough.

—One of Peterborough's most prominent lawyers is summoned to appear before the magistrate in the morning on the charge of violating the bylaw requesting the riding of bicycles on the sidewalk.

—Mr. Wm. Morris, No. 13 Union street, met with a bad accident the day before yesterday, when he cut his heel with an adze in such a manner as to sever three arteries and the cord at the back.

—A stretch of seven miles separates Midland and Penetang, and the bicyclists of the two towns have constructed a good cinder path over that distance, utilizing the main road where it is in good condition.

—House-cleaning, with all its attendant horrors, is in full swing now. We are all under petticoat government now and thus is the saying of Scripture fulfilled—"a man's foes are they of his own household."

THE RIFLE ASSOCIAION.

The Members hold their Annual Meeting—Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough County Rifle Association was held last evening in the officers' quarters at the drill shed. In the absence of Lieut. Col. Bell, the President, Capt. Miller took the chair.

A committee composed of Lieut. Eastwood, J. R. Pentland and Capt. Clegg was appointed to purchase the Bankers' Cup, the funds for which have been subscribed by the local banks. The conditions attached to the winning of the cup is that it must be held for two years in succession, and three times altogether, by the marksman who will be entitled to hold it permanently.

Capt. Dennistoun, Major Edwards and George Fitzgerald, were appointed a committee to wait on the County Council and solicit a grant for the Association, such as was given in former years.

The report of the secretary-treasurer was read and adopted, proving satisfactory.

Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows:

Hon. President—Rev. V. Clementi.
President—Capt. Dennistoun.
1st Vice-President—Major Edwards.
2nd Vice-President—Capt. Hill.
Sec.-treasurer—Capt. Clegg.
Committee — Messrs. F. Bartlett, C. Curtis and J. B. Pentland.

On motion it was decided that the monthly matches be shot off on the same days as the League matches—the League scores to count. The one extra monthly will be shot off on the second Thursday in July.

Sergt.-Major Peters explained the new Lee-Enfield rifle to the members.

The association is this year confronted by a difficulty which it will be hard to surmount. Previously there were a dozen or so extra Martini rifles at the drill shed, which the members of the Association could use at will, but with the new issue of the Lee-Enfield, the regulations are stricter and there are no more rifles than are actually required by the battalion, and each captain is made personally responsible for any which he may see fit to lend. Naturally those members of the Association who are not connected with the Rangers will not be in a position to obtain a rifle. The department has been written to concerning the matter.

The penetrative power of the new rifle caused quite a discussion, as the pits at the butts will have to be protected to a far greater degree than before. The council was instructed to look into the matter.

SALVATION ARMY NOTES.

Over 200 Partook of the Supper Last Evening.

The two months "Siege of the Lost" was concluded last evening at the Salvation Army Barracks, when twenty new soldiers were enrolled as members of the local corps.

The supper during the evening was well attended, over 200 partaking thereof.

On Saturday evening a lantern service will be held. The subject is "Little Jamie."

On Sunday special services will be held during the day, conducted by Staff-Capt. Hargraves and his wife, of Kingston. The former is chancellor for Eastern Ontario. Ensign Sims, of the Light Brigade, Social Reform Agent, will also assist.

FRIDAY, APRIL 30, 1897.

A LETTER FROM MOTHER GOOSE.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

MY DEAR PEOPLE.—One might as well be out of the world as well as out of the fashion, so I have heard, and as I do not want to be out of the world and it is the fashion to write letters to the public press, I now take my quill in hand and in a worthy cause too. I want to let the public know that I am going to have a sail—there I have spelled the word wrong and I know better, but the children bother me. Marjorie Daw has just spilled the ink. You remember Red Riding Hood and her relations were here in January for the Mission Band. She brought a lot of money for them, but they have spent it all and I'll tell you how. They put twenty dollars in the bank for the Sunday school extension fund and sent ten dollars to a Northwest Bishop, whose house was burned down and he had to live in the stable. Then with the remainder of the money they bought an outfit of clothing for a little girl in British Columbia. Her father is a clergyman and her mother is dead and she has four or five brothers and sisters and they are very poor, so the Mission Band spent all their money—and between you and me, a little more too—so I want to help them. I told my little people up here about it, and they decided it would be a good thing to have a sale in St. John's Sunday School Room, where the Band have their meetings. This sale is to be under the special patronage of His Excellency Dick Whittington, Lord Mayor of London. Mrs. Hubbard, Miss Muffet, Cinderella and her proud sisters, and all the best people in my country have contributed to it, and are going to attend. They have made many pretty things which when you see you will be only too glad to buy. There will be a Bargain counter with such wonderful Bargains that I have to spell the word with a capital B.

Jack-of-the-bean-stalk climbed the sugar plum tree and picked the choicest fruit for it. There was a splendid crop so it will be cheap. With difficulty we have persuaded Zingara, the gipsy queen, to come with us to tell fortunes. She will put your future in an egg shell for you, and it will surely come true. Red Riding Hood's mother made the cake and Jack and Jill carried the water for the coffee. I could mention many eminent people who have helped us, but want you to come and see for yourself. The door will be open and you can walk right in for nothing, and we will sing for you too, but we will feel dreadfully insulted if you don't buy everything we have brought.

Hoping to see many of you Peterborough people, I remain,

Yours in a flutter.

MOTHER GOOSE.

P. S.—Thanking you Mr. Editor, for giving me the paper to write on. I hope you can read my writing; I still use a quill. Don't forget Saturday at half-past seven. M. G.

You can have your pick from a seeping stock of dressy new suits at special Easter prices. Bright new outfits for boys and youths is what we take pride in selling. Juvenile suits that last longer, fit neater, and look better than the general run. Our special Easter prices for two-piece suits are $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50, and are well worth your quick investigation. For three-piece suits for youths, the prices are $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 and up to $7.00. We like mothers to visit our store and do their buying personally. Fair, square prices for reliable children's and youths' clothing can be counted on every time you buy here. We ask the men to see our large assortment of popular selections in spring tweed and cloths for ordered suits and spring overcoats. We turn out the finest and lowest-priced spring clothing for men that ever left the tailors' lap. You also find every good kind of ready-to-wear clothing in spring suits and overcoats. Stacks of them to select from that will please and fit you, made by men that know how. Men's serge suits as low as $3, $4, $5 and up to $8. Tweed suits as low as $3.50, $4, $5 and up to $10. Fine black worsted suits at $8, $10 and $12. See our attractive window display of handsome Easter neckwear and furnishings—the latest out—right in style and the "top-notch" novelties of the day. Here's a snap—500 pairs of all-wool tweed pants, well made, strong working pants, for only $1 25 a pair—the best value we ever offered.—H. LEBRUN & Co., City Clothing Store, George street. dw

THE TARIFF DEBATE.

The Contribution of the Member for West Peterborough.

The Toronto Mail and Empire has the following report of Mr. James Kendry's speech yesterday during the tariff debate:

"Mr. Kendry said that the Government would not collect an honest duty by the ad valorem duty. The Government, in its re-arrangement of the tariff, had struck at one of the largest industries in the country, in which $5,000,000 was invested, and 15,000 hands employed. (Hear, hear.) To be sure the poor man's supplies had been lowered, but the result would be large imports of shoddy from the Old Country, which Canada did not want. The Government might well have increased the duty on the better lines of goods, which the rich man could afford to pay for. As a result of their action, he ventured to say that wool would drop three or four cents during the season, which would not be in the interest of the farmer. A specific duty was, he claimed, the proper duty. The result of the new tariff would be to close up first the mills manufacturing the cheaper grades, and then those making the better grades. Dealing with the so-called preferential schedule, Mr. Kendry declared that no country should be singled out for exceptional treatment, but duties should be collected from all alike. The object in the tariff should be to protect the wage-earners. They were the class that would be most affected by the changes. All industries should be treated alike, and there should be no favouritism. The look manufacturing industry would be greatly injured by the Government's policy. It had formerly been protected by a duty of 32½ per cent. That duty has now been reduced to 30 per cent., and the industry, which had had hard work to exist, would now be wiped out.

Mr. Wood (Hamilton)—Nothing of the kind.

Mr. Kendry—The hon. gentleman does not know everything. There are people who know as much as he does about this matter. (Opposition applause.) In the town of Peterborough we have a large manufacturing establishment, as well as the gentleman who has interrupted me.

Mr. Wood—The lock manufacturers are peafectly satisfied with the tariff.

Mr. Kendry—The hon. gentleman is satisfied with anything as long as he is voting on that side of the House. (Opposition laughter.) Continuing, he said that unless the tariff was modified a great many existing industries would go under. The Government was sending agents to all parts of the world in order to attract emigrants to this country, and at the same time it was making changes in the tariff that would send thousands of our wage-earners to the United States. The combine resolution would give the Controller of Customs extraordinary power. It was something unprecedented, and it would work great injustice. The attempt was made to introduce the plan into operation in the United States, but it was thrown out. (Opposition applause.)"

The Globe's Ottawa correspondent thus refers to Mr. Kendry's speech:—

"Mr. Kendry (Peterborough) made a strong N.P. speech, with special reference to the woollen duties, which he declared had been so seriously reduced as to close down the smaller woollen mills and perhaps the larger also. He vigourously denounced the granting of any preference to Great Britain. There is nothing hypocritical about Mr. Kendry. He makes no pretence of friendship to Great Britain. It is the N.P., the whole N.P., and nothing but the N.P. that he wants, and he won't be happy till he gets it back again."

THE INTERLOCKING SYSTEM.

How it is Operated at the G.T.R. Bridge at the Locks.

The Grand Trunk bridge near the locks is the subject of considerable interest these days, on account of the new interlocking system of signaling which has been adopted, and Mr. William James, the genial switchman, receives quite a few callers in the course of the day.

A special building has been erected for the machinery, and in the upper story, which is of glass, sits the switchman looking after the levers controlling the semaphores and bridge bolts. There are now two semaphores on each side of the bridge, and between each two there is a distance of seventeen hundred feet, or ample room to accommodate the largest train. If the bridge is open a train is allowed to approach a semaphore, which is 300 feet from the end of the bridge, and then the "distant" semaphore behind it is closed down to prevent a train running into the rear of the one already waiting. By an automatic arrangement the trains cannot be signalled "all clear" until the bridge is closed and the bolt shot, as the levers act as a check on one another in this respect.

The old system of signalling when the semaphore was whirled around in a half circle is done away with, and instead an arm projects horizontally when the line is closed and drops down obliquely to signal "come ahead." The reverse end of the arm governs the lights which are used at night, as the lantern is perfectly stationary and coloured glass—either red or green—moves before it according to the position of the arm. Mr. John Caddigan has charge of the switch at night.

YOUNG'S POINT PARISH.

Presentation to Rev. Mr. Hartley.

Quite a number of friends gathered at the residence of Mrs. A. Allen, Young's Point, the other evening to present Rev. Mr. Hartley of the English church, with a gold watch, showing the great esteem in which he is held by his friends there. Mr. Hartley leaves for Toronto this week to take up residence there, and his many friends regret to see him go, as he has become a friend to all who know him.

DIVIDED NOT.

The Legend of St. Luchesio, One of the Penitent Brothers.

Tranquil and fair a faded woman lay,
Her soul from earth was passing on its way
To the abundant realms of heavenly grace,
Whose light forestalled her ethereal face.
Shriven and made acquainted with the comfort sweet
That Holy Church bestows with unction sweet,
To aid the spirit on its silent flight;
And hide the terrors Death would keep in sight.
Tranquil and pure, and with great peace upborne,
She waited to hear the coming of the Dawn.

O'er her rich couch Luchesio bent,
Eager that all his wealth of soul he spent
In every constant service he could find
To drive despairing sorrow from his mind.
Wrapt in an ecstasy of love he saw
The threatening loneliness that loomed before,
And envied every precious moment as it flew,
That there was thus one less, one less of few.
As Death crept nearer, still with presence cold,
Luchesio stored in memory's sessions held
Each breathless word, each tender glance of eye,
The living light of which so soon must darkling die.
His meagre consolation 'twas that he would fain
Be glad in solitude each souvenir to know again.
Thus as he watched from dawn to dark,
From night to noon, life's feeble spark;
From self-repression, lo! his soul out broke,
And thus to her he loved in anguish spake:—

"Thou knowest, dear wife, how many years we've loved
Each one the other,—thou to me hast proved
The closest partner of my inmost heart—
Flesh of my flesh in every truth a part.
Thus hand in hand together have we sped,
For thou hast followed where my will hath led;
My ear hath ever listened to thy voice,
Whose lightest accents made my soul rejoice.
And on thy bosom thou hast dried my tears,
And fed my hopes, and subtly tcalmed my fears.
Yea, when I gave my worldly wealth away,
To share my need thou willdst in want to stay,
Thy heart to mine was closer welded still,
Since sacrifice I wished, my wish became thy will.
And when I knelt in penitential prayer
Low at my side I found thee ever there,
Thy beads kept pace with mine, and thou
Bound thine own self with my recorded vow.
As cleaving still, thou chart'st my lowly task,
Not vainly from thy tenderness did misery ask
A deed of alms, sweet charity, or grace.
But that thou yoldest with a kindly face.
Co-worker thus in everything with me,
Long have I known thy dead fidelity.
Nor is that all—for like me thou hast worn
This tattered frock and cord, with gentle scorn
That thou shouldst don aught better garb than such
As I should wear, though I pled over much.

Now thou art going, and my soul is rent
To part with thee, yea, I be sorely spent;
Friend of my love—it cannot, cannot be.
Oh wait, oh wait, my wife, oh wait for me.
Yea, on the threshold of that borderland
Stay thou my feet, sweetheart, and linger stand
A little while. Oh, tender love—stay thou for me
And I will surely, surely follow thee.

What fond reply her voiceless gaze would make,
He learneth—yea, she waiteth for his sake.

The reverend father now he called again
That absolution may remove all earthly stain,
And holy unction he receive yet while
Her presence blessed with her dear wan smile.
And when the rites of Holy Church were o'er
He turned to clasp her languid hand once more,
To dry the dew that on her forehead lies,
To take her latest kiss and close her shadowed eyes.
With reverent care he laid her limbs to rest,
And placed her loyal hands upon her breast,
Signed o'er her mute still form the holy cross;
Nor even knew her death his dreary loss;
For straightway then, as wonted by her side,
He stretched himself upon her bed—and died.

LACROSSE.

The P. A. A. A. grounds are in excellent shape, and the fastest kind of lacrosse should be seen there the coming season.

The fences and grand stand are being repaired this week, and will be completed in two or three days.

Any person or persons found trespassing on the grounds or in any way damaging the fences or stand, will be dealt with according to law—and without gloves, too.

The first practice of the season is called for Monday evening, and it is urged that all the players turn out and get in shape at once.

The team expects to go to Campbellford on the 24th of May, and as a first class team is to be "put up" against them, it is necessary that the practices be attended regularly. "Business" is the word in regard to practice.

The juniors would like to hear from some of the senior teams in the following towns: Lakefield, Millbrook, Hastings, Norwood, and any junior teams in the district, with reference to arranging dates for games.

The club is selling season tickets, a course made necessary on account of securing the grounds outright and expenses connected with repairing same, and wish to thank all those who have so far purchased them—happy to indulge in further thanks on this score.

THE WHEEL.

A ladies' bicycle club has been formed in town with a membership of over forty. Officers have been elected as follows:

President—Mrs. F. J. Rogers.
Vice-Presidents—Mrs. Peter Campbell and Miss Ella Edwards.
Secretary-Treasurer—Miss Hatton.

The name of the club has not been selected as yet. It is proposed to hold club runs every Tuesday.

MILLBROOK BICYCLE CLUB.

MILLBROOK, April 29th.—The bicycle craze has struck Millbrook as well as other towns and the number of wheels that have been placed here this season is simply astounding. On Wednesday night a large and enthusiastic meeting of the local wheelmen was held in the law office of R. Raddy, when the Millbrook Bicycle Club was organized with the following officers:

Patrons—W. A. Fallis, M.P.P., Reeve Pickup and Alex. Ferguson, Esq.
Hon. President—Rev. James Kilgour.
President—R. Buddy.
1st Vice-President—Rev. James Kilgour.
2nd Vice-President—J. C. Kells.
Secretary—W. W. Gilliott.
Treasurer—Wesley Walsh.
Captain—Geo. A. Duncan.
Lieutenant—Harry Johnston.
Executive Committee—W. H. Coombe, C. Leach and H. Duncan.

Messrs. W. W. Gilliott, W. D. Leach and E. S. Clarry were appointed a committee to draft a constitution and look up suitable appartments for the club.

The new organization starts out with a good membership, and at the meeting it was unanimously decided to join the C. W. A.

CRICKET.

The annual meeting for the re-organization of the cricket club of Campbellford was held the other evening, when officers were elected for the year. There were about twenty five cricketers present, all of whom manifested a warm interest in their favourite game, now that the season is opening for play. Dr. Macoun, the president, occupied the chair. Those who were given official positions in the club were as follows:

Hon. Pres.—A. L. Colville.
Pres.—Dr. Macoun.
Vice.-Pres.—A. A. Maitelland.
Sec.-treas.—T. S. Tait.
Committee of Management—W. Nanearrow, W. Shannon and E. T. Morton.

The annual meeting of the Canadian Cricket Association was held Monday in Toronto.

The annual report was read by Secretary Hall as follows:—"Eighteen hundred and ninety-six was a remarkable year for Canada in the world of sport. In yachting, rowing, and golf, and also with rifle and cannon, Canadians proved to the world their ability in each department. But of still greater interest to us as cricketers was the victory at Philadelphia last September. It was the first time since 1884 that Canada won a game in Philadelphia. As everybody knows a great deal of the credit for winning the match last year must be given to J. M. Laing. His wonderful performance in capturing 14 wickets for 54 runs in a match against a strong eleven of the United States has seldom, if ever, been equalled by any amateur. Mr. Laing was presented with a bat, on which was a silver shield with suitable inscription, for his splendid performance. W. H. Cooper was also the recipient of a bat for making the most runs on the Canadian side. In the inter collegiate match against the United States, our men were also successful in winning the game by eight wickets. W. R. Wadsworth bowled remarkably well, getting six wickets for 10 runs. Mr. Cooper made top score for Canada in this match also. Eastern cricketers looked forward last year to a visit from Manitoba, but unfortunately at the last moment the trip had to be abandoned. The Chicago Wanderers visited Ontario in August last, and Ontario returned the visit in September. It is understood that an Ontario eleven will play for one week in Chicago in July next. The New Jersey cricketers have arranged a flying visit to Canada. The annual match with the United States will this year be played in Canada. We would like to see more clubs join the association, and by so doing help to make it the powerful institution its founders anticipated. The financial statement showed a balance on hand. We would remind clubs that unless they belong to this association, or to a provincial association in good standing with this association, they are not eligible for representation in the annual match against the United States."

This resolution was also adopted: "That in the opinion of this meeting it is desirable that steps be taken to induce clubs of Ontario to agree upon a plan which will encourage the playing of matches between the stronger clubs, irrespective of their territorial position, and between the weaker clubs on district lines. That the secretary be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to the secretary of the O. C. A., and to request him to call at an early date a meeting of the O.C.A., for the purpose of considering the matter and taking action. That in case the O.C.A. does not take action the Executive Committee of this association be, and it is hereby instructed to consider the matter, and take such action as they see fit."

CURLIANIA.

Mr. E. B. Edwards represented the Peterborough curlers yesterday in Toronto at the annual meeting of the Ontario Curling Association. The points competition this year resulted in a tie, forty-two points being scored each by Wm. Pickard, of Seaforth, and D. W. Douglas, of Campbellford. Two gold medals were awarded. Last year Mr. Sam Ray, of town, won the coveted medal, scoring 44 points. For some reason the result of the Peterborough competition was not forwarded to the secretary, although Mr. E. Rutherford scored 40 points.

TURNING GRAY

AND THREATENED

WITH BALDNESS

The Danger is Averted by Using

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. Hearing Ayer's Hair Vigor highly spoken of, I commenced using this preparation, and was so well satisfied with the result that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good, natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HAIGHT, Avoca, Neb.

THE HILARIOUS THRUSH.

The thrush to a friend did say:
"With me, dearest linnet, come quickly, I pray;
The flowers in the woods will be dancing to-day;
With me, dearest linnet, come quickly way!
We'll sit on the branches singing,
And set all the flowers to swinging,
And watch them dance from our perches above;
Most dearly the flowers do I love!"

They then to the woods afar,
Were off for the greenwood so quickly, hurrah!
"Wide-awake!" cried the thrush to the flowers drawing near;
"On with the dance! thrush and linnet are here,"
They struck up a lively measure,
The flowers all whirled with pleasure,
And danced o'er the fields with rare delight,
With motion so graceful and light.

At last the dance was done,
And homeward went flying these lovers of fun,
And all the flowers in their calyxes tight
Were after the frolic asleep for the night,
And when the songsters had parted,
So gay and satisfied-hearted,
Called back hilarious thrush to his friend;
"My love for the flowers has no end."

Attractive Women.

Why is one woman attractive and another not? The most admirable and attractive thing about an attractive woman is her womanliness. Everybody admires a womanly woman. She must have health, of course, because without it she would lose the brightness of her eyes, the fullness of her cheeks and her vivacity. Real health must mean that a woman is really a woman. That she is strong and perfect in a sexual way, as well as in every other. That she is capable of performing perfectly the duties of maternity. Some are born with what is called "constitutional weakness." Those who do not enjoy perfect health, need only take the proper precautions and the proper remedy to become perfectly well and strong. Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription will cure any derangement of the distinctly feminine organism.

A JAUNTY JACKET AND HAT.

The girl who inclines toward the tailor-made has been wondering of late if all the ruffles and laces she has been told were certainly coming would displace the trim little jacket style she has loved so long.

Not a bit of it, Miss Tailor-made! You are to have cuter little jackets than you ever had before even dreamed of.

This is authoritatively spoken: Dame Fashion has said so, and the clever pencil of the artist presents one of them to your eye even ere they are to be found in cloth.

IRWIN SIGNS MORE PLAYERS

And Toronto Captures the Final Exhibition Game in the East.

Brockton, Mass., April 28.—Toronto defeated Brockton, New England, club to-day, 9 to 8. Manager Irwin tried Williams, his new pitcher, the last six innings, and he showed up in splendid style. Williams pitched last year in Fall River and Lewiston. He is a good hitter and runner. Baker's catching and batting were the features of the game. Manager Irwin to-day purchased the release of Pitcher Brown from Baltimore and Pitcher Sitley from Newark. The team leaves to-night for Providence, where the championship season opens to-morrow. Score:

Toronto	2 5 0 1 0 0 1 0 *—9
Brockton	2 1 0 2 0 1 0 0 2—8

Two-base hits—Baker, Freeman, McGann. Three-base hits—Baker. Home runs—Shekard.

HAMILTON 15, REDS 9.

Hamilton, April 28.—(Special.)—The Toronto Red Stockings Baseball Team gave the Hamilton Canadian League Team a fair practice game of ball this afternoon. The Hamiltons made 23 hits off Lee, for a total of 30 bases, and made 15 runs. Hot ground hits were also responsible for a lot of errors. The Hamiltons did not play a very good game. Grimes was wild, and was hit for six singles in five innings, while Cramer was touched for three hits in four innings. Tommy McDonald made five hits for Hamilton. The score:

JACKET EFFECTS.

What the Spring Has in Store for the Fashionable Girl.

Very little can be said of fashion at the moment without some reference to the jacket effects which are so much in evidence in every kind of gown, especially the new spring models in cloth presented for early inspection. The bolero, which is long enough to meet a narrow belt, rather has the lead, but there is every conceivable kind of jacket except the long one. A finely tucked bolero trimmed with Austrian knots of black braid is shown with an ecru cloth gown, which is also trimmed on the skirt to match, and theyoke is of green velvet, covered with cream lace. Black satin forms the belt and collar, and a lace frill extends down the side, where the jacket fastens with green velvet bows. Another costume of black and blue mixed wool has a plain skirt and a sort of loose sauave, buttoned down the front and caught up at either side with a fancy buckle. Ecru cloth braided with black forms the second revers, and black satin the vest, collar and belt.

A touch of black or white or both is almost a necessity for a successful gown this season, and whatever may be the color of the dress, the introduction of black is in nearly every case an improvement. The military style of trimming appears on some of the new cloth jackets, and one costume is rather a light shade of blue has the military cut as well, and is trimmed with black braid. The cuffs and collar of red cloth with a black braid finish make it very striking. The triple skirt is one of the effects seen among cloth gowns, and each flounce is cut circular to fit the foundation. The material is green cloth for skirt and sleeves, and the bodice is of pale green silk, with a darker green velvet bolero, cut out in the neck, over this. The jacket fastens on one side, where it is cut out in squares and decorated with a frill of lace. An embroidery of jet and roses finishes the edge all round and the belt and collar are of velvet.

RESCUED 23 MEN.

They Were on a French Brigantine Which Was in a Helpless Condition.

New York, April 28.—The North German Lloyd steamer Muenchen, Captain Kuhlmann, which arrived this afternoon from Bremen, reports that on April 21, in latitude 46.40, longitude 31.34, he fell in with the French fishing brigantine Marie, waterlogged and in a sinking condition. The steamer launched her lifeboats and succeeded in rescuing the entire crew of twenty-three men, and brought them to this port. The Marie was bound to the fishing banks, and on April 16 was dismasted in a hurricane. The vessel also sprang a leak, which gained, in spite of the constant efforts of her crew. The brigantine was sinking when the steamer bore down to the rescue.

DROPPED DEAD!

Suddenly Stricken Down by Heart Disease.

"A sad and sudden death occurred to a well-known citizen on one of the leading streets this morning."

Nearly every large city paper contains daily some such heading. The number of deaths from heart failure is very large, but it is only when they occur in some public and sensational manner that general attention is drawn to them.

Palpitation and fluttering of the heart are common complaints. With the heart itself there is nothing radically wrong. But the system is disorganized, the kidneys and liver are out of order, and the stomach is not in condition to do its work properly. Between them all, they throw too much responsibility on the heart, and the latter is unable to stand the strain.

A box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills at a cost of 25 cents will regulate the system, purify the blood and make a new person of every sickly man, woman or child.

Dr. Chase's Liver-Kidney Pills may be had from any dealer or from the manufacturers, Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. One pill a dose, one cent a dose.

Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine is and colds. Largest bottle on the market; only 25 cents.

The Mason & Risch Piano Co. L'td.

Beg to announce that they have assumed the Agency for Central and Western Ontario of the Pianos manufactured by Chickering & Sons, Boston.

It would be superfluous to make extended reference to the reputation of this famous house, or to the pianofortes manufactured by them. It is sufficient to say that for three quarters of a century they have occupied the position of absolute leaders in Musical Art manufacture, and their reputation was at no time greater than it is at present.

INTENDING PURCHASERS OF PIANO

Now have the choice in our warerooms of goods manufactured by the acknowledged leaders of the American and Canadian trade. The association of such Instruments as Chickering & Sons and Mason & Risch Pianos beneath one roof forms a unique combination.

AS TO PRICES!

Pianos of high artistic merit must of necessity cost more than poorer instruments, but there is no question of the direction in which true economy lies. As an evidence of this it may be mentioned that the first Piano manufactured by Chickering & Sons 73 ago is still in an excellent state of preservation, and Pianos made by Mason & Risch over 20 years ago scarcely show any sign of wear. Palace Grocery. George Street. - Sole Agent for Peterborough

A woman's attractiveness in the eyes of man depends largely on her physical appearance. Nature, in order to preserve the race, guides mankind by the instinctive preference for a mate who is physically sound and wholesome.

If intellect alone were chiefly sought, the offspring might be a generation of Solomons for wisdom, but they would perish in infancy for want of physical stamina.

A weak or unhealthy woman is unfitted to fulfil her part in perpetuating the race; she is unequal to the demands of motherhood and wifehood, she is robbed of her natural womanly attractiveness.

Many a woman is cheated of life's choicest gifts by a dyspeptic, bile-poisoned condition of the system, which shows itself in a pimply skin, sallow complexion, tainted breath, or thin, ungraceful form.

The most perfect remedy for all the mortifying symptoms of mal-nutrition and impure blood is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Through its remarkable effect upon the liver and digestive organs it sweeps all impurities out of the circulation and creates a fresh supply of new, rich, life-giving blood.

It gives clearness and bloom to the complexion; sweetens the breath; rounds out the face and form, and invigorates the entire constitution with vital energy.

It restores the invincible beauty of wholesomeness and womanly capacity.

"I was a complete wreck: appetite gone, nervous system impaired; could not sleep, and was so weak that I could not stand on my feet ten minutes," writes Miss Ella Bartley, of No. 215½ South Grant Avenue, Columbus, Ohio: "I only weighed 95½ pounds when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After I had taken a half bottle I began to improve; I could sleep soundly the whole night, and would awaken with an appetite for breakfast, which was a rare thing as I never had for two years back eaten a hearty breakfast. I now have an excellent appetite, and my friends say they never saw me looking better or in better spirits since they knew me. I tell them it is all due to Dr. Pierce's 'Discovery.'"

In all cases of obstinate constipation, the "Discovery" should be supplemented with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

BITTER AND SWEET.

The apple that grows highest is the best
upon the tree;
The rose that is most fragrant always has the sharpest thorn;
The pearl that is the purest lies with'n
the deepest sea,
And the deeds that live the longest are hardest efforts borne!

The love that's won too lightly is not treasured as a gem;
The words that flow too freely never have the greatest weight;
Man appreciates his blessings if he has to strive for them,
But never knows their value if they're passed up on a plate!

THE AFTERMATH.

The sad eyes of the girl standing at one of the windows of Mrs. Staunton's mansion were not, as they seemed to be, fixed on the last falling snow. Ethel Matherson's thoughts were far away. She was dreaming of the days before her father's death, when, in her distant former home, Col. Matherson's idolized only child, she had been so zealously guarded from life's sharp edges. But in the prime of life her father had been snatched from her by death.

So little remained for her of her father's once large fortune, when all his debts had been paid and she had so signally failed in giving lessons in music and fancy work, despite her own proficiency in these arts, that this little had soon disappeared.

It was at this juncture that her wealthy cousin, Julia Staunton, widowed and childless, had dawned on her horizon as a possible helper with an offer of making her a companion. Ethel had gone to her with misgivings, for the letter in which the offer was made was far from cordial.

Her fears had not, it proved, been without cause, for she had been made a veritable drudge. Mrs. Staunton had been quick to seize upon her skill in lace-making and embroidery, so that, when not engaged in reading aloud or otherwise amusing her, Ethel was kept constantly busy with fancy work of the most delicate and intricate pattern. Thus it was that many a night, with aching heart and smarting eyes, the girl had cried herself to sleep.

On the afternoon on which we found her at the window she had gained a brief respite due to the fact that her cousin had gone on a shopping expedition. Suddenly there was a tap at the door, and in response to Ethel's invitation to enter, a trim maid came in, bearing a lamp with a rose tinted glow through the room.

"Shall I draw the curtains, Miss Ethel?" she asked with a kindly glance at the sad-faced girl.

"Yes, Mary," Ethel replied, as she sank into a chair. "Mrs. Staunton has not returned yet?" she questioned.

"No, miss, but I think she will soon be here. 'Tis getting late."

The girl withdrew, closing the door after her. Presently Ethel heard a carriage stop in the street below, followed by the clang of the hall doors. She heard the rustle of her cousin's garments as that lady came up the stairs and to her door.

She entered with a smile which, when Ethel was the object on which her eyes rested, she was in so happy a mood that she even failed to note that her companion's hands were, for once, idle.

"Such a delightful time as I have had!" she cried, with vivacity. "I met him down town and we had a very pleasant lunch together—Maj. Horton, you know."

"I am glad you enjoyed your trip, Cousin Julia," Ethel said.

"His attentions are becoming quite marked, don't you think? Why, he has already been here twice this week! I determined from the first to win that man, for, will you believe it, at the beginning of our acquaintance he actually seemed to avoid me."

For some moments she was silent, her eyes fixed meditatively on the floor.

"He has invited me to go driving with him to-morrow and asked that you might accompany me. Your companion, I presume, will be that odious Mr. Thompson. By the way, Ethel, I wish you would leave off calling me 'Cousin Julia.' It might be better that the major did not know of our relationship."

"Must I go?" Ethel asked, pleadingly. "It hurts me to take part in any gaiety. It seems disloyal to poor papa. Cannot some one go in my stead?"

The widow eyed her with displeasure.

"I do wish you would give up that sentimental nonsense," she declared. "It is only in books that such things occur. Major Horton has asked you on my account, as my companion, to go, and go you must."

Her sharp eyes fell on Ethel's idle hands.

"You have not finished the violets on that scarf which you began yesterday, have you? How inconsiderate! You know I want it just as soon as you can possibly finish it. Pray get it at once."

Ethel complied with a half-uttered sigh, and presently her cousin left her, with many instructions to hasten the scarf's completion.

The day ended as had so many of its predecessors. Ethel, with aching heart and weary eyes, cried herself to sleep.

Mrs. Staunton, standing before her mirror, surveyed herself with critical eyes. Every detail of her handsome costume was dwelt upon.

"Yes," she suddenly announced to her reflected self, "it is just the thing." She was so deep in thought that she did not know she spoke aloud. "Maj. Horton is extremely fond of music. More than once I have seen him moved to tears by it. When he has arrived I will have Ethel go into the music room and play some of her most touching selections, in the midst of which I will go down."

She paused, giving the image in the mirror a knowing nod.

"Well," she resumed, "music has done greater things than move a heart to make a declaration of love."

Ethel, in her room, had let the lace she was making fall into her lap as, with clasped hands and far-away gaze, she sat dreaming.

Yesterday had been the day of the driving expedition, and a somewhat amusing incident had taken place at the very outset. On leaving the house Maj. Horton had asked Mrs. Staunton which seat she preferred, and she, secure in the faith that he would drive, had answered in all sweetness: "Oh, the front, by all means!" The Major handed her in, and then, to her surprise, "that odious Mr. Thompson" took the seat beside her, and the major, with a bow, took that beside Ethel. Little did he dream of the storm that was raging in the breast of the outwardly smiling widow.

How Ethel had enjoyed the drive! How kind the major had been, and how interestingly he had talked. How handsome he was, with his strong, noble face, his graceful, well-knit figure, and his finely-turned head, with its iron-gray hair. Poor Ethel! It had indeed been a red-letter day in her calendar.

She was aroused from her reverie by the sound of her cousin's voice at the door.

"I wish you would go into the music room at once, Ethel," she said, hurriedly, "and play some of those, soft dreamy bits you were practicing yesterday."

Ethel was well pleased, for the one pleasure her dreary life afforded was that of keeping up her music. It was one of the few things on which she and Mrs. Staunton were of the same mind. She did not give a thought to her cousin's strange manner, but, sitting down at the piano, did as she had been bidden.

After a while her thoughts strayed away from the music her fingers were producing and she fell to dreaming of the halcyon days, when, in the dear old home, her father sitting near with book or paper, she had sung to him in the twilight.

Her fingers wandered slowly over the keys, striking mournful chords here and there; then, without her volition, they strayed into one of the old songs her father had most dearly loved. A wave of emotion swept over her, and the tears welled into her eyes and fell slowly one by one. Shee ceased playing suddenly and buried her face in her hands.

O, what a change has come into her life since those happy days! The dear father gone! So little to enjoy at present, nothing to look forward to in the future.

She did not hear a step behind her, and it was not until a gentle hand was laid upon her bowed head that she started up and saw Maj. Horton, whose eyes, bright with tears, were bent upon her.

"My dear child," he said, taking her hand and drawing her gently to him, "what is troubling you? There is something wrong, I am sure. I have noticed your sadness before. Tell me, have I guessed aright that your life here is unhappy?"

She stood at his side in silence, a delicate flush upon her cheeks, the tears shining on her long lashes. How kindly his brown eyes, and how strong his arm to lean upon!

With a sudden movement she hid her face on his shoulder, the tears falling unrestrainedly, and told him all—all the trouble, the unhappiness, the grieving for her dead father.

"Ethel," he said, excitedly, "there is a home I know of which needs a mistress to brighten it; a heart which has silently chosen one, but feared to make known its desire lest its owner fell too far short of a young girl's dream of a lover. That home and heart are mine, and you are the one on which that heart is set."

She started back quickly and gazed at him in wonder. He released her hand and turned sadly away.

"Forgive me," he said tremulously. "I see I have pained you. I was wrong to think one so young and fair could entertain a regard for one as old and ugly as I."

Suddenly he started. A little hand was laid timidly upon his arm, and a sweet pathetic voice was speaking.

"Old and ugly," it said. "Not to me."

He turned swiftly and gathered her into his arms, pressing a kiss on her lips.

"I know now," she whispered, "that I have almost worshipped you from the first. But it was the worship one gives to heroes. I scarcely dared own it to myself, you seemed so far removed from me; so brave and strong."

"And I, dearest," he responded, "looked upon you as something to be admired only at a distance. Whenever I called here it was—let me whisper a secret to you—with a hope of seeing you. To-day, as I sat alone, I heard you begin to play, and it was almost more than I could do to restrain from stealing in and catching a glimpse of you. When you played that last sweet song I could restrain myself no longer, for it was one my dear sister used to play to me. Something I could not resist impelled me to go to you. I saw you crying, and knew that, as I had often suspected, your life was far from happy. And now let us think no more of the cheerless past, but rather of the joyous future."

Mrs. Staunton, after bidding Ethel go into the music-room, returned to her own boudoir. After what seemed a judicious wait she stole down, entering the drawing room with one of her sweetest smiles on her lips. She stared blankly for the room was empty. It was then, too, that she noticed that the music had ceased. She sank down weakly. Whatever did it mean?

Suddenly she rose and went to the door. Surely, issuing from the music room she heard voices. With swift steps she crossed the hall, entering the room just as Maj. Horton had finished speaking.

He stepped forward, his arm encircling Ethel. "Congratulate me, dear Mrs. Staunton," he said, "on having won for my wife the sweetest woman the sun shines on."

To say that Mrs. Staunton was stunned would but faintly express that lady's feelings. Suddenly she rallied. For her own sake it would not do to betray her astonishment, so, with a bravery worthy of much commendation, she did congratulate them both.

Ethel, in her happy home, cherishes no ill will toward her cousin, nor do I think, even were she aware of how that lady designed her for a tool to accomplish her own ends, she could find it in her heart to condemn her, since through it, by a jest of fate, she gained the noblest husband in the world.—The Princess.

"Half a span of angry steel" will produce no more fatal results than a neglected cold or cough. For all throat and lung diseases, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best remedy. It is invaluable in cases of croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, and la grippe.

Why It Don't Pay.

We have frequently seen eight or ten poor animals called milch cows in a pasture field where there was not to be seen a spear of grass more than about one inch above the surface. The poor brutes were laboring hard to collect a scanty bite to mitigate their hunger. The owner will tell you that dairying "don't pay." He tells the truth when it is conducted on his system. If he would keep four or five cows instead of eight or ten, the pasture would get a chance to grow, the investment in stock would be less, the produce would be larger and of better quality.

THE EYES OF THE WORLD

Are Fixed Upon South American Nervine.

Beyond Doubt the Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

WHEN EVERY OTHER HELPER HAS FAILED IT CURES

A Discovery, Based on Scientific Principles, that Renders Failure Impossible.

In the matter of good health temporising measures, while possibly successful for the moment, can never be lasting. Those in poor health soon know whether the remedy they are using is simply a passing incident in their experience, bracing them up for the day, or something that is getting at the seat of the disease and is surely and permanently restoring.

The eyes of the world are literally fixed on South American Nervine. They are not viewing it as a nine-days' wonder, but critical and experienced men have been studying this medicine for years, with the one result—they have found that its claim of perfect curative qualities cannot be gainsaid.

The great discoverer of this medicine was possessed of the knowledge that the seat of all disease is the nerve centres, situated at the base of the brain. In this belief he had the best scientists and medical men of the world occupying exactly the same premises. Indeed, the ordinary layman recognized this principle long ago. Everyone knows that let disease or injury affect this part of the human system and death is almost certain. Injure the spinal cord, which is the medium of these nerve centres, and paralysis is sure to follow.

Here is the first principle. The trouble with medical treatment usually, and with nearly all medicines, is that they aim simply to treat the organ that may be diseased. South American Nervine passes by the organs, and immediately applies its curative powers to the nerve centres, from which the organs of the body receive their supply of nerve fluid. The nerve centres healed, and of necessity the organ which has shown the outward evidence only of derangement, is healed. Indigestion, nervousness, impoverished blood, liver complaint, all owe their origin to a derangement of the nerve centres. Thousands bear testimony that they have been cured of these troubles, even when they have become so desperate as to baffle the skill of the most eminent physicians, because South American Nervine has gone to headquarters and cured there.

The eyes of the world have not been disappointed in the inquiry into the success of South American Nervine. People marvel, it is true, at its wonderful medical qualities, but they know beyond all question that it does everything that is claimed for it. It stands alone as the one great certain curing remedy of the nineteenth century. Why should anyone suffer distress and sickness while this remedy is practically at their hands?

RIVER AND LAKE RIFLETS.

Suckers are being hauled in at a lively rate at the locks.

Although the water is very high in the river, it is said that this time last year it was fully a foot higher.

Already this spring a venturesome canoeist has shot the dam at the locks. It was a dangerous trick, but he came through safely.

Mr. Wm. Collins, lockmaster, has placed a boom in position at the locks, which will prevent canoes being drawn over the dam by the swift current at the point where the sad fatality occurred the summer before last.

At present canoeists desiring to go down the river, have to do the portage act at the locks, as the water is too high to use the rollers.

The steamer Sunbeam came up the river yesterday with a scow load of wood, and it was all that Captain Copperthwaite could do to bring the little steamer through the locks against the very heavy current which is running.

The steamer North Star sustained a slight injury at the Bensfort bridge early in the week, and had to lay off a day for repairs.

The steamer Empire is being re-painted and overhauled for the season.

The Mary Ellen is having a new hurricane deck built on her in place of the one one blown off by the wind. She has had a fine new boiler placed in her. When she comes out she will be hardly recognized in her new shape.

The steamer Sunbeam was successfully launched on Tuesday afternoon last at Lakefield. The launch was witnessed by quite a number of spectators. Messrs. White & Grylls have been busy all winter over-hauling her and changing her from a side-wheeler to a propellor. When finished she will be one of the finest boats on these waters.

The steamer Golden City, of Lakefield, was successfully launched Thursday morning last. The steamer is being thoroughly overhauled and will be in a better position than ever for the season's work.

GET WHAT YOU ASK FOR.

Certain Druggists who Bring Reproach upon their Business by the Practice of Palming off "Substitutes" on the Public.

When a person goes to a drug store for a standard remedy, and the druggist tries to palm off some other preparation of a pretended similar nature, urging the customer to buy the latter concoction on the plea that it is "just as good," or "really better," than the standard remedy called for, it is proper to avoid that drugstore ever afterward.

The profit to the druggist on the standard preparations is not large. The few remedies that the whole world recognizes as meritorious are prepared by able physicians and chemists, with every facility of modern science at their command, from the formulas of the most learned physicians that this generation has produced. A tremendous amount of capital is invested in the laboratories where these remedies are made. They have gained their reputation by the great good they have done in curing disease and relieving pain. It costs a great deal to keep up their necessary excellence.

The unscrupulous and generally ignorant druggist referred to sees a chance to make a big profit by mixing together a number of chief ingredients, giving the mixture a name, and taking advantage of the gullibility of some people who seem to like to experiment with their health. There is, in fact, a concern that supplies to druggists this kind of stuff—always the same—and gives a druggist his choice of labels to suit the druggist's idea of what label will most easily "catch" the customer. These preparations are frauds, and are never advertised, because they will not bear the light of any public investigation.

The Pharmaceutical Era, of December 31, says:

"Do druggists realize the reproach they have brought upon themselves and the evil to their profession by the practice of substitution? There is no use misusing matters and carefully choosing words. There are druggists, and not a few, who are guilty of substitution, and it is time for an outspoken denunciation of this dishonourable practice. If there is any business or profession which more than another should be characterized by absolute honesty and integrity it is pharmacy. The issue of life and death frequently rests with the druggist, and any tampering with the physician's prescription becomes a crime.

The druggist frequently argues that his substitute is the same as or better than the article prescribed; but even though this were true, the article is not what was ordered or expected. The reason for substitution by the druggist is either for his own convenience or his financial benefit—both unworthy motives. There has been a great deal said upon the subject, but the real issue has been disguised by a lot of words and specious and fallacious arguments, until the question of right and wrong seems to have lost sight of. Druggists owe it to themselves to frown upon this practice, to discountenance it in every way possible, and to defend their profession, by proof of their falsity, against the charges of dishonesty, which, we regret to say, are brought against it and founded upon far too much evidence.

"Would we could make every druggist in the land see this matter plainly, for we are sure that every right-minded and well-meaning man would at once discover why it is that substitution is both dishonourable and dishonest." — Boston (Mass.) Globe.

YOUNG'S POINT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

In St. Mary's church here Tuesday last was the scene of a very pretty wedding, Mr. J. Carle, of Ennismore, leading to the hymeneal altar, Miss Ellen J. Young, eldest daughter of Mr. Matthew Young of this village. The wedding ceremony was performed in the presence of a very large congregation by Rev. Father Brown. The bride was charmingly attired in a traveling costume of fawn, trimmed with cream lace and wore a white hat trimmed with lillies of the valley, silk lace and pink roses. Miss Emma Scollard and Miss Ella Young, cousins of the bride, performed the duties of bridesmaids and were dressed very prettily in green and pink, trimmed with cream lace. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. W. Carle, and Mr. Will Young, brother of the bride.

The choir sang special musical selections for the occasion, and Misses Maggie, Jennie and Lottie Kearney played the wedding march with much expression (two violins and organ) as the bridal party was leaving the church. After the ceremony the usual wedding breakfast was enjoyed by a number of the brides' friends at her father's residence.

There was a large number of handsome and costly wedding presents, indicating the high esteem in which the bride was held by her numerous friends.

The happy pair went west on a tour of a week's duration when they will return and take up residence here. Your correspondent and the many friends of both wish them a happy and prosperous wedded life.

Miss J. O'Callighan, of Hamilton, is the guest of Miss Minnie Young.

Mrs. A. McPherson, of Peterborough, is visiting friends here.

Miss Josephine Phelan, Lakefield, has returned home after visiting with friends here.

HUSTLING HAVELOCK.

Council met in the school house, Havelock, on April 27th, at 8 p.m. Present, the Reeve and Councillors Code, Dorricott, Chapman and Curtis. Minutes of the two previous meetings were read and adopted.

Moved by Messrs. Chapman and Dorricott that the constable be instructed to enforce the cattle bylaw at once as there had been several complaints made to the council of cattle running at large in the village.

Moved by Messrs. Chapman and Code that the following accounts be paid:—Bisconnetts & Co., $1; J. H. Campbell, running snow plough, $1.50, and repairing sidewalk, $1; W. Weare, shovelling snow, 50c.; E. Aulder, shovelling snow, 40c.

Moved by Messrs. Chapman and Curtis that Mr. Campbell be paid $4.25 for supplying Mrs. Davidson water barrel and water and provisions from Feb. 10th to March 15th as ordered by Board of Health, on account of being quarantined.

Moved by Messrs. Code and Curtis, that Mr. H. T. Archer be paid $30 as salary for assessor for year 1897.

Moved by Messrs. Code and Dorricott, that Mr. Liscumb's account for $2 for step ladder and matches be paid, and also that Phillips Bros. be paid $90.25 for thirty-five kegs of nails.

Moved by Messrs. Chapman and Curtis, that W. J. Saney be paid $20 as part payment on cedar.

Moved by Messrs. Code and Curtis, that the clerk write to the County Treasurer for the lands sold in the township of Belmont and Methuen for the year 1896.

Moved by Messrs. Dorricott and Curtis, that the action of the reeve cancelling the plans and specifications of town hall be sustained, on account of them not being ready according to agreement.

Moved by Messrs. Code and Chapman, that the reeve, and Councillors Code, Dorricott and Curtis, be a committee to look after the building of the sidewalk.

Moved by Messrs. Code and Dorricott, that the reeve give the instructions to the foreman.

Moved by Messrs. Chapman and Code, that the reeve get legal advice from our solicitor as regards the grant proposed to give to the park and pleasure grounds.

Moved by Messrs. Chapman and Code, that Councillor Curtis and the clerk canvass the town for subscription towards having the C.P.R. picnic come here, and report to Mr. Thornton.

Moved by Messrs. Chapman and Code, that the communication from the N. C. T. U. be received, and laid over until further consideration.

BIG FIRE IN TORONTO.

The Premises of H. P. Eckardt & Co. Damaged to the Extent of $75,000.

Toronto, April 30.

The stock of H. P. Eckardt & Co., wholesale grocers, Front-st. east, was damaged by fire yesterday afternoon to the extent of probably $75,000. The premises were also considerably damaged. The blaze was discovered about half-past 1, but there seems to have been some delay in ringing the alarm, as it was 1.40 before box 5 sent in the signal to the firemen. Box 8 was also pulled and the firemen were on the scene with the utmost despatch. The fire, which was in the top storey, was exceedingly difficult to get at as the place was stocked with sulphur, matches and other articles of a combustible nature. The smoke, when discovered by an employe of the firm, seemed to be coming from a pile of packing cases in the corner of the room. The flames broke forth so quickly that the employes had as much as they could do to get their coats and get out of the place before the whole flat seemed to be ablaze.

Five minutes after the arrival of the firemen seven streams of water were playing on the building, and a general alarm was sounded, bringing all the sections of the brigade. The dense sulphur smoke made it very hard for the firemen to fight the fire, and several of them were overcome with the fumes. One man, Thomas Spence of Bay-street Hall, fell unconscious from a ladder after inhaling the smoke, and was taken in the ambulance to St. Michael's Hospital.

Notwithstanding the difficulty the firemen encountered the flames were confined to the top flat of the Eckardt building, although part of the stock of W. B. Hamilton & Co., wholesale shoes, next door, was considerably damaged by fire and water.

Eckardt & Co. value their stock in round numbers at $100,000, and it is insured for $70,000 in the following companies by Messrs. Marter & York: London & Lancashire, $15,000; Lancashire, $15,000; Guardian, $15,000; Royal, $10,000; Commercial Union, $10,00; Queen's, $5000. Mr. William Ramsay owns the building, which is insured by J. B. Reid in the Lancashire for $8000 and in the London & Liverpool & Globe for $8000. There is also $1000 in the London & Lancashire on fixtures.

The water tower, which was stationed on Scott-street, did fine work and all of the engines worked admirably. One stream of hose was disabled by a coal cart passing over it, giving the fire a temporary advantage. It was nearly 4 o'clock before the flames were under control, and by this time the whole place was flooded with nearly a foot of water.

Fireman Spence recovered consciousness within an hour after his arrival at the hospital and is getting along very well. Some of the firemen were very sick last night owing to the sulphur. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Chief Graham, when told by a World man last night that there had been some dissatisfaction expressed by onlookers because the firemen had not immediately played on the front of the building, stated that the firemen tackled the blaze in the right way and where the fire was. They had a fierce fight and found it extremely difficult working among the sulphur fumes.

ALL GONE TO FIGHT.

Every Man in Athens Has Left for the War.

GREECE ARMED TO FIGHT FOR LIFE

They are Battling for Principle and it is the People's Fight—The New Cabinet Well Received—Turks Defeated at Velestino With Heavy Loss—The Latest News.

Stephen Crane in N.Y. Journal.

Athens, April 30.—I was with the Greek army in its campaign towards Janina, the principal town of Epirus, the southwestern province of Turkey, when I heard the first rumors of the hard fighting in Thessaly.

The journey from Arta overland to Thessaly requires a longer time than it does to go by the way of Athens, and so I have been fortunate enough to arrive in the capital in time to witness another popular outburst of the Athenians.

Crowds are in the streets, in the square before the King's Palace, and in every place of public congregation.

Practically every man in Athens is arming to go and fight the Turks. Every train into the city is loaded with other troops. Yesterday crowds broke into the gun shops and took the practicable weapons. It was unanimous throughout all classes. To-day Greece is armed to fight for her life.

To-day I went to a shop and found no one there but a boy seated on a box.

"Where is the proprietor?" said I.

"He has gone to the war," said the boy.

This man had taken no time to arrange his affairs in careful detail. He might have been gone out to buy a cigar in another shop. The shelves were stripped and the counters were bare.

"The proprietor has nailed fast the lid of a great box in which are the things. I cannot sell you anything," the boy said hastily. "I am going to the front."

In my hotel here, which is usually very English and impressive, they are shy on waiters, porters and call boys. These men have gone to the war. There is a battalion now preparing that uses as uniforms the stable clothes of a squadron of cavalry already gone. In fact, this is not a King's war, not a parliament's war, but a people's war.

It is absurd to say that the Greeks undertook this contest because they believed they would take Constantinople in a fortnight. No nation ever had a truer sense of the odds. The concert of Europe had calmly informed them of possible consequences; there had been a general movement to impress Greece with her danger, but the Greeks said: "Well, we must fight, anynow."

There will a great deal happen before these people of the mountains care to pause.

THE TURKS REPULSED

Severe Battle at Velestino in Which the Greeks Were Victorious.

Athens, April 30, midnight.—A telegram just received here says that a great battle has been fought at Velestino between a Turkish force of 8,000 and Gen. Smolenski's brigade. The despatch states that the Turks were repulsed with enormous losses.

Greek Royalty in Great Disfavor.

London, April 30.—The Standard's correspondent at Athens says:

This evening, as the Crown Princess Sophia was returning from a visit to the Ambulance Hospital, she was hissed and jeered by the crowd, which forced her to return to the hospital. The Royal carriage was then summoned and the Princess drove to the palace at the top of the speed of her horses.

The Royal arms have been stripped from the carriages in order that the occupants may drive about unrecognized and thus avoid similar experiences. As another indication of popular feeling, I may point out that many of the tradesmen, who have been wont to display the Royal escutcheons in front of their shops, have moved these.

While a priest was offering prayers for King George and the Royal family in one of the prominent churches to-day (Friday), he was interrupted by protests from the congregation. The ringleader was arrested, but the disorder was so great that many women fainted in terror.

It Was a Fierce Battle

Athens, April 30.—The battle of Velestino raged fiercely from sunrise until 10 this morning. The Greeks have been reinforced, the reinforcements arriving at the critical stage of the fight. General Smolenski telegraphs that the Turks will be unable to capture Pharsala, because the Greek position is strong and the morale of the Greek troops completely restored.

Greeks Showing New Life

London, April 30.—The Daily News correspondent at Salonica says it is reported there that 40,000 Greek troops have landed at Keramoti and blown up the railway tunnel near Okdjilar, and that a strong band of insurgents has appeared at Nevisea, with the intention of cutting off communication with Seresvitch. Troops have been hastily sent to Monastir, as an attack there is feared.

New Ministry Well Received.

Athens, April 30.—On the whole, the new Ministry is well received by the newspapers. The Asty observes that the Cabinet has a formidable task and hopes it will do its duty "without heeding the inconsiderate clamors of the street." The Acropolis expresses the opinion that King George ought to invoke the mediation of Europe in person. The more advanced newspapers term the Ministry the Royal Defence Cabinet.

There is no news to-day from Arta, but it is rumored that the Greek forces which have been operating in Epirus against the Turks are retreating.

At a Cabinet Council held to-day it was decided that the Minister of War, Col. Tosamados, and the Minister of the Interior, M. Theotokis, should proceed to Pharsala in order to ascertain the state of the Greek forces there.

Vassos Recognized as a Belligerent.

Paris, April 30.—La Patrie publishes a despatch from Rome, saying that Admiral Canevaro, the Italian commander in Cretan waters, has been ordered to consider Col. Vassos, who commands the Greek army of occupation in Crete, as a belligerent, and to no longer oppose Greek attacks on the Turkish troops there.

Osman is on the Way.

Constantinople, April 30.—The report that Osman Pasha is on his way to Janina, Epirus, with 30,000 additional Turkish troops, is confirmed.

Changing the Staff.

Athens, April 30.—The headquarters staff of the Greek army at Pharsala has been completely changed. Gen. Macris and Colonels Saponutzakis, Mastropas and Antoniades have resigned and started for Athens.

Ralli is Bound to Lead.

Athens, April 30.—During the negotiations for the reconstruction of the Ministry, M. Ralli opposed the proposal to make M. Sotiropoulo Premier and said: "Setting aside all false modesty, I must be recognized. I am the Premier designated by events."

The Opposition leaders acquiesced in this view, but M. Deligeorgis refused to join the Ministry unless the Premier were chosen outside the regular constituted parties in the Boule. To this M. Ralli replied that he could not and would not attempt to form a Ministry without the support of the other Opposition sections in the Assembly, and he tried to induce M. Deligeorgis to join.

The public tension is much relieved by the change of Ministers, and it is now believed that all serious danger of internal disorders is removed.

Ralli Will Reorganize Things.

London, April 30.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Athens had an interview with M. Ralli, during which this ambitious Greek statesman outlined his policy. M. Ralli said: "My policy will consist in the reorganization of the army, whose recuperative forces are practically inexhaustible, and the reestablishment of order, together with a satisfactory solution of our foreign relations. We refuse to accept a mandate from the King or from the Chamber. We must have an absolutely free hand."

Greek Soldiers Pouring Into Arta

London, April 30.—A despatch to The Times from Arta, dated Saturday, says: "The Greek soldiers are pouring into the town in an almost unbroken column, coming apparently from every point of the Turkish territory hitherto occupied by the Greeks."

The Times correspondent adds that these soldiers show no signs of a desire to continue the fight against the Turks, and their presence crowds the town five-fold above its normal capacity, causing serious inconveniences, and threatening, unless something is done to relieve the pressure, a serious danger.

Cretan Blockade Relaxed.

London, April 30.—A despatch to The Times from Canea says that the admirals of the international fleet have visited the insurgents at Akrotiri and had a prolonged conference with the leaders. Admiral Canevaro informed them of the fall of Larissa and of the retreat of the Greek army. They were greatly moved and asked to be allowed to go to Greece to fight for King George.

The admirals then announced their intention to relax the blockade, which, they said, was not intended to starve the islanders into subjection. They also assured the insurgents that they would be permitted to come into town, provided they came unarmed, to purchase anything they might need, and moreover that they would be furnished with an escort to guard them against any fear of Mussulman attacks.

PLEA OF THE PRINCESS.

Alexandra Wants the Poor of the London Slums to be Represented in the Jubilee Festivities.

London, April 30.—The Princes of Wales has written to the Lord Mayor of London, pointing out that in the schemes to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria in June, the poorest of the poor, the tenants of the London slums, have been overlooked. She says:

"Might I plead that they also should have a share in the fetes of that blessed day, and so remember to the end of their lives that great and good Queen whose reign, by the blessing of God, has been prolonged for 60 years? Let us, therefore, provide the unfortunate ones, these beggars and outcasts, with a dinner, or some substantial meal during the week of the jubilee commemoration. I have great pleasure in heading a subscription list for that purpose with £100."

DUBLIN NATION IS WILD.

It Warns the People of Ireland to be Wary of Emigrating to Canada, Especially to Manitoba.

Dublin, April 30.—The historic newspaper, The Nation, which has been revived, will to-morrow publish a warning addressed to the clergy and people of Ireland against what it characterizes as a nefarious scheme initiated in Canada to induce Irish emigrants to settle in Manitoba. Two emigrant commissioners, it says, have been sent to reside permanently in Dublin and Belfast. Both of these are Catholics, because, being of that faith, they will be more likely to facilitate the plan.

The Nation declares that Manitoba is a kind of Siberia, and, moreover, says that the Protestant majority in the Province tyrannize over the Catholics, who are deprived of schools and have only a few churches.

THE MILITIA ORDERS

Contain Several Items of Interest to the Forces.

SHOULDER PADS FOR RIFLEMEN.

Majors Will Not be Mounted After the First of July — Proposal to Make the Queen's Birthday a Perpetual Holiday Discussed — News From Ottawa.

Ottawa, April 30.—(Special.)—A militia-general order, issued to-day, contains among other things, the following matter of interest to the force:

The Minister of Militia and Defence has approved of the issue, free of cost, of Snider ammunition to regiments other than rifle associations under the following regulations:

1. The first issue will be made upon a requisition of officers commanding units of active militia, or of presidents of regimental or other rifle associations, of 60 rounds for each individual member of such unit or association.

2. A further issue will be made of a like quantity on the receipt of a certificate from a responsible officer that the previous issue has been actually expended at target practice.

An important change, affecting junior majors of infantry and rifle corps, is announced. After July 1 next such officers will not appear in parade mounted, and no provision will be made for horses for the use of such officers.

The 30th Peel Battalion is authorized to use as a badge, "A demi-Tyrwhitt displayed."

Certificates of military instruction (cavalry or infantry) obtained prior to Dec. 17, 1883, at military schools, or from boards of officers, will, for purposes of appointment or promotion, be considered as having lapsed.

Shoulder pads will be issued to infantry corps armed with the Lee-Enfield rifle in the proportion of one to each rifle issued. They will not be issued to rifle corps. Shoulder pads should be attached to the left shoulder only and will be worn on all occasions when the rifle is carried, except when in review order.

The Colonial Secretary has transmitted a copy of the notice issued by the National Rifle Association, containing a list of the competitions which (subject to modification in the preparation of the program) will be open to Her Majesty's Indian and Colonial forces at the Bisley meeting, which will take place from July 13 to July 24 next.

In moving the second reading of his bill to make the Queen's Birthday a holiday in perpetuity, Senator Macdonald of British Columbia referred in eloquent terms to the life of the Queen and to the achievements of her long and illustrious reign, and appealed to both sides of the House to support his bill. The present year, the occasion of the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee, was a most fitting opportunity for Canada to express her loyalty to Her Majesty and appreciation of her long and glorious reign.

Senator Prowse endorsed all said about Her Majesty's nobility of character and the great good which had come to Canada and the Empire during her long reign. He did not, however, think that it required an Act of Parliament to embalm the memory of England's Queen in the hearts of her loyal subjects in Canada. This country was not called upon to sacrifice the earnings of its laboring classes by adding another to the list of public holidays of the country.

Hon. David Mills thought there might be some force in the objection raised if Parliament in passing the present act bound the future generation. In passing the bill, however, Parliament was simply giving at present expression to a feeling of loyalty and devotion to the Queen, and if later it was thought wise to repeal the act that could be done without casting any reflection on the memory of Queen Victoria. The Queen's Birthday had for a generation been looked forward to as one of the most convenient and pleasant of our public holidays, coming as it does in the early days of summer, and he saw no reason why its observation should not be continued after the demise of the Queen as a mark of the respect and veneration of the people of Canada.

The bill was read a second time.

The second caucus of the Opposition was held this morning, when the tariff was again under consideration. It was decided not to submit an amendment to the main resolutions, but that in committee an amendment will be proposed, looking to restricting the preferential offer to Great Britain. The amendment will provide that Great Britain give Canada something in return and will declare that the Conservative party was always in favor of preferential trade.

The bill to incorporate the Methodist Trust Fire Insurance Company was passed. The object is to carry on a general insurance business within the Methodist Church, the capital being $500,000. The head offices are to be in Toronto. There was objection raised to the clause by which the company may invest or deposit such portion of its funds in foreign securities as necessary for the maintenance of any foreign branch. Dr. Antliffe said that they wished to cover Newfoundland, which came under the General Conference. The bill was passed.

The name of Alexander Gunn, ex-M. P., is now mentioned in connection with the collectorship of inland revenue at Kingston in the place of Mr. Fleming Rowland, who has resigned. Mr. Gunn is the Liberal who once defeated Sir John Macdonald in Kingston.

It is reported to-day that overtures are being made looking to the termination of the session by June 15. If an agreement can be reached the Government will be disposed to drop some of its measures.

The Committee on Banking and Commerce met to-day. The first bill taken up was one respecting the building societies and loan and savings companies carrying on business in Ontario. Sir Richard Cartwright favored the postponement of the bill until it was seen whether it would apply to the whole of the Dominion or be confined to Ontario. The bill was held over.

James Fisher, M. L. A., will represent Manitoba and the Northwest in the Hudson's Bay expedition. The Diana will be fitted out at Halifax.

Boils

It is often difficult to convince people their blood is impure, until dreadful carbuncles, abscesses, boils, scrofula or salt rheum, are painful proof of the fact. It is wisdom now, or whenever there is any indication of blood, to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and prevent such eruptions and suffering.

"I had a dreadful carbuncle abscess, red, fiery, fierce and sore. The doctor attended me over seven weeks. When the abscess broke, the pains were terrible, and I thought I should not live through it. I heard and read so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I decided to take it, and my husband, who was suffering with boils, took it also. It soon purified our built me up and restored my health so that, although the doctor said I would not be able to work hard, I have since done the work for 20 people. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured my husband of the boils, and we regard it a wonderful medicine." MRS. ANNA PETERSON, Latimer, Kansas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"HEAPING coals of fire" is here exemplified. While the United states is threatening to put a big duty on Canadian saw logs, Great Britain is gracefully handing over free and in fee simple the log of the Mayflower to the United States. It would be not like some of the Anglo-phobes to propose an import duty on this venerable log.

The Bobcaygeon Inndependent says:—A statesman is forgiven much if he is practical and successful. Woe betide if he fails. Every day proves more clearly that Mr. Laurier is on the high road to become Canada's greatest leader. He combines with the noblest aims a sufficient touch of the old Adam to make those aims conform to the popular taste. He is a born leader, matured in a school where he had laid before him the weakness and vices of those in power; a preparation that will certainly give surprising strength to his naturally charming character, and make of him a leader such as any nation might be proud.

A NOVEL cause for action for damages against a corporation, crops up in Oxford County. Patrick Young, of Whitechurch Township, has instructed his solicitors to issue a writ for $10,000 against the township for damages arising out of the death of four of his children from scarlet fever. The disease broke out in a neighbour's family, and the authorities failing, it is alleged, to take the proper sanitary precautions as to isolation, etc., Mr. Young's family, not knowing the danger associated with the affected children, and, contracting the disease, four of them died. Hence the suit for damages. Mr. Young claims that the township authorities were culpably negligent and careless, and thereby sacrificed the lives of his four children.

THERE is satisfaction and dissatisfaction with the new tariff. This is inevitable. It is beyond human potency to frame a tariff that will be universally satisfactory. The new tariff does not come up to the standard of the Liberal ideal tariff. The circumstances of the country, the large industrial interests concerned, the necessity of a large revenue made necessary by the great obligations incurred by the late government, and numerous other reasons make the process of tariff reform a slow one. The Liberals have done their best in the direction of their ideals that could be done, and a perusal of the resolution adopted at Ottawa in 1893 will show that this pledge the Liberal Government has redeemed the first opportunity: "The tariff should be so adjusted as to make free or to bear as lightly as possible upon the necessaries of life, and should be so arranged as to promote freer trade with the whole world, more particularly with Great Britain and the United States." We have freer trade promoted with Great Britain by the new tariff, and if the United States does not see fit to meet us half way the loss will be theirs. The hearty appreciation of Great Britain of the new attitude of Canada towards her is refreshing. Instead of tariff hostility we have tariff amity and a practical expression of our preference for the great mother land.

THE TWO WAYS TO THE EAST.

Goldwin Smith writes:—Another war-cloud has appeared on the British horizon. France, it seems, is pushing forward with sinister purposes in the region immediately south of Egypt. The native powers there are not savage but half civilised, and capable, as allies, of being turned to military account, as their appearance in the field has already shown. A collision in that quarter might be specially dangerous, as it would be beyond the immediate control of statesmen, so that any hot-headed commander or adventurer might by his violence create a situation out of which, passion on both sides being inflamed, diplomacy would not easily find a way. What can it be that makes France so intensely jealous of British presence in Egypt? Does the fancy that Egypt belongs to her because she unsuccessfully invaded it under Napoleon? Or does she fear that England will get control of the Suez Canal and use it for purposes of war? It seems to be conceded that the Suez Canal could not be used for purposes of war. If international law did not close it the sinking of a coal barge would. England's only safe route to India in case of war, it seems to be generally admitted, is by the Cape of Good Hope. To that dependency, therefore, she must resolutely cling.

THE HORRORS OF WAR.

War is always terrible, but war in which Turks take part is usually marked by special horrors. Crown Princess Sophia is reported in a despatch saying that while she was in the hospital at Larissa she heard wounded Greeks tell that the Turks built fires around some of the wounded prisoners and roasted them to death, and inflicted horrible tortures on others before despatching them. It was barbarities of this kind by the Turks that obtained for the Greeks the sympathy and assistance of Europe in the war of emancipation between 1820 and 1830. Those were terrible years. In 1822 occurred the awful Turkish massacre of the inhabitants of the Island of Scio. Scio was one of the places on which Turkish rule had hitherto rested most lightly. Fertile and beautiful, it also enjoyed immunities and privileges, especially as to education, not open to Greeks elsewhere in the Sultan's dominions. Consequently, it had become a favourite dwelling place for quiet, cultured people, scholars and widows consulting the good of their families. But because the Sciotes were suspected of sympathy with the patriotic rising on the main land, the Sultan poured hordes of the scum of Constantinople and Asia Minor into the doomed island, with the result that in the course of a few days 25,000 people were put to death among nameless horrors, about 47,000 dragged off into still more dreadful slavery; so that out of a population of nearly 80,000, only about 5,000 remained and those struck to the very heart. There is some variation in the statistics of this massacre, but we take the most moderate computation. These horrors seem to have brought to the front the Greek naval hero, Kanares, who, accompanied by a friend and a few followers, drove his little ship, with many details of great personal valor, straight among the Turkish men-of-war, which he fired and sank. The Turkish High Admiral himself escaped, but only to die miserably injured upon the very beach of the Scio he had desolated. The visitors returned to harbor, to walk quietly to a neighbouring church and return thanks for their conquest over the cruel invader. Later on in the war, Kanares repeated the same tactics with equal success, and a third effort of his would have destroyed the Egyptian fleet (sent to aid the Sultan) but for the rising of an unfavourable wind. Kanares lived to receive the highest honours from his liberated country.

POISONED BLOOD.

Dreadful Death-Draught Comes from Diseased Kidneys

When Uric Acid Flows in the Veins, Life looks out of Darkened Windows, expecting soon the Close of Day.

The fashionable Italian poison of the XVI. century was Aqua Tofana. It was used by the Medicis and all the first families of Rome, Genoa and Naples. In five years historians tell us, over 600 wives used it to make widows of themselves.

In these modern days a more terrible and more prevalent poison is decimating the human family, and men have asked in vain for an antidote. It is the uraemic poisoning of the blood, caused by diseased kidneys. The poison which these useful organs should filter from the blood, is allowed to remain in the circulation and courses through the body, like

Holds such an enmity with the blood of man,
That with a sudden vigor it doth posset and curd
Like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood."

To-day there is a remedy. Science has discovered a sure cure. All may have and apply it. It is sold under the name of DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

It is a specific for all Kidney ailments. It cures by restoring the Kidneys, so that they properly perform their natural functions. It is the only known cure for Diabetes, and Bright's Disease. For sale by druggists everywhere, and the Dodd's Medicine Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

Mr. VERNON BROMLEY, Trenton, Ont., says: "For a number of years have suffered severely from Rheumatism and Sciatica. Was induced to procure a half dozen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, which I have used, and from being a cripple I am a well man."

Mr. THOS. HARRISON, St. Mary's, N.B., says: "In spite of all other treatment I suffered for nearly a year with Stone of the Bladder. I was relieved by passing the same, after using one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and completely cured by a few boxes."

Mr. WM. MCEVELLA, 375 Frie street, Ottawa, says: "Two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills have worked a wonderful cure in my case. Had been laid up with kidney trouble for months."

G. B. COMBS, Orillia, Ont., says: "I most cheerfully testify that five boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured me of Diabetes from which I suffered two years."

For Weak People.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for weak people having heart or nerve troubles, such palpitation, throbbing, spasms, dizziness, shortness of breath, smothering feeling, pain in the breast, etc., are an invaluable medicine as hundreds of certified cures bear witness. For anaemia, debility, after effects of Grippe and loss of appetite, they are a specific.

HELD UP ON THE STREET

By Cramps, Giddiness and Weakness Resulting From Dyspepsia.

Paine's Celery Compound Delivers Mr. Rose From Every Trouble.

The story of Mr. William V. Rose of Montreal is the experience of thousands of men and women who are living a miserable life owing to the agonies of dyspepsia.

Mr. Rose's experience with suffering was a long one. From his youth indigestion and stomach troubles subjected him to daily tortures, and continuing up to his sixty fourth year, always increasing in intensity and danger.

After a lifetime of failures with medicines and doctors, a friend who has used Paine's Celery Compound with great success, induced Mr. Rose to give it a trial. The medicine was used, and now Mr. Rose joyfully boasts of health and a new lease of life.

Mr. Rose, with a view of benefitting all dyspeptic sufferers, writes as follows:

"For a long time I was a great sufferer from dyspepsia and was often compelled to stop on the street until I could recover from cramps, pains and attacks of giddiness that were brought on by the terrible disease. I had little strength, could not sleep much, and was so run down that I thought I would never get better.

"I used many kinds of medicine, but they did me very little good. At last I was recommended to use Paine's Celery Compound. I tried a bottle and it did me more good than anything I had taken before. I have used four bottles and have completely banished the distressing pains in my stomach and I feel well.

"After having had dyspepsia for almost a life-time, I think the cure is a wonderful one."

THE DEBATE ENDED.

Commoners Put In a Long Day Yesterday.

MANY TOPICS WERE CONSIDERED

Mr. Davin Made a Kick on Kipling's Poem —Belgian Goods Under the New Tariff Again Raked Over—Messrs. Casey, Clancy, McMillan and Others on the Tariff.

Ottawa, April 30.—(Special.)—A great variety of topics came before the House to-day before the Budget debate was resumed.

Mr. Davin introduced a bill to amend the Mounted Police Pension Act. He said that it was to enable the Department, in case a policeman served 10 years and was disabled, to give him a pension. At present the limit is 15 years.

Mr. Laurier asked if the bill was really in order, coming from a private member.

Mr. Davin said that that was a moot point, because it might be held to be enhancing the burdens of the Government. He hoped that under any circumstances the Government would take it up.

Mr. Laurier informed Mr. Lemieux that when any responsible persons or company submitted to the Government a proposition for extension of the Baie des Chaleurs Railway to Gaspe Basin the Government would be disposed to consider to what extent material assistance would be rendered to such company.

Mr. Robertson asked what action the Government had taken in regard to the Copyright Act of 1889.

The Premier replied: In view of the many objects advanced by the Colonial Office permitting the Act of 1889 to go into operation, the Government have not up to the present further pressed the subject on the attention of the Colonial Office.

Mr. Monk asked what action did the Government intend taking in regard to the claims put forward by importers of Belgian goods in Montreal that they were entitled to a reduction of duty in virtue of the treaty of 1862.

Mr. Paterson replied that the following communication, signed by the Commissioner of Customs, had been forwarded to the Consul-General for Belgium at Montreal:

"I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 24th instant, addressed to the Hon. Controller of Customs, with reference to a reduction of 1-8 of the duties on Belgian goods imported into Canada. In reply, I am directed to state that the resolutions introduced into the House of Commons respecting the reciprocal tariff provide:

That when the customs tariff of any country admits the products of Canada on terms which, on the whole, are as favorable to Canada as the terms of the reciprocal tariff herein referred to are to the countries to which it may apply, articles which are the growth, produce or manufacture of such country, when imported direct therefrom, may then be imported direct into Canada, or taken out of warehouse for consumption therein at the reduced rates of duty provided in the reciprocal tariff set forth in schedule D.

(A) That any question that may arise as to the countries entitled to the benefits of the reciprocal tariff shall be decided by the Controller of Customs, subject to the authority of the Governor-in-Council.

(B) That the Controller of Customs may make such regulations as are necessary for carrying out the intention of the two preceding sections.

The Hon. Controller of Customs is not satisfied that the customs tariff of Belgium is such as to entitle that country to the benefits of the reciprocal tariff, but he will be pleased to receive any information that you may wish to furnish on that subject.

The Hon. Controller is advised that the treaty to which you refer relates to a condition of affairs which does not arise under the tariff resolutions now before the House of Commons.

Mr. Davies informed Mr. Dugas that Dr. Lavoie, commander of the steamship Aberdeen, was employed by the Government up to 1897, but was dismissed for not having notified the Department that some of his officers were incompetent and inefficient. For that reason it was felt necessary to treat him with exemplary severity.

Sir Charles Tupper asked how soon papers in reference to the agreement with the G.T.R. for the extension of the I.C.R. might be expected.

Mr. Blair said the documents were in course of preparation, but had to be submitted to two contracting parties, and some of the important details were not finally agreed upon. The Government was making all possible speed and he hoped that he would be able to present them to the House in a few days.

Mr. Davin said he had been requested by a number of Canadians to bring before the House a protest on their part against the description of Canada by Kipling that had now acquired world-wide fame. He read from The Montreal Star a reply to Kipling's poem by Mr. Arthur Weir of Montreal.

Continuing, Mr. Davin said Canada had suffered often from the idea prevalent in England that this country is a land of snow, instead of being a country endowed with one of the finest climates in the world. In many respects her climate was her greatest attraction. When a great genius, one of the marvelous literary men of England, sent out a poem describing Canada as a country whose chief characteristic was that she is snowbound the effect could not fail to have great influence. It would be more correct to describe this country as rich in vineyards, rich in mines, rich in forests, rich in corn fields, rich in harbors, in deep-flowing rivers and inland seas. Under the circumstances he desired to go on record against accepting Mr. Kipling's description as true, although it was well meant.

The Prime Minister said he did not know that Kipling's description of Canada as Our Lady of the Snows was the most apt he could have selected, but the world was accustomed to poetical exaggeration, and even the House had occasionally had evidence of it. He rose to interpose an objection now against the business of the House being taken up by the poets. He hoped there would be less poetry and more business. [Laughter and cheers.]

Mr. Foster: That's snow matter. [Laughter.]

Mr. McNeill said that we in Canada were a little too sensitive in reference to our snow. Whether Kipling's expression was the happiest or not, Canada could well be described as a lady in whose breast patriotism glowed.

Mr. Quinn pointed out that it was to Thomas D'Arcy McGee, one of our famous poets and statesmen, that Kipling had gone for his title.

Sir A. P. Caron read from The Catholic Register that evidently Kipling had received his inspiration from the beautiful legend of the Romish Church, Notre Dames des Neiges. Personally, he saw no reason why Canada should complain about being called the Lady of the Snows. On the northern half of the continent she was showing a record for progress that she had good reason to be proud of.

The matter then dropped.

Col. Prior called attention to telegrams in to-day's papers of the quarantining of the C. P. R. steamer Empress of Japan at Williamshead, B. C., on account of smallpox. He said that the accommodation for first-class passengers at the quarantine station was very insufficient and, as many of these passengers were delicate ladies, he trusted they would receive every consideration. At the same time he desired to see the quarantine regulations strictly carried out. There was a rumor round town that the C. P. R. had been authorized to allow first-class passengers to continue to their destinations. He asked what action the Government had taken in this matter.

Mr. Fisher replied that, according to telegrams received by the department, 963 persons were on board the steamer. All those who were not affected had been isolated, pending the expiration of the incubation period of the disease. That time, he believed, would expire to-morrow, and the quarantine officer would then take such action as the case demanded. He defended the appointment of the present officer.

Mr. Casey resumed the debate on the Budget. He defended the manner in which the new tariff had been evolved. The country had for 18 years been sapped of its vitality by a protective tariff, he said, and for that reason was not able to stand the full measure of free trade which the Government would have liked to introduce. Indeed, he feared the Government had erred on the side of generosity in giving too much consideration to the pampered pets of protection. For himself, he would prefer further reductions, but he accepted this tariff as an instalment. Mr. Casey praised the preferential tariff as a stroke of genius, and found in it the gist of the whole trade policy of the Government.

Mr. Clancy, speaking after recess, desired to enter his protest against a portion of the tariff proposals. To this date the Government had given no evidence of their having a policy; for nobody knew where their tariff legislation would lead to. They had gone to the country with small cries—binder twine, coal oil, rice and barb wire. As to coal oil, the Government had made a reduction of one cent a gallon. Now, putting the average consumption at 20 gallons per family, would the advantage compensate for the loss to the industry concerned? It was undignified to call it a relief.

Mr. McMillan defended the tariff, declaring that to introduce a free trade policy at once would be fatal to the industries of the country. But he accepted the present tariff as an instalment towards that ideal tariff from which all protection would be eliminated.

Mr. Powell (Con., Westmoreland) reviewed from a legal standpoint the Government's position in regard to the preferential treaty clause. After a careful study of all authorities, his conclusion was that the proposed reciprocity tariff must be as open to Germany and Belgium as to Britain. If not it was a violation of Britain's treaty obligations, and, therefore, could not be carried out. He expected that the whole matter would have to be determined by the courts and the law officers of the Home Government. So far as the general tariff adhered to protection he favored it.

With this the debate ended and the Speaker declared the motion to go into Committee of Ways and Means carried.

Mr. Fielding moved the first resolution pro forma, without any intention, as he said, of keeping the House longer.

This resolution having carried by consent, he moved that the committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

"I shall ask the Premier," said the Opposition leader, "to adopt the usual course, under those circumstances, of allowing the same latitude of discussion of the resolutions as there would be on the general question. A number of honorable gentlemen who were to speak have deferred their remarks in order to let the House go into committee."

To this Mr. Laurier assented, the committee arose and the House adjourned at 12.35.

Dr. Chase.

All successful and distinguished men have imitators, and Dr. Chase, the well-known author of Chase's Recipe Book, proved no exception to the rule. Dr. Chase's discoveries have many pretended rivals, but no equals.

Long scientific researches produced Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Chase's Ointment, the first a certain cure for all kidney, liver, stomach, bladder and rheumatic troubles; the latter an absolute specific for chronic and offensive skin diseases. Among his other discoveries were Chase's Catarrh Cure and Chase's Linseed and Turpentine for colds and bronchitis.

During 1895 the Canadian manufacturers, Edmanson, Bates & Co., 45 Lombard street, Toronto, gave away free 500,000 samples of Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and 100,000 samples of Chase's Ointment. The return they brought proved how much they were appreciated. The same free distribution of samples will be continued during 1896. Those at a distance should enclose a 5-cent stamp and also receive a sheet of the latest music in return.

Probabilities.

Fresh to strong northerly winds, local showers, little change in temperature.

Quarterly Religious Services.

The quarterly religious services will be held in Mark street Methodist church, Ashburnham, to-morrow morning, with a fellowship meeting at 10 o'clock and the reception of new members.

To-day's Market.

The market to-day was not largely attended by the farmers on account, presumably, of the wet weather. Eggs brought from 8 to 9c, butter from 16 to 17c, chickens from 50 to 65c, and turkeys from 75c to $1.25. There were very few vegetables on sale.

Wedding Bells.

At the parsonage this morning Rev. J. J. Rae, pastor of the Charlotte street Methodist church, solemnized a marriage between Miss Hannah Staples, daughter of of Mr. Henry Staples, of Pontypool, and Robert Mace, of Young's Point. Rev. A. H. Ranton assisted in the ceremony.

The Spirit of the Law not Violated.

Mr. R. M. Deanistoun was charged before the magistrate this morning with riding his bicycle on the sidewalk, but he stated that he merely rode from the corner of Smith street to his own residence, and the magistrate held that such being the case the spirit of the bylaw was not violated, and the case was dismissed.

A Big Span.

An enormous span 180 feet long is being put together at the Central Bridge Works for the Desjardins canal at Hamilton. The bridge is for a highway and will span the canal and the T. H. & B. railroad which runs beside it. The structure will be particularly rigid as it is intended to be heavy enough to allow motor cars to pass over it.

Dog Tags.

The dog and the cow bylaws are to be rigidly enforced by the police. There are now 135 tag tags issued as against 650 last year. The town clerk will be in his office this evening after 7.30 o'clock to allow citizens to procure licenses for their dogs up to the last named. On Monday the police start with a list of summons for the delinquents.

Drop in a Little Earlier.

Quite a number of our customers went away disappointed last Saturday because their favourite magazines or periodicals were all sold. We have ordered more of the best sellers so as to accommodate everyone, but would advise you to come earlier in the evening and you will be sure to get just what you want. A. H. STRATTON & Co., 417 George street.

A Jubilee Elm.

An elm in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty was placed on the upper terrace of St. John's church grounds this morning. At an early hour Mr. Harry Long, people's churchwarden, was to be seen delving in the pouring rain and placing the jubilee elm in position. It was a small seedling and will be a tree to date from. The warm May shower seemed to pour a benediction upon Mr. Long's patriotic enterprise, but it is a question whether his patriotism towards the church or the Empire is the stronger.

Obituary.

The death of Mrs. Hannah Dixon Craig, of Port Hope, widow of the late Wm. Craig, took place Thursday night. The deceased was a resident of Port Hope for over forty years and was greatly esteemed by friends and acquaintances. She leaves four sons and two daughters to mourn her end. The sons are Wm. Craig, T. Dixon Craig, M. P., Jos. Craig, of Minneapolis, Minn., and the Rev. John Craig, who is now on his way back to India, where he has laboured as a missionary for nearly twenty years. The daughters are Mrs. Dr. Clemesha, of Port Hope, and Mrs. Judge Chisholm, of Berlin. The funeral, which will be private, will take place on Monday afternoon at three o'clock.—Port Hope Guide.

Mr. Thos. Blezard, M. P. P., was in town to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Tully have returned from Omemee.

Mr. W. H. Hill, of the Sun Life Insurance Co., was in Lindsay yesterday.

Mr. Wm. Menzies, who has been very ill for the past week, is now convalescing.

Mr. E. B. Stone's condition remains unchanged, very little improvement being apparent.

Mr. Chas. McGill, General Manager of the Ontario Bank, is down from Toronto for Sunday.

Miss Jennie Graham, of Lakefield, who has been spending a few days in town, has returned home.

Mrs. R. W. Grubbe returned last evening from Toronto, where she has been spending the last few days.

Miss Kate Curtis, of Port Hope, has been visiting Miss Laura Belleghem, Hunter street, during the week.

Mr. Wm. Glover, who has been in town on business for the last day or two, returned to Toronto last night.

Mr. A. G. Chambers has left for Detroit, where he has accepted a responsible position with a large grocery firm.

Lieut.-Governor Kirkpatrick is home from England, where he successfully underwent a surgical operation.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Walter Green have been spending the last few days in Omemee as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Green.

Mr. John Hetherington has sufficiently recovered from his recent accident to be able to resume work, although his bruises are still painful at times.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Keogh have returned from their bridal tour and will be at home to their friends on Wednesday and Thursday, the 5th and 6th inst., at No. 494 Aylmer street.

Mr. Henry Best leaves on Monday morning for the "Soo," to look after his investments in the vicinity. He will go by steamer from Owen Sound.

Messrs. Geo. McCormick, M. P., Parry Sound; S. Hughes, M. P., Victoria; Geo. McHugh, M. P., Victoria, and Senator Dobson, Lindsay, all passed through yesterday on their way home from Ottawa for Sunday.

Mr. Charles Kyle was the local representative of the wholesale firm of Eckart & Co., which was burned out in Toronto. In case the firm does not resume business Mr. Kyle's genial face will be greatly missed in town.

Rev. W. R. Young's term at the George street Methodist church expires on June 23rd and between now and then Conference affairs will keep him out of town nearly all the time, although he will endeavour to be in Peterborough for Sundays.

In yesterday's issue of THE EXAMINER mention was omitted of the fact that the husband of the late Mrs. George Warde was connected with the British army and was a captain in the American army prior to his death. His father was Col. Warde, of the British army, and brother of Lady Neill.

The Lindsay Post says: Dr. Wm. Kenny, will leave town next week with his family for Peterborough, where he will practice his profession in future. He is an experienced and capable vet., and will no doubt do well in our sister town, as the citizens take a pride in fine driving animals and fancy stock.

The results of the final examinations in Applied Science at McGill University, Montreal, have been published and amongst the names of those standing high in the graduating class are Messrs. Harold R. Burnham in Civil Engineering and William F. Counsal, Fred. W. J. McKibbin and Thomas Ferguson in Mechanical Engineering. The boys are to be congratulated on taking so high a standing.

The Lindsay Watchman says,—We have had with us for the past five weeks one of Lindsay's former residents in the person of Mr. Henry Miller, who has assisted in the disposal of Senator Dobson's business to Mr. James Shannon. During his stay we were wishing that Bro. Miller would once more make his home with us, but we understand that he has accepted a position with Mr. Geo. Carton, of Peterborough, to to manage his grocery business. Henry is an Oddfellow and was always a welcome visitor to Lindsay Lodge. We are pleased to bring him under the fraternal notice of Otonabee Lodge, with whom we are sure he will soon become a general favourite.

FESTAL HOMAGE TO BISHOP O'CONNOR.

CONVENT CHILDREN'S CONGRATULATIONS AND TRIBUTES.

A Beautiful Scene—White Clad Children, Bright Flowers, Sweet Music and Happy Wishes—Address of His Lordship and the Remarks of Others.

His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, would be difficult to please, if he were not, as he was, more than delighted with the spontaneous and cordial character of the congratulations that overwhelmed him last night at the convent on the occasion of the presentation of the festival homage of the Convent pupils.

On this occasion the children from the tenderest years to the maturest pupil were joined by the adults of the congregation and large numbers of prominent citizens of other creeds, and denominations in extending the most hearty congratulations to his Lordship upon the fact of his having reached the eighth anniversary of his consecration to the episcopal office. It is as difficult to find words to fittingly express the warmth of the homage given the revered guest of the evening as to find language to describe the beautiful character of the medium through which the children, under the tutelage of the good sisters, gave expression to their feelings.

The fine music hall was garbed en fete for the occasion. Cordons of evergreen picked out with bright hued flowers were looped in graceful festoons from the angles of the hall to the centre and united there in a great floral trophy. The children clad in snowy white, filled a range of sloping seats and covered them like living lilies. The scene was a most beautiful one, and its impressiveness grew on one as the evening advanced.

At eight o'clock the episcopal party, consisting of His Lordship and the Cathedral clergy—Ven. Archdeacon Casey, Rev. Father Scanlan, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick and Rev. Father O'Sullivan, entered the hall to the strains of a joyous festal march, the whole audience rising in honour of the guest of the evening. There were present among many others, Messrs. Jas. Kendry, M.P., J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., D. W. Dumble, J. H. Burnham, R. Fair, L. M. Hayes, member of the School Board, and M. Quinlan, chairman of the Separate School Board.

Then began the beautiful festal homage of the children, which opened with a choral song, "All Hail the Happy Meeting," in which Miss Annie Simons took the solo. This was followed by an elaborate ceremony, "The Little One's Wishes," carried out with most delightful charm, in which bright-eyed little girls, tripping fairies, a wealth of bright flowers and bright singing with intricate and prettily performed fancy marching, were the chief features, which culminated in the graceful laying at the bishop's feet of the flowers that had been so beautifully interwoven in act with the beautiful and loving sentiments of the music presented and the cunning little recitations of the children.

The vocal solo, Moore's sweet "No, not More Welcome," was excellently sung by Miss Nettie Lewis.

Next came a triple floral tribute from the elder pupils, consisting of a song and chorus—"Our Fondest Memories"—in which the soil were taken by Misses Annie Simons, Jennie Riley and Nettie Lewis, and the delightful finale of this was the graceful presentation of magnificent shower bouquets of roses.

The first part of the programme was concluded by a brilliant mimetic instrumental performance—three pianos and two violins. The latter were played by Misses Bell and Pollock, who effectively added to the brightness of the selection, through which ran, like a chain of pearls, the merry warble of the birds.

The second part of the programme opened with a beautiful performance of the violin solo—Farmer's arrangement of "The Harp of Tara"—by Miss Lottie Bell, of Keene. Miss Bell performed this beautiful selection with a tenderness and delicacy artistically worthy of its character. Her purity of tone and expression were deserving of special remark.

To this succeeded what may be called the chef-d'œuvre of the evening on the part of the children—"A Festal Offering to our beloved Bishop—Spring's Crown of Flowers." This scene was indescribably pretty. A dozen or so little girls beautifully dressed to represent as many kinds of flowers, and crowned with the petals of the flowers they represented, joined in a many dance, and, with pretty little mannerisms and gestures, recited verses referring to the virtues symbolised by the several flowers and concluded the beautiful scene by adding to the barricade of bloom that shut in the Bishop like floral prison walls, and then vanishing in sweet music like so many little sprites. While the children in this scene acquitted themselves with a dainty grace that was full of charm, and gave delight to the hearers and spectators, due credit must be given to the manner in which the good sisters conceived the scenes, music and language which were specially apt to, and worthy of, the important occasion, and while the little artists are given all due praise, it would be ungracious to forget the clever authors.

The other numbers on the programme consisted of a sweet medley of Irish airs performed on piano and violins, a very sweetly-sung vocal solo, "Love's Garden," by Miss Lily Jackson, and an instrumental duet — "Pallomel," — piano and violin, which was as sweet as the warble of the nightingale.

Thus concluded the most elaborate and beautiful festal homage ever presented to his lordship on the occasion of any of his episcopal anniversaries. Everything was beautifully arranged and beautifully carried out.

REMARKS.

His Lordship was evidently deeply touched by the love and veneration, so exquisitely and in some parts so quaintly, yet at all times happily, expressed by the children, and in attempting to express his feelings he failed to find words. He thanked the children both for the magnificent manner in which they acquitted themselves and for the beautiful sentiments they so sweetly conveyed. He only wished that he could be fortunate enough to enjoy even one-tenth of the blessings invoked by the sweet little ones. Bishops have their joys and their sorrows, but the highest joy a bishop could have was to see as he saw that night, the lambs of his flock growing up with the virtues of modesty, reverence and all the Christian graces as well as graces of person and deportment. The children looked like angels and he hoped their future would, as it promised to be, be in keeping. It was a great source of joy to the clergy, as well as to the church authorities, to see the children being so well trained in the practices of the Christian virtues, that would lead them to grow up models in all walks of life. He closed with thanks to the children for their magnificent greetings, and also to the visitors for their presence. He had been with them eight years, but every year brought increased evidences of the good will and kindness not only of his own flock, but also of those that differed on some points. He believed, judging from the common sense of the people of Peterborough, that continued relations of harmony and unity would prevail. He concluded by praying God's best blessing upon the dear children.

Mr. Jas. Kendry, M.P., briefly expressed the great pleasure it gave him to be present. He hoped that the kind and generous sentiments of the Bishop would be realized. He referred to the training of the children as both a credit to themselves and their teachers.

Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., in giving voice to his pleasure at being present, extended his personal congratulations to His Lordship. Reference was made to the Bishop's popularity with all classes and creeds, a circumstance that made his position a source of envy to politicians, who were happy to have the favour of one section of the community. His Lordship was popular with his clergy, showing that he exercised his episcopal authority in a spirit of love and kindness. Reference was made to the splendid manner in which the children acquitted themselves, which was only surpassed by the graceful and deferential love they expressed towards their beloved bishop. His Lordship was popular with all classes of the community, for he had shown as admirable qualities a citizen as he had done in his official capacity. The speaker congratulated his Lordship upon the success that had attended his administration of the diocese, upon the fact of his interest in freeing from debt and beautifying St. Peter's in a manner worthy of its dignity as the cathedral church of the diocese.

Mr. D. W. Dumble was anxious to have a chance to thank the sisters for an opportunity of being present. While he congratulated his Lordship on reaching the this eighth anniversary, congratulations were also due upon the department, good behaviour and graceful actions of the children who had participated, which were a credit to the religion that inspired their purity of heart and credit to their teachers. Mr. Dumble spoke in terms of appreciation of his Lordship's sentiments. He congratulated the people on having a bishop of so kindly and gracious a character—one worthy of being looked up to and one worthy of the dignity of Bishop of Peterborough.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, after gracefully expressing his congratulations, said that the present evening's entertainment was one in keeping with similar entertainments he had attended. While fully appreciating the programme as a whole he had a special word of commendation for the playing of the violiniste of the evening. To remarkable execution she added a delightful purity of tone.

Mr. L. M. Hayes spoke of his pleasure at being present. As for congratulations to his Lordship he felt that the congratulations and good wishes of the children were more eloquent than anything he could say, and more expressive of the love the congregation felt towards their chief pastor. He congratulated the sisters on their success—their entertainments were always growing better.

Mr. R. Fair spoke briefly, praising the work of the children, and joining heartily in the congratulations that had been expressed.

Ven. Archdeacon Casey, in expressing his dutiful congratulations, said it must have been a great source of pleasure to the bishop to have received such splendid congratulations from the children as well as from the elders present, and especially from the Protestants who were present. He paid an eloquent tribute to the veneration his Lordship's discharge of his high duty had inspired in the clergy, but beyond this there was a personal liking of a strong character to whose intensity every year's association with their beloved bishop added. He had not only this respect, esteem and love, but that of the children of all the schools and of the whole congregation.

A delightfully successful evening was concluded by the spirited and excellent singing of the National Anthem by the children.

BETWEEN

JOHN M. TRENOUTH AND AGNES ANN TRENOUTH, Plaintiffs.

AND

WILLIAM J. GRIFFIN. Defendant

UPON the application of the plaintiffs upon hearing the solicitor for the applicant, and upon reading the affidavit of E. H. D. Hall, and copies of the affidavits of Ellen Trenouth and John McA. Robertson, it is ordered that service upon the defendant of the writ of summons in this action, by publishing this order together with the subjoined notice twice a week for three weeks preceding the 25th day of May 1897, in the Peterborough EXAMINER, a newspaper published at Peterborough, Ontario, be deemed good and sufficient service of said writ. And it is further ordered that the said defendant do enter an appearance to the said writ with the local Registrar of this Court at the Town of Peterborough on or before the 12th day of June, 1897.

And it is further ordered that all papers to be subsequently served may be delivered by posting the same in the office of the said Registrar.

C. A. WELLER,
Master at Peterborough.

To William J. Griffin, late of Peterborough, Ontario, take notice that John M. Trenouth and Agnes Ann Trenouth, of the Township of Rama, in the County of Ontario, have commenced an action against you, William J. Griffin, in the High Court of Justice by Writ of Summons dated the 1st day of May, 1897, and you are required on or before the 12th of June, 1897, to defend said action by causing an appearance to be entered for you with the local Registrar of the said Court at the Town of Peterborough, and in default of your so doing the plaintiffs may proceed therein and judgment may be given in your absence.

GREAT
Dissolution of Partnership Sale!

A unique state of affairs exists in our store. An Emergency Sale different in scope from all others is made necessary. All the Ultra Fashionable High-Class Stock in our establishment—postively everything—must be relentlessly reduced eight weeks earlier than heretofore.

Our house is founded on the granite rock of TRUTH and VERACITY. Those who build on false statements build upon quicksand, and will sooner or later be engulfed. To all the many thousands of our friends and patrons who in the past have favoured us with their patronage, we beg to extend our grateful acknowledgement, with the promise that however we may have served them in the past, we shall re-double our energies and try to serve them better in the future. And since great success comes only as a reward of great merit—we shall hereafter offer the best products of the world's best markets AT THE VERY LOWEST PRICES that scientific-modern-thoroughly-up-to-date store methods can ever hope to reach.

The crowds the last three weeks showed how thoroughly our Dissolution of Partnership Sale has been appreciated. The eagerness of the buyers proved how extraordinary the values are—proved how completely we made it a point at this sale to LOWER THE LOWEST PRICE RECORDS. It is altogether the Biggest, Best and most tempting in Price Sale ever held in Peterborough. All our departments have joined hands to make it the success of all successes, by offering everything of the most highly desirable lines of Goods AT PRICES THAT ARE ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT A PRECEDENT.

This space will not allow us to quote prices. We simply leave the matter with yourself. Come and be convinced. This sale will be one of the most remarkable events of the present year.

The Maria Street Bridge.

The western approach to the new Maria street bridge in Ashburnham is filled in, although the approach at the other extremity is not as yet fit for use. The bridge is completed and reflects credit on the Central Bridge Company, by whom it was erected, as was the one spanning the Warsaw road.

Mrs. S. Seaforth, suffered for years with what is called old people's rash. She was treated by many physicians without any result. Mr. Fear, the local druggist, recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment, which relieved the irritation at once and speedily effected a permanent cure of the skin eruption. Mrs. James also says Dr. Chase's Ointment cured her of itching piles which she has been troubled with for years.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

Nuptials of Mr. Robert H. Green and Miss Mary Harris.

On the evening of Good Friday, says the Brussels Post, Rev. John Ross, B.A., performed the marriage ceremony between Robt. H. Green, of Omemee, Victoria Co., Ont., and Miss Mary W., youngest daughter of Mrs. Wm. Harris, Thomas street, Brussels. About 35 guests assembled to witness the tying of the nuptial bow at the home of the bride. Miss Annie Stewart was the bridesmaid, and Mr. John Fulton groomsman. A large number of valuable and useful presents were made, and many good wishes were expressed for the future happiness of the contracting parties. The supper prepared was in keeping with the customary ability of the hostess in this line. An enjoyable evening was spent by the company. On Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. Green left for Omemee, where the former will take charge of the cheese factory. The Post joins with their many friends in wishing them health, wealth and prosperity.

HAS HE LEFT THE COUNTRY.

An Omemee Young Man Passes Through Town Rather Hurriedly.

A peculiar incident occured on Friday when a couple of young men drove into town from the vicinity of Omemee at about three o'clock in the morning and, putting up at a quiet little hotel for a couple of hours, drove down to the early morning train going west on the C.P.R., in which one of them left for parts unknown.

The young man who thus silently flitted away is under heavy obligations in Victoria county, being recently the defendent in a seduction case and judgment having been given against him to pay over a fixed sum yearly for the next fifteen years to the plaintiff in the suit. Naturally the plaintiff's relatives would be pleased to have an assurance that the young man in question has not left the country.

KIDNEY SENSE.

Cure-alls Are Out of the Question in Kidney Disorders—A Liquid Solvent—A Specific Kidney Tonic is the Only Sole Remedy.

How Many Discover When It Is Too Late that the kidneys have literally been ground out by the little solid particles which are contained in the blood of all sufferers from kidney disease, and which accumulate in these organs. Common sense says, and medical science has proven it, that a liquid solvent which will dissolve these solids and eradicate them from the system is the only sure cure for kidney disorder. South American Kidney Cure is a solvent. It has been tested in almost hopeless cases, and there is yet to be recorded against it a failure to cure when it has had a fair trial. Pills will not do it as they are solvents. Don't trifle. Sold by H. S. Macdonald.

THE NEW STEAMER.

The Sunbeam has been Rebuilt for the Back Lakes.

The steamer Sunbeam, as noted previously in the EXAMINER, was launched on Tuesday in Lakefield. She is owned by Messrs. Grills & White and in being rebuilt has been changed from a side-wheeler to a propeller. A new boiler and 12x12 Doty engine have been placed in the steamer with a 54 inch propeller, which should drive her along at a high rate of speed. The passenger capacity is placed at 250. There are two flush decks similiar to those on the steamer North King and passengers can either enjoy the breezes on the upper one or in cooler weather take advantage of a most comfortable cabin below. It is proposed to run the new steamer daily in connection with the trains, through Clear and Stony Lakes.

REWARD OF CONFIDENCE MEN

A Peterborough "Bank Manager" and a Stranger Visit the Fourth Line.

It would appear that confidence sharks are operating or trying to operate in Smith township. A day or two ago a man came to the Fourth Line representing himself as manager of a certain bank in Peterborough and appeared to be keenly inquiring about farms and engaged in conversation with a well known resident. Presently another stranger joined the party. In his engaging way he joined in the conversation and volunteered the information that he had just arrived from the west where he had made his pile and in confirmation exhibited a big roll of bills. He had come east he said to give the boys some of the fun he had enjoyed in the west. He produced three cards, one of which the innocent farmer said had a big spot in the middle and wished to inveigle the good granger into a game. But he struck the wrong man—the old gentleman is very religious and holds cards in horror and in his deliberate, well-weighed style of speech very plainly told the stranger that he and his cards were on the high road to hell. It transpired later that stranger number two had ostensibly lost his way, and the first stranger very kindly volunteered to show him the way back to town. After they had left, the kind-souled farmer felt anxious as to whether the second stranger, who had been taken in charge by the other stranger (?) would reach town safely, and this morning he came to town and went to the bank, from whose manager he supposed he had received a visit, to inquire if the man and his money had reached town safely, and that is the way the story came out. Advices from Bridgenorth state that a couple of suspicious parties had been in that vicinity. In the long run a farmer will make more money selling wheat at 50c. a bushel, than mokeying with a stranger and trying to beat him at his own game.

SAVED HER DRUNKEN HUSBAND.

She Finally Administered a Remedy Without His Knowledge and Cured Him.

A correspondent writes:—"I had such a happy home and a noble, big-hearted husband till he took to drinking, first through sociability, then because the fiendish desire would come over him, erasing him for drink.

"I was heart-broken. My happy home was fast becoming one of misery till a friend told me to try a liquor cure called ANTI-BOOZE. I was willing to do anything, so I sent $1.00, as she suggested, to the Oriental Chemical Co., 20 St. Alexis street, Montreal, and by return mail, I received in a plain wrapper a little box of pills. I put one of these in his coffee every night and morning without him knowing it, (as they dissolve immediately), and in less than a week, to my delight, he stopped drinking entirely.

"ANTI-BOOZE has changed my drunken husband into a sober, industrious, happy man, and I feel it my duty to tell others about it. They will send full information without charges to any who will write them.

A FINE JUBILEE CONCERT.

Patriotic and National Songs by a Chorus of 300 Children.

Rev. W. L. Armitage of St. John's South Ward Mission has in preparation an unique and appropriate patriotic concert to be given in aid of St. John's Mission building fund in the opera house on June 18th. The programme will consist of stirring national and patriotic songs by a chorus of 300 children. Besides, an orchestra will be present, and patriotic numbers will be contributed by a first-class baritone, besides first-class instrumental soloists will contribute.

The double object of the concert, the patriotic side and the aim to add to a public building of the town, will commend the concert to public patronage. There will be many unique and charming features that will appeal to patriotic impulses, which will be mentioned in detail hereafter. Any children wishing to join the chorus for the benefit of the training or for the opportunity of saying in after years that they sang in a concert in the Diamond Jubilee of the Queen, in 1897, may apply to Mr. Armitage. The first practice takes place in St. John's school house on Wednesday night.

"I had chronic catarrh for a number of years. Water would run from my nose and eyes for days at a time. I tried many cures without any permanent relief. I was induced to try Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. It cured me and I have no return of the malady. I find that for a cold in the head it gives almost instant relief. I would not be without it and I recommend it most heartily." C. G. Archer, Brewer, Me. Sold by H. S. Macdonald.

THE LAKEFIELD BOAT HOUSE DISPUTE.

The Strickland Boat House to be Removed from Water Street—The Court so Orders.

The case of the corporation of the Village of Lakefield against Strickland & Company and George Arthur Strickland, with reference to encroaching on the wharf at Lakefield, has been finally decided. The High Court (Chief Justice Meredith) has declared that Water street in the village and the wharf was and is a public wharf and highway, and that the defendants committed a trespass when they built their boat house on the above. The defendants are now ordered to remove their buildings not later than the first of May, 1897, and are perpetually restrained from again encroaching on Water street or the wharf. This also applies to anybody else who may do the same thing. The defendants were also ordered to pay the costs of suit, which have been taxed at $174 54.

WITH BALDNESS

The Danger is Averted by Using

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. Hearing Ayer's Hair Vigor highly spoken of, I commenced using this preparation, and was so well satisfied with the result that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good, natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HAIGHT, Avoca, Neb.

GONE TO A SHADOW.

Racked by Pain, Bed-ridden. Life Despaired of—South American Rheumatic Cure was the Good Angel Which Stilled the Tempest and Piloted Safely Into the Harbor of Health.

"I was so troubled with sciatica that at times the pain and suffering I experienced was excruciating. I failed in flesh to almost a shadow. I was almost continuously in bed for over a year, and I had spent hundreds of dollars in doctoring. I had almost given up hope of a cure. A relative who had been cured of the same disease by South American Rheumatic Cure, induced me to try it. The first dose gave me instant relief. After using three bottles I was completely cured." Raising Ducks.

In raising ducks, says Farm and Home, set the eggs under hens; when hatched remove to a box lined with paper and kept in a warm place with all the sunshine possible. When two days old put in a board pen during day time. Feed bread soaked in water and pressed dry. Do not give them water to swim in until three weeks old. Dust with Persian insect powder once a week; when four weeks old feed on corn bread soaked in sweet milk; young onion tops cut fine and mixed with their feed are healthful. After four weeks old they will thrive on almost any diet and will grow with less water to swim in than is generally supposed. Always keep water or drinking as pure and clean as possible, changing often and putting gravel in the dish where water is kept. Ducks in my experience have been more profitable than chickens.

Attractive Women.

Why is one woman attractive and another not? The most admirable and attractive thing about an attractive woman is her womanliness. Everybody admires a womanly woman. She must have health, of course, because without it she would lose the brightness of her eyes, the fullness of her cheeks and her vivacity. Real health must mean that a woman is really a woman. That she is strong and perfect in a sexual way, as well as in every other. That she is capable of performing perfectly the duties of maternity. Some are born with what is called "constitutional weakness." Those who do not enjoy perfect health, need only take the proper precautions and the proper remedy to become perfectly well and strong. Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription will cure any derangement of the distinctly feminine organism.

The Baseball Record.

Providence, April 29.—It was a free batting and sharp fielding game, and both sides acquitted themselves well. The home team gained a splendid lead in the first innings, although the Torontos made a good rally as the game progressed. Settley gave eight bases on balls. The batting of Weigand, Knight, White and McCann was of the star order. Aside from a rattled period for Moss in the fifth inning, it was an errorless fielding game. Attendance 2000. Score:

A sea-captain may navigate his ship safely across the ocean, but when he comes into port he must have a pilot who knows all the difficulties and dangers of that particular channel. In the voyage of life there are many perilous places where we need the help of a pilot who has a thorough knowledge of the special difficulties and dangers to be avoided.

In those delicate physical weaknesses and diseases peculiar to women a general practitioner or ordinary doctor has no opportunity to become thoroughly proficient. Still less to be trusted is the advice of any mere nurse or unscientific person.

Only a specialist who has given a life of study to this particular field of practice, is competent to treat the diseases of woman's intricate and complicated organism.

Any woman suffering from these delicate troubles may obtain the most eminent professional advice free of charge by writing to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. During nearly 30 years' at the head of his splendid staff of specialists, he has successfully treated many thousands of cases of obstinate feminine complaints.

His "Favorite Prescription" was devised for the sole purpose of curing the diseases and weaknesses of the feminine organs. No other medicine has been so marvelously successful in this particular field of practice. No other medicine so completely overcomes all the dangers and nearly all the pains of motherhood.

"It is with pleasure I recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to suffering ladies," writes Mrs. J. Ferguson, Box 29, Douglas Station, Selkirk Co., Manitoba. "After suffering untold tortures I thank God I found relief and cure in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."

The greatest book for women ever published is Dr. Pierce's thousand-page "Common Sense Medical Adviser," sent free in paper covers for cost of customs and mailing only, 21 one-cent stamps; cloth-bound 50 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

CATTLE CURED OF CONSUMPTION.

SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENTS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA.

Ninety Per Cent. Recovered—Tuberculin Was Used as the Government Test—Believed That the Dread Disease Is Not Hereditary.

Minneapolis sanitary statisticians prove to us that one-tenth of the human family dies annually of consumption, and that, considered relatively, every man, woman and child you meet is suffering from tuberculosis. Tremendous as are the ravages of this disease among the members of the human race, its ravages become all the more appalling when we consider that one of the best friends of man, the domestic cow, is subject to the same disease and may communicate it to the human being.

During the last two years and a half at the Experimental Station in connection with the Agricultural Department of the University of Minneapolis, extensive and important investigations have been under way, not only in the testing of cattle for tuberculosis and demonstrating the inerrancy of tuberculin as a diagnostic agent, but in that even more important work, attempting curative measures among cattle which have been found to be tuberculous. Manifestly, if the cure of consumption can be assured, even in cattle, a marvellous advance has been made. And, as the bacillus which infests the tissues of a cow suffering from consumption is absolutely identical with the bacillus of consumption in a human being, the cure of the disease in cattle holds splendid hope for humanity.

A CRACK JERSEY COW.

This cow was seemingly in perfect health, the tuberculin test indicated consumption.

A bulletin from the above-mentioned station is soon to be issued which will embody the salient points of the investigations which have been carried on by the veterinarian of the institution, Prof. M. H. Reynolds. It will show some remarkable results and indicates by the success already attained that the future work in this line will be still more important. On the farm in connection with the institution were some high-bred cattle of various strains. It was determined to begin the work among these cattle—to ascertain, first, if cattle having every advantage in the way of prime food, finely-ventilated stables, and all the health producing surroundings of modern sanitation—to find out if these cattle were infected. It would be not so strange if cattle housed in unwholesome dairies exposed to all the untoward circumstances which surround such cattle, should be subject to the disease, just as poorly-fed and poorly-cared for people in tenement districts are supposed to be more susceptible to disease than their more fortunate fellows in the brown stone front around the corner.

Tuberculin was used as the test, that manufactured by the Government in Washington. A small portion, from one and one-half to three, or, in some cases, four cubic centimeters of tuberculin was used as a dose. In case the temperature of the animal rose during the next twenty-four hours—the injection of the tuberculin being at 10 o'clock in the evening—it was a sure sign that she was tuberculous. So sure is it a tuberculous animal will respond to this test that it is now considered practically infallible, fully 90 per cent. or over of tests being found accurate.

In case there was no reaction—the term reaction, somewhat of a misnomer, indicating a rise in temperature—it was considered that the animal was free from the disease, and, whenever an animal has thus failed to respond and has been post-mortemed it has been found in almost every case that there was not disease, while, as indicated, in more than 90 per cent. of the cattle treated, where there was a rise in temperature, the disease was found at the post-mortem.

And not only was the home herd of cattle tested, but herds of fine cattle and common herds all over the state were tested in the same manner and with the same results. During the period Professor Reynolds, as shown in the bulletin, has made tests in over 1100 cases, and has fully demonstrated the inerrancy of the tuberculin.

Before showing some of the curative work which has been done, it may be well to give a few instances of the work of the tuberculin on the herd at the station noted. The cattle in every case showed no sign of disease. On the contrary, they were particularly sleek, well-groomed, well-rounded, healthy-looking animals, with never a visible trace of the terrible disease which had fastened itself upon them. One instance, which occurred a year ago, will indicate this: A wealthy gentleman living in a neighboring city, who was bent on having his children reared on milk that was above reproach, bought a crack Jersey cow, one with an unblemished pedigree and in the pink of condition. She appeared one day to be coughing a little, and Professor Reynolds was consulted. He asked that a test be made. The gentleman scouted the idea of his fine Jersey having anything serious the matter with her, but the test was allowed; she showed unmistakable reaction, post-mortemed and found to be fairly alive with tuberculosis. Of course, it does not follow that every tuberculous cow will carry consumption to every one who drinks of her milk, but it is beyond dispute that when a cow does not respond to the test and shows that she has no tuberculosis in her system there is no danger to man or babe in the milk from such a cow—well, sound sense would prescribe the only method of action.

Fancy's Bull was the name of one of the prime cattle of the herd, a high-priced polled angus, one of the best of his kind. He was as fine a looking animal as ever delighted the eyes of a connoisseur in cattle. He was one year old, weighed 700 pounds and was in fine condition. Here is the main record of his treatment:

Date treatment.	Amount of dose in cubic centimeters.	Rise in temperature above normal.
May 8, 1894	1.5	4.9
June 29, 1894	1.5	4.4
November 5, 1894	1.7	4.9
November 19, 1894	2.0	5.0
November 26, 1894	.85	2.6
December 3, 1894	.7	1.9
December 10, 1894	.85	1.7

From the last-named date until June 24, 1895, doses were given at stated intervals ranging from one to two cubic centimeters with varying results as to the rise in temperature. On June 25th two cubic centimeters were given without reaction, on July 29th two with the same result, and on August 2nd the same dose and the same result. On the following day the animal was post-mortemed and found to be badly diseased, involving the lungs, lymphatic glands, spleen and liver. Exteriorly he was in as fine condition as any animal in the herd, and but for the test of the tuberculin would be alive to-day, propagating his strain of blood. This was a case where the animal apparently became immune from the tuberculin without any curative effects, and, in fact, curative results were not sought for in this case. Had he been killed at the time of first testing he might have been found still more tuberculous, however.

The mother of this bull, Fancy Second, two years old, weight 900 pounds, a finely bred polled angus, was treated, and the results were quite significant. On May 8, 1894, she was given 1.75 cc., with a rise of 4.6 degrees in temperature above normal. June 29th, same dose, 4.5 degrees rise; Nov. 5th, 2.1 cc., 2.8 degrees rise; Nov. 19th, 3 cc., no rise whatever. On Jan. 28, 1895, 2 cc. were given without results; on Feb. 25, 1895, 3 cc., with no reaction, post-mortemed.

In the post-mortem of this cow there was wonderful hope for mankind, odd though it may be to put it so. The consumption bacillus in animals and in human beings is identical. You may take an active bacillus from the diseased tissue of a consumptive patient and with it innoculate an animal with consumption, and you may take human beings' tuberculous by the introduction into their system of the consumption bacillus of a cow. Under the microscope, colored with an analine pigment, which is particularly affinitive for the bacillus, the same tiny, deadly rod appears, no matter where it comes from. When the last-named cow was post-mortemed after nearly a year of treatment, no active tuberculosis was found, neither did the microscope show any evidence of active tuberculosis in the particles of tissue examined, and the only reasonable conclusion that Prof. Reynolds can come to in his bulletin is that the cow has recovered. There were the tokens of a disease which had been there in the scars of the lemons, a variety of these scars being found in the membrane lining the chest, in the lungs and in other places, the scars showing the appearance of having been healed.

A number of college professors and some prominent physicians and veterinarians were present at this post-mortem and so confident were they that the animal had been cured of all active tuberculosis that they each took home with them, had cooked, and ate from it portions of the meat of the cow.

It will be of interest to give one more example among the many mentioned, which shows the curative work of the treatment.

Rose, a short-horn grade cow, eight years old, weighing 1100 pounds, a perfect animal in appearance, and showing no possible trace of disease, was given her first test on May 4, 1894, receiving two centimeters of tuberculin. The temperature rose two degrees above normal, showing unmistakably that tuberculosis was present. Thereafter, with no reaction following, injections were given as follows:

July 8, 2 cc; Nov. 5, 2 cc; Nov. 19, 2 cc; Dec. 3, 2.5 cc; Jan. 14, 1895, 4 cc; Feb. 15, 4 cc.

The dose was steadily increased, and after the first one the temperature did not rise, showing that some change had taken place. When the cow was post-mortemed on the third day after the last-named test it was shown that she had been tuberculous to a limited extent, the diseased portions, now healed since the use of the tuberculin, appearing in the diaphragm and in one small lobe of the lung.

But there is still another hopeful phase of the subject. It is now practically assured that it is impossible for a person or an animal to have consumption without in some way contracting it. It is as impossible for a child to inherit consumption as it is for it to inherit typhoid fever. The condition, the constitution, the general disposition of the child of a tuberculous parent may favor consumption, but, so those who have made deep study of the problem maintain, unless the actual bacillus comes into the system of the child, consumption must stay out. So it has been thought advisable to isolate the calves from the tuberculous mothers—those which showed unmistakably by their response to the tuberculin test that they were consumptive, and who, after the birth of their calves, were killed and found tuberculous—and then rear those calves. Seventeen such calves, some of them now "yearlings," have been so isolated from their mothers at birth and are now undergoing

A CRACK JERSEY COW.

The post-mortem examination of the cow in the first column of this article demonstrated the presence of the disease, and this cut shows how far tuberculosis had advanced in her.

the most careful scrutiny. The point is to keep these calves away from the consumptive influence of the mothers. As a result only one of the whole seventeen has shown any sign of tuberculosis, only one instance, with all the injections that have been made, which, were tuberculosis present, would be sure to cause the rise in temperature, indicating that tuberculosis was present.

It has thus been demonstrated that calves from tuberculous mothers need not be killed, but that they may be reared in perfect immunity from the disease. The question, which is going to be more and more vast in its importance as the work of the tuberculin comes more and more into action among the herds of America. What are we going to do with our tuberculous cattle? seems to have had a partial and most satisfactory answer in the act of the physicians and professors who ate from the meat of the cow which had been cured of tuberculosis.

Prof. Reynolds in his bulletin maintains that tuberculin as a diagnostic agent in human practice ought to come into use, for the reason that it will as truly act upon the tuberculous patient human as on the tuberculous patient bovine. He maintains that it is thus a physician may diagnose a case of consumption long before he could make any sufficient microscopical investigations, and it appears, from the results in curative work which have been attained at this station, that the most dreaded diseases of all the centuries must sooner or later succumb to the assaults of science. If the work which Prof. Reynolds has been carrying on so patiently and so conservatively shall result in a practical demonstration that not only cattle but human beings in the earlier stages may be cured of the most deadly disease of the race, one of the most magnificent victories in the history of the human family will have been achieved. His work so far is certainly of unusual and valuable significance. W. S. HARWOOD.

Experience proves the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It cures all forms of blood diseases, tones the stomach, builds up the nerves.

Disposing of Veal.

There are several ways that you can dispose of veal. If no one else in your community is interested in the production you are very favorably located, as then you have things all your own way, as one of the drawbacks is in the finding of young calves. Meat markets are using veal more and more, and it is a poor market that cannot use a couple of veals a week. The first year perhaps that is all you had better attempt to furnish. Now, when hogs or sheep or lambs are being shipped, any shipper will be willing to put in a few calves, and as more are being produced in your vicinity, there will grow up a steady market.—Ohio Farmer.

Value of Good Dairy Blood.

It is remarkable how tenacious a little pure blood sometimes is in a strain of cows. Who does not know of some man noted for having good cows always, and apparently without design as to blood? He happened to come into possession of a good one in some manner. Being a good one, it was natural for him to retain her heifer calves, especially the most promising or those which favored the dam most in appearance. He pursued this course continually. The good blood would show occasionally, notwithstanding it had been reduced to an infinitesimal homeopathic dilution. A neighbor has such an heifer now, and has had for the last 21 years I have known him. Dairymen of to-day have a great advantage over those of the past, for they know what breeds are, and can breed up intelligently to a certainty.—Dr. Galen Wilson in Practical Farmer.

Spring is full of terrors to all whose constitution is not able to resist the sudden changes of temperature and other insalubrities of the season. To put the system in condition to overcome these evils, nothing is so effective as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Take it now.

A Barn Dove Cote.

In building a dove cote in a barn for six pairs, they should have at least 12 feet square of floor and 8 feet high. The more space the better unless the pigeons are to have the freedom of the yard. The boxes should be at least eight in number, each box to be double, completely divided so a young pigeon cannot go from one to the other without flying. This allows the mother to lay and hatch a second set of eggs before the first are able to look after themselves. These boxes must be set on the top of tinned posts or fixed in some way so that the rats cannot reach the nests, for rats are sure to destroy the eggs or young birds in the nest.—Farm and Home.

"My daughter had been ailing for nearly two years with nervous prostration, indigestion and other complaints which girls in their teens are subject to. For days at a time she was confined to her bed, and could retain nothing on her stomach. Our family physician finally declared she was in a decline. We despaired of her recovery. She gradually grew worse. I had found so little benefit from remedies I was skeptical about trying South American Nervine. I, however, procured a bottle and relief came like magic; the pain left her in a day, and after taking five bottles she was completely cured, and as well and hearty as ever she had been." Mrs. Geo. IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

The Mason & Risch Piano Co. L'td.

Beg to announce that they have assumed the Agency for Central and Western Ontario of the Pianos manufactured by Chickering & Sons, Boston.

It would be superfluous to make extended reference to the reputation of this famous house, or to the pianofortes manufactured by them. It is sufficient to say that for three quarters of a century they have occupied the position of absolute leaders in Musical Art manufacture, and their reputation was at no time greater than it is at present.

INTENDING PURCHASERS OF PIANO

Now have the choice in our warerooms of goods manufactured by the acknowledged leaders of the American and Canadian trade. The association of such Instruments as Chickering & Sons and Mason & Risch Pianos beneath one roof forms a unique combination.

AS TO PRICES!

Pianos of high artistic merit must of necessity cost more than poorer instruments, but there is no question of the direction in which true economy lies. As an evidence of this it may be mentioned that the first Piano manufactured by Chickering & Sons 73 ago is still in an excellent state of preservation, and Pianos made by Mason & Risch over 20 years ago scarcely show any sign of wear. SCALES LIKE A FISH Terrible Condition of a Baby from a Scaly Skin Humor.

Our baby boy was born July 1, 1894. In the fall his legs became rough, from some skin trouble, from his knees down to his toes, also his arms, breast, and abdomen. We tried a great many different kinds of remedies, but without success. In the summer of 1895 it became a little better, but in the fall, and all winter, it was a sight to behold. He had scales on his body and arms like a fish, and almost black. In fact we were ashamed with it, but could not help it. We were almost in despair until we had used CUTICURA REMEDIES for about four days, when we noticed an improvement. Every time my wife washed him, her apron became covered with a scale-like skin. To-day it is gone, his skin is as smooth as any child, and we owe it, with the blessings of God, to CUTICURA REMEDIES. If you can use this testimony, we give our full consent.

GEO. HUYSKEN & WIFE,
375 Maple Street, Detroit, Mich.

In all the world there is no other treatment so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective as CUTICURA, greatest of skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies. CUTICURA REMEDIES daily perform more great cures of torturing, disfiguring, humiliating skin, scalp, and blood diseases than all other blood and skin remedies combined. A warm bath with CUTICURA SOAP, gentle applications of CUTICURA (ointment), and mild doses of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, greatest of blood purifiers and humor cures, constitute the only unfailing external and internal treatment for all forms of skin, scalp, and blood humor known.

Sold throughout the world. POTTER D. & C. CORP., Sole Props., Boston. "How to Cure Every Baby Humor," free.

What is a Great Man?

One of the most interesting of recent biographies is the life of Lord Beaconsfield in the series called "The Queen's Prime Ministers." The romantic story of the life of Benjamin Disraeli, is written with the pen of a master of English prose.

In the closing chapter of this book, Mr. Froude attempts an estimate of Lord Beaconsfield's character; and he asks this question: Was he, or was he not, a great man? It is clear that to answer this question we must know what we mean by a great man. Mr. Froude's description is so excellent that we venture to bring it to our readers' notice in the F.C.C. this week.

"We have a standard," says Mr. Froude, "by which to measure the bodily stature of a man; we have none by which to measure his character; neither need we at any time ask how great any man is, or whether great at all, but rather what he is. Those whom the world calls great are those who have done or produced something of permanent value to humanity. We call Hipparchus great, or Newton or Kepler, because we owe to them our knowledge of the motion of the earth and the stars. Poets and artists have been great men; philosophers have been great men. The mind of Socrates governs our minds at the present day. Founders of religion have been great men; reformers have been great men. We measure their worth by the work they have achieved. So in society and politics we call those great who have devoted their energies to some noble cause, or who have influenced the course of things in some extraordinary way.

But in every instance, whether in art, science, religion or public life, there is an universal condition that a man shall have forgotten himself in his work. If any portion of his attention is given to the honours or rewards which success will bring him there will be a taint of weakness in what he does. He cannot produce a great poem, he cannot paint a great picture, he cannot discover secrets of science, because these achievements require a whole mind and not a divided mind. The prophet will be a prophet of half-truths, because the whole truth will not be popular. The statesman who has not purified himself of personal motives will never purify a disordered constitution. . . . . A man whose object is to gain something for himself often attains it, but when his personal life is over, his work and reputation perish along with him.

In this high sense of the word Lord Beaconsfield cannot be called great, either as a man of letters or as a statesman. "Vivian Grey" is nothing but a loud demand on his contemporaries to recognise how clever a man has appeared among them. In every one of his writings there is the same defect, except in "Sybil" and in "Lothair." It is absent in "Sybil" because he had been deeply and sincerely affected by what he had witnessed in great towns in the north of England. . . . . It is clear from "Sybil" that there has been a time when he could have taken up as a statesman, with all his heart, the cause of labour. He had suffered himself in the suffering and demoralisation which he had witnessed, and if the young generation to which he appealed would have gone along with him he might have led a nobler crusade than Coeur de Lion. But it was not in him to tread a thorny road with insufficient companionship. He had wished, but had not wished sufficiently, to undertake a doubtful enterprise. He was contented to leave things as he found them, instead of reconstructing society to make himself Prime Minister."

All this is severe, and worse follows. But it is to be remembered that tried by such a standard the world's heroes are very very few in number. "Yet there is a relative greatness as well as an absolute greatness, and Gulliver was a giant among the Lilliputians. Disraeli was the strongest member of Parliament in his own day, and it was Parliament which took him as its foremost man and made him what he was. No one fought more stoutly when there was fighting to be done; no one knew better when to yield, or how to encourage his followers. He was a master of debate. He had a perfect command of his temper, and while he ran an adversary through the body he charmed even his enemies with the skill with which he did it.

But though Lord Beaconsfield was not all which he might have been, he will be honourably and affectionately remembered. If he was ambitious his ambition was a noble one. It was for fame and not for fortune. To money he was always indifferent. He was even ostentatious in his neglect of his own interests. Though he left no debts behind him, in his life he always embarrassed. He had no vices, and his habits were simple; but he was generous and careless, and his mind was occupied with other things. He had opportunities of enriching himself if he had been unprincipled enough to use them. There were times when he could get all the stock exchanges of Europe vibrating like electric wires in a thunder storm. A secret word from him whould have enabled speculating capitalists to realise millions with no trace left how those millions were acquired or how disposed of. It is said that something of the kind was once hinted to him—once, but never again. Disraeli's worst enemy never suspected him of avarice or dishonour. As a statesman there was none like him before, and will be none hereafter. His career was the result of a combination of a peculiar character with peculiar circumstances which is not likely to recur. The aim with which he started in life was to distinguish himself above all his contemporaries, and wild as such an ambition must have appeared he at least won the stake for which he played so bravely.

THE CIRCUIT RIDER.

CHRISTIANITY OWES MUCH TO HIS ZEAL AND ENDURANCE.

His Life During the Early Days of Methodism in Canada was Often one of Great Hardship—The Story of one now Enjoying a Ripe Old Age.

From the Simcoe Reformer.

In the early days of Methodism in Canada the Gospel was spread abroad in the land by the active exertions of the circuit rider. It required a man of no ordinary health and strength; an iron constitution and unflagging determination to fulfil the arduous duties incumbent on one who undertook to preach salvation to his fellowmen. It was no easy task that these men set themselves to, but they were strong in the faith and hope of ultimate reward. Many fell by the wayside, while others struggled on and prospered, and a few are to-day enjoying a ripe old age happy in the knowledge that a lasting reward will soon be theirs. Most of these old timers are not now engaged in active church work, but have been placed on the superannuated list, and are now living a quiet life in town or on a farm, free from the cares of the world, they await the call to come up higher.

Rev. David Williams, who lives two miles southwest of Nixon, Ont., in the township of Windham, Norfolk County, was one of these early days circuit riders. He was a man of vigourous health and although without many advantages in the way of early education, he succeeded by dint of hard and constant study in being admitted to the ministry. He was the first born in the first house built in Glen Williams, near Georgetown, Mr. Geo. Kennedy, the founder of Georgetown, being a brother of his mother. To-day he is 70 years old, and for the past 26 years has lived in this county. For many years he had been a sufferer from kidney and kindred diseases. He tried all kinds of remedies, and although somewhat temporarily relieved, he gradually grew worse until in October 1895 he was stricken with paralysis. From this he partially recovered and recovered his powers of speech, but his mind was badly wrecked, and his memory was so poor that he could not remember the name of the person to whom he wished to speak without thinking intently for several minutes. One day driving to church he wished to speak of a neighbour who lived next to him for twenty years, but he could not recall the name for an hour or more. In addition to his mental trouble, he had intense bodily suffering; pains in the head, across the forehead, in the temples and behind the ears, across the lower part of the skull and in the joint of the neck. He had great weakness and pains in the back, hips and legs. In fact, so much did he suffer that sleep was almost an impossibility, and he fell away in weight until he weighed only 145 pounds. By this time, Dec. 1895, he became despondent, and felt that if he did not soon obtain relief, he would soon bid adieu to the things of this world. On the 20th of December he read of a cure in the Reformer by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and being seized with a sudden inspiration at once wrote to Brockville for a supply of that marvellous remedy. Immediate good results followed their use and he has improved wonderfully during the past year. He has recovered his bodily health and strength, is comparatively free from pain and his memory is nearly as good as it ever was and as the improvement continues the prospects are very bright for complete recovery. He has gained 20 pounds in weight since beginning the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Williams says: "I can heartily endorse the many good things said of these pills in the papers, and strongly recommend them to any one suffering as I was."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blood builder and nerve restorer. They supply the blood with its life and health-giving properties, thus driving disease from the system. There are numerous pink coloured imitations against which the public is warned. The genuine Pink Pills can be had only in boxes the wrapper around which bears the full trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." Refuse all others.

Mercantile—B. Shortly, chairman; A. Gibson, R. McWhinnie, A. H. Stratton, J. B. Oke.

Railways and Canals—D. W. Dumble chairman; J. Kendry, M.P., J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., F. H. Dobbin, J. S. Knapman.

Municipal Committee—T. Cahill, chairman; J. W. Bennett, McF. Wilson, R. Mulholland, W. H. Hill.

NORWOOD OBJECTS.

Villagers Think They are Asked to pay too Much for the Services of the Engine.

Norwood thinks that Peterborough is making a heavy charge for the services of the fire brigade on the occasion of the recent fire there, and this is what the Register says about it: "Peterborough town council met on Tuesday evening, and we notice by a report of the proceedings in one of the town papers, that the Finance Committee, in their report, recommended that the village of Norwood be billed for $100 for the use of the fire engine. Councillor J. B. McWilliams objected to Norwood being taxed to the extent of $100, but the report was passed. The report also contained a recommendation that persons applying for the use of the engine in future shall agree to pay the sum of $100 and also all expenses and any injury occasioned to the engine. Had the engine been of any service to the village no one would feel like objecting to the amount, but as it did not arrive here until after the fire had exhausted itself it seems to us that the town is asking too much. The delay, of course, was not the fault of the brigade, but considering that the engine was of no service to the village only in quenching the ruins, and also considering the heavy loss sustained we would expect a little more charitable treatment from a sister town. The cost of the special train and other incidental expenses will bring the amount up pretty high.

GET WHAT YOU ASK FOR.

At the present time, when there is so much substituting and deception practiced by some dealers whose life-object is large profits, it is absolutely necessary to say to the ladies, "Get what you ask for."

Unscrupulous dealers are using every effort to sell inferior and adulterated dyes whenever the Diamond Dyes are asked for.

To avoid fraud and deception, the ladies will please see that the name "Diamond Dyes" is on every packet they buy.

Bear in mind that inferior dyes ruin your goods; therefore they are a source of loss, trouble and annoyance.

Diamond Dyes are all warranted, are more than twice the strength of the common dyes, and sold for the same price—ten cents.

RIDE A "MONARCH" AND KEEP IN FRONT.

"I have found the Monarch wheel delightful to ride, in fact I prefer it to all others."
LILLIAN RUSSELL.

So says all who will ride a Monarch wheel. The history of the Monarch is an interesting story—a story of success. The first year 150 wheels were made and sold, last year 50,000 wheels were marketed in every civilized country in the world. This year the capacity of their factory is taxed to the utmost, so great is the demand, 500 wheels per day is the present output. This growing success enables us to give still better value to our patrons. Our '97 Models are the nearest perfection of any wheel manufactured—the best the trinity of mechanical skill, excellence of material and the finest equipped bicycle factory in the world can produce.

The frame connection joints are steel drop forgings—flush throughout.

The Monarch patent crank shaft mechanism is by far the most simple and most effective in its working of any yet produced on any wheel.

Detachable sprockets, both front and rear.

No nuts or bolts to work loose, as wheels are fitted at saddle post and head, with patent clamp which does away with the annoyance and unsightliness of nuts and bolts.

5-16 inch balls used in all bearings—producing less friction than smaller ones.

And so on throughout the whole wheel, chains, hubs, saddles, wood rims and tires, the very best that can be bought for money and all fully guaranteed. The finish of the Monarch is unsurpassed for lustre and durability. All bright points are nickled on electro copper plate and the rest of frame is enameled Brewster Green, handsomely striped.

AGAINST JOHN BULL

European Combination Said to be Under Way

WITH GERMANY TAKING THE LEAD

The Proposal is to Drive Great Britain From Egypt, the Persian Gulf, Afghanistan and South Africa—A Member of the Boer Government Talks in New York.

New York, May 2.—Mr. Harold Frederic cables The Times to-day as follows: Again we hear loud and confident talk from Berlin about an all-powerful combination against England, which is to drive her alike out of Egypt, the Persian Gulf, Afghanistan and South Africa, and in Paris people really believe that William has been arranging, or striving to arrange, some such bargain. These despatches have often pointed out that Chamberlain in his anti-Transvaal policy was relying on proofs of Kruger's underhand dealings with Germany to justify it. What these proofs are it is impossible to get at, but I continually hear they are so convincing that the English will be all of one mind when the time comes for their disclosure. England is certainly acting as if some big international complication was yoked up with the Transvaal question.

It is the first time in over a hundred years that she has had a big fleet in South African waters. Then her ships were there to annex the Cape Colony. Now they are in Delagoa Bay for some mysterious purpose, which flutters the Portuguese as much as it does the Germans, and which the British, though they regard the fact with more complacency, understand no better. No week passes without rumors in service circles of new regiments to be despatched to the Cape. The scenes in the House of Commons on Thursday night during the passages-at-arms between Harcourt and Chamberlain showed that this is a subject on which party lines will be drawn with exceptional bitterness and vehemence. The division is equally envenomed at the Cape, where it is believed that Milner by the time he arrives will find the Dutch party in the ascendancy, with Schreiner as the forthcoming Premier.

During the debate in the Cape Parliament Friday last on the motion of censure upon the Cape Ministry in consequence of its warlike attitude toward the Transvaal, which was moved by Mr. Merriman, the anti-Rhodes leader in the House, Mr. Merriman contended that the greatest need of South Africa was peace. He declared that the sending of Imperial reinforcements and others acts, if they did not indicate war, were a disturbing influence. He said that the policy of the Government in recent years rendered it impossible for the Transvaal to listen to any representations made by the authorities of Cape Colony. He likened the Ministry to a ship heading for the breakers with a lunatic pilot in charge of her.

Sir James Sieverright, Commissioner of Public Works, in replying to Mr. Merriman, said that he was a constant friend of peace, and that he would resign his office when the first shot was fired. The Government's policy was peaceable, he added, but it would maintain British supremacy in South Africa. If the Transvaal gave evidence of a conciliatory feeling, the Government would do everything possible to maintain peace Other speakers, especially the Dutch members, vehemently attacked Mr. Rhodes, who was present. Some of them advised him to go and live among the Kaffirs, and declared that the Government was his tool.

A BOER MINISTER SPEAKS.

Mr. Van Alphen Says His People Want Friendship With Britain.

New York, May 2.—Mr. I. Van Alphen, Postmaster-General of the South African Republic, who is now in New York as a delegate to the Universal Postal Union Congress, to be held at Washington next week, was seen at the Holland House yesterday and asked about the present state of affairs in the South African Republic. The possibility of war between Great Britain and the little Boer Republic has recently been much discussed, and the sending of British troops to Cape Colony and British warships to Delagoa Bay has given a fresh impetus to speculation on the subject.

"The South African Republic desires nothing but the most friendly relations with Great Britain, with whom we have a convention by which Great Britain guarantees the independence of the South African Republic," said Mr. Van Alphen. "But since the Jameson raid, in December, 1895, we have taken measures to protect ourselves from a repetition of that affair, as well as to repel uprisings of natives. When I left Pretoria several months ago three forts, equipped with the latest modern implements of war, were nearing completion, and we have imported cannon, guns and ammunition from English, German and French manufacturers. We have also obtained a quantity of rifles. We must be prepared for any emergency.

"The whole standing army of the Republic is 400 artillerymen, but every citizen is supposed to be a soldier. Most of the citizens are experts in the use of the rifle. Such sports as cricket and football are, of course, common in the Republic, but one of the chief amusements in the country districts is the target practice, and, moreover, the old people had to live gun in hand all their lives, fighting wild beasts and savages. In times of necessity, the commandants in the districts call for their quota of burghers. Ostensibly the reasons for the Jameson raid were that the Uitlanders had no political and representative rights, but it is my opinion that the promoters of this invasion were a combination of Johannesburg inhabitants and some members of the Chartered Company, which controls Rhodesia, and their design was to influence the share market and value of other properties so as further to enrich themselves. The Government has always done everything in its power to meet the requirements of the mining population, and further concessions were under consideration when I left. A local committee in Johannesburg had been elected, which will see that the English language is taught in the schools where the English-speaking communities predominate.

"Instead of the former Government Commissioner in that city, the people there have now the privilege of electing their own municipal officers, and a mayor is appointed by the Government. Notwithstanding the Uitlanders' complaint that they have so far no voting power, however, few of them seem to care to avail themselves of their right to become citizens. Out of 60,000 in Johannesburg only 2,000 have renounced allegiance to their native land and have become citizens of the South African Republic."

A FARMER'S AWFUL DEATH.

Matthew Cranswick, a Respected and Well-to-Do Resident of Peel County, Killed on the Railway.

Brampton, May 2.—(Special.)—Mr. Matthew Cranswick, a well-to-do and highly respected farmer, was killed within a short distance of his residence, three miles east of this town, last evening, about 8.10 o'clock. Deceased left Brampton to walk home, taking the G.T.R. track. He was overtaken by the "roustabout" freight, a heavily loaded train of 30 cars. Conductor Richardson, the engineer, and his fireman say that everything was done to warn Cranswick of danger, but as deceased was hard of hearing, and as there was a very strong wind blowing directly west at the time, accompanied by a pelting rain, it was evident that he did not hear the whistle and bell, and he was hurled from the track, and, it is supposed, killed instantly. His left foot was taken off above the ankle, and there were two or three slight contusions on the head. Coroner Heggie will hold an inquest at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning. Deceased leaves a family of grown-up sons and daughters. Three farmers of this neighborhood the past two years have met a similar fate while walking on the track to their homes, and each of the sad occurrences took place on a Saturday night.

BRITISH ARMY GOSSIP.

Sir Redvers Buller to Become Commander-in-Chief and the Duke of Connaught to be Quartermaster-General.

London, May 2.—The Devon and Exeter Gazette says that Adjt.-Gen. Sir Redvers Buller will succeed the Duke of Connaught in command at Aldershot camp; that Quarter Master Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood will succeed Sir Redvers Buller as adjutant-general, and that the Duke of Connaught will become quarter master general of the British Army.

These appointments are likely to revive the criticism which raged at the time Gen. Lord Frederick Roberts was passed over in favor of the Duke of Connaught for the Aldershot command, as Buller belongs to the Wolseley set.

Sir Redvers Buller and Lord Wolseley were almost at sword's points a year ago over questions of military policy in India, as well as of promotions in the service. Both are very strong-willed men, and Buller has the reputation of being the most obstinate man in the army. It was thought at this time that he would resign his position, but he yielded to the persuasions of the Prince of Wales and has ever since been an out-spoken advocate of all the plans proposed by the commander-in-chief.

SEEDING OPERATIONS.

Manitoba and the Northwest are Opening the Season With Bright Prospects—Other Winnipeg Notes.

Winnipeg, May 2.—(Special.)—Telegraphic reports have just been collected as to the seeding operations in Manitoba and the Northwest. These reports are very gratifying, showing that the season has opened most auspiciously. In some districts wheat is even now well up and fully three weeks ahead of last year. There appears to be a large increase in acreage.

Hon. Clifford Sifton, Senator Kirchhoffer, R. W. Jameson (member-elect for Winnipeg), and Prov. Treasurer McMillan left for Ottawa Saturday. Mr. McMillan goes to join Premier Greenway at Ottawa, and they will have a conference with the Dominion Government on matters concerning Manitoba.

THE GREEK CHAMBER

Secured a Quorum and Had a Sitting on Saturday.

THE REORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY

Will be the First Care of the New Government, and They Will be Backed by the Opposition as Long as Turks are on Greek Soil—Latest War News.

Athens, May 1, 6.20 p.m.—The Legislative Chamber finally secured a quorum and held a sitting this afternoon, great crowds surrounding the building. The public galleries were thronged. The new Ministers were seated on the Government benches.

M. Ralli, the new Premier, without delay, addressed the House. He said the first care of the Government would be to reorganise the army. Without a reorganisation of the military forces it would be impossible to carry on the war and conclude an honorable peace. Happily, the army, which was worthy of a better fate, maintained its spirit unimpaired. The country might rely upon it with confidence. He besought the Legislative Chamber and the nation to co-operate with the Government. Meanwhile the Cabinet asked the chamber to agree to an adjournment.

M. Delyannis, who recently retired from the post of Premier, said that there was no need of a vote in the chamber regarding this subject. There could be no possible objection to an adjournment. In the name of his party, he desired to say that all of the members of the party would give their whole support to the new Cabinet as long as the Turks occupied an inch of Greek territory. The main subject of their solicitude would be to devise ways and means to drive the enemy from their country.

M. Philaretos said that the Princes ought to be recalled from the frontier. The Crown Prince was evidently too fatigued to lead his army. This was followed by applause from the galleries.

One of the members of the Legislative Chamber expressed astonishment at the reports of the lack of action on the part of the Greek fleet. M. Ralli then confirmed the detailed reports received concerning the Greek victory at Velestino. In regard to the movements of the army in Epirus, he said that the retreat had been orderly, with the exception of a part of the infantry, which had been infected by a panic originating among the inhabitants of the villages. A motion to adjourn was adopted, general assent being given. M. Delyannis approached M. Ralli at the conclusion of the session, the ex-Premier and the new Premier shaking hands. This incident was heartily cheered, the members of the Legislative Chamber then leaving the building.

Greek Army Retreated to Arta.

London, May 1.—A special despatch from Athens announces that the Greek army in Epirus has retreated in thorough order to Arta, where it is awaiting reinforcements.

The despatch adds that the Turkish assaults on Pharsalos are officially confirmed. The despatch adds that M. Ralli, the new Premier, continues to advocate a war a l'outrance, though he is not averse to an honorable peace.

Anarchist Placards.

Sofia, Bulgaria, May 1.—Anarchist and revolutionary placards, signed by the Macedonian revolutionary party, were posted throughout this city during the night. The printer of the placards has been arrested.

Can't Fight Without Money.

Paris, May 2.—Telegrams received here from Athens state that the new Ministry acknowledges that it will be impossible for Greece to continue the war with an empty purse and with discouraged troops.

Powers About to Mediate.

Athens, May 2.—Reports are current here to-day that the powers are about to mediate between the two antagonists. The Italian and Austrian Ministers have had a long interview with M. Ralli and M. Scoulodis.

Greeks Advanced Again.

Arta, May 2.—After remaining inactive for two days the Greek troops on Friday re-invaded Epirus. The Sixth Regiment advanced to and occupied Filippiada for the third time without fighting. The Turks are still at Pentepigndia and Imaret has been fortified, the military bridge over the River Arta (Arachlos) having been destroyed. The streets of Arta present a strange scene, with the continuous exodus of citizens and the steady incoming of the peasantry, who camp out in the streets around fires, with thousands of sheep and cattle.

Turks Still Preparing for War.

Constantinople, May 2.—War preparations go on with unabated vigor. Two commissions, composed of officials of the Ministries of Public Works and of War have been formed for the purpose of facilitating the despatch of troops to the frontier.

It has been decided to extinguish the torches in all the lighthouses on the Gulf of Smyrna as far as Kamburun during the continuance of the war.

It is officially announced that the Greeks resident in Turkey may become naturalized as an alternative to leaving the country. This will be compulsory for all Greeks officially employed in Turkey.

London, May 2.—It is semi-officially stated that Lord Salisbury's proposal to the powers for a conference at Paris to discuss measures with a view of ending the war between Turkey and Greece has already been under consideration for several days at the various Foreign Offices and may now be considered definitely abandoned.

The Greeks Went Wild.

London, May 3.—The Times' despatch from Larissa, dated Wednesday, says: The Christians who are returning here all say that during the battle at Mfiouna the Crown Prince Constantine was at Karadere, at the foot of the pass. The Greek army is described as behaving on that occasion like a disorderly mob. All discipline was flung to the winds, and the soldiers fired even on their own officers, so terrible was the panic. It is impossible to believe that the army at Pharsalos can withstand the Turks in a pitched battle. That the war is now practically over is plainly apparent.

BRITAIN'S STRENGTH ON SEA AND LAND.

Great Britain's naval superiority is both a commercial and fighting sense, is universally conceded, but there is a pretty general belief that she is greatly inferior to the other great powers in the matter of land forces.

This is a popular error, as a brief statement of the present state of the forces of the Empire will show. The effective fighting forces of the Empire total over a million. The regular forces, home and colonial, are 156,000; the army reserve, 85,000; the militia, 122,000; the yeomanry, 11,000; the volunteers, 232,000; and the European forces in India, 77,000, making a total of 683,000. To these are to be added the native army of India, 145,000, together with 20,000 soldiers of the native Indian states especially organized for Imperial service. Moreover there are in addition effective forces amounting to 100,000. Now add to all these the colonial volunteer forces amounting to 67,000, to which Canada contributes more than half —34,000—and we have a total of over a million. This represents the peace establishment which in case of need can be very largely added to. It will be seen, therefore, that the land forces of the Empire are by no means insignificant, and compare very favourably with most of the great powers who have burdened their population with immense military forces, raised by inexorable conscription, whereas the British forces are all raised by voluntary enlistment. The value of these forces is improved by the special means provided by Great Britain's unequalled navy, which permits of the safe and speedy transportation of any number of soldiers to any desired point on the globe.

The Empire stands unrivalled in her navy. The present strength of the British naval fighting force is 350, consisting of 42 battle ships, 26 port defence vessels, 48 first class cruisers and 56 second class cruisers. This is more than equal in numbers to the combined naval fighting forces of Germany and France, whose total of these classes of ships is 327, and when is added the ten British battle ships and the twenty-two cruisers now building, Great Britain's superiority at sea will be vastly greater than that of the two great powers mentioned. Besides, from the manner in which the British fleet is manned, the superior speed and quality of the vessels, and the training of the crews, the superiority is emphasized.

Moreover, Great Britain has in her merchant marine a vast fleet that can under arrangement be in a few hours converted into transports, and thus, by the rapid movement of men, very effectively co-operate with the regular fighting navy. Not only is Britain's superiority in the respects recited, conspicuous, but the means provided for supplying warships with coal and other supplies are most complete. The entire globe is surrounded with British coaling stations. From point to point, the map of the world is dotted with strongly fortified places, with guns of heavy calibre, with efficient garrisons, and with completely adequate supplies of coal. There is not a point within reasonable distance where a British battleship or cruiser may not call and procure adequate supplies, thus making these great ships practically at home in any quarter of the globe. Many one of these points have strong strategetic importance, in both a maritime and military sense, dominating all the known trade routes. An enumeration of these stations will be interesting. They consist of, beginning near at home: For the North Atlantic, Halifax; for the North Pacific, Esquimalt, (British Columbia); for the West Indies, Santa Lucia; for the west coast of Africa, Sierra Leone for the Mediterranean, Gibraltar; for the Red Sea, Aden; for equatorial waters, Colombo, (Ceylon); for the approach to China, Singapore, (Straits Settlement); for the China seas, Hong Kong; for the region of New Guinea and Australia, Thursday Island; for Australian waters, Sidney; for the south-west of Australia, St. George's Island; for between Australia and South Africa, Mauritius; for the Cape of Good Hope, Simon's bay.

Thus it will be seen that Great Britain in the case of hostile conflict of the nations is well equipped both on sea and and shore for defending herself as well as for prosecuting aggressive operations. None who have the welfare of the Empire at heart need have any concern as to her ability to defend herself. Besides she has the ability and resources to add immensely to, especially, her naval defences. She has unlimited command of money, the most robust sinew of war, and her facilities for building battle and other ships are practically inexhaustible.

To show how superior Great Britain is on the waters, it may be pointed out that she has in the Mediterranean at the present moment thirty-four of her battleships and cruisers and is in a position to dictate the situation. The combined fleets of the other powers present no strength that can for a moment stand up against Britain. Apparently without an effort, we see this terrible aggregation of British ship strength concentrated in the storm area of Europe. The admiralty system that permits of this must be perfect. Yet, with this tremendous show of naval force Great Britain leaves her Channel squadron practically intact. Nor have any of the foreign stations been drawn upon. The old land seems to be acting in the spirit of the motto—"Semper paratus."

THERE are only four "charter" members of the Canadian Senate, that is members appointed in 1867, the first year of the existence of the red chamber.

THE QUESTION OF WATER.

In Relation to the Trent Valley Canal.

A correspondent of the Globe, writing on April 12th, made the assertion that there was insufficiency of water for the purposes of the Trent Valley Canal. That a person living in the district (the letter was written from Lindsay) should make such an extraordinary statement was a matter of surprise. In Saturday's Globe a Peterborough gentleman deals with the question in a manner to show how absurd were the claims of the Lindsay man. The letter referred to reads as follows:

In your issue of the 12th inst., a correspondent who signs himself "One Interested," from Lindsay, calls in question the sufficiency of the water supply for the Trent Valley Canal. The tone of his letter belies the sincerity of his nom-de-plume of "One Interested" in the construction of the canal. If he were "interested" he would not have sought to cast so widespread a doubt on a matter of such vital importance to the scheme, but rather have addressed himself to the local press of his town, who could have given him all the information he wanted. If he was so interested in the canal he could have satisfied himself on this question by asking the first boy fifteen years old that he met on the streets of his native town; or if he had studied the map of his own county he would have discovered enough lakes north of the summit, Balsam Lake, which would store sufficient water for the supply of half a dozen of such canals. He presumes too much on his own intelligence and gives the Government credit for very little of that commodity when he undertakes to advise them not to let any more contracts till this question is settled. However, I can tell your correspondent (though it will not please him to know it) that the question of water supply has been settled beyond a doubt, though it never was doubted by anyone who knew anything about the features of the northern country, from which the water supply is obtained. The commissioners appointed by the Government to inquire into the whole scheme reported "that the question of water supply was beyond doubt." The other statements in the letter of your correspondent are so absurd and show such ignorance and venom towards the scheme that they are not worth replying to.

"ANOTHER INTERESTED."

GRAVE NEWS FROM GOLD COAST.

The Mission of Lieut. Henderson at Wa Said to Have Been Attacked by the Native Chief Samory.

Cape Coast Castle, Gold Coast, Africa, May 2.—Grave news has been received here as to the mission of Lieut. Henderson at Wa. It is reported that Chief Samory has attacked the mission. Authentic details have not yet been received, but a serious disaster is feared. The object of Lieut. Henderson was to make treaties with the chiefs in Hinterland. He had a large escort, but the Governor of Lagos has been asked to send reinforcements. Ferguson, a colonial official, who accompanied Lieut. Henderson, is known to be severely wounded. Wa is considered to be within the sphere of British influence. Chief Samory is very powerful, and has hitherto professed friendship for the British, though in the winter of 1895 he supported King Prempeh of Ashantee in his fight against the English.

A child was cured of croup by a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A neighbor's child died of the same dread disease, while the father was getting ready to call the doctor. This shows the necessity of having Ayer's Cherry Pectoral always at hand.

A Voice from Virden.

GENTLEMEN,—I have used Hagyard's Yellow Oil for the past ten years, and find it a splendid remedy for colic, neuralgia, bronchitis, croup, pains in the back, ulcerated and sore throat, sprains, chilblains, etc., in fact we use it for almost every pain, and it always relieves quickly. I can safely say I know of no other remedy of the sort that can equal it. We always keep a good stock in the house.

BUTCHERED OR BURNED?

We read with horror of the cruelty and butcheries of Gen. Weyler in the fair Isle of Cuba, but little rock we of the ravages of that more direful King of Grave Fillers, KIDNEY DISEASE, here in our midst.

People of high and low degree drop into graves on all sides of us daily from Kidney Trouble. We incur it ourselves, We encourage it. We do everything but cure it.

Yet there is a cure, pleasant as a May morning. Sure as fate. Infallible as heredity. Before this wonderful remedy, the agonizing tortures of Kidney ills vanish like a snowflake in a fiery furnace.

This cure, of which we sound the praises, is DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS. Yet not alone we, but everyone who has tried them. One hundred per cent. of cures we record. Here are examples:

W. F. Smith, 16 Carrol Street, Toronto, says:—"I have taken eight boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills which have cured me of Heavy Trouble, Pain in the Back and Dizziness, after other treatments had failed."

D. J. Kenney, Queen's Hotel, Mount Forest, says:—Have suffered greatly from Nervousness, but information as to the effects of Dodd's Kidney Pills in such cases led me to use them, with the result that I am cured."

Louis H. Bouneall, 573 King East, Toronto, says:—"Had been troubled for several months with pain in my Back and Kidneys which prevented my entering in bicycle events, but am in the ring once more after using three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. James Stokes, Deseronto, Ont., says: From the first box taken of Dodd's Kidney Pills I found relief, and hundreds here, knowing me for the past fifteen years, can vouch for my cure of long standing Kidney Trouble.

PEOPLE YOU KNOW

When people you know give their evidence you have confidence in it much more so than when strangers talk.

These people are people you know, Peterborough People, and you can credit every word they say.

HERE IS ONE:

Mrs. Sarah Henderson, 302 McDonel St., Peterborough, Ont., says: "For a number of years I was a great sufferer from pain in my back, complicated with terrible headaches. Oh my! how my head did ache.

A dizziness would come over me at times, and a filmy mist seemed to cover my eyes so that I could scarcely see. Often I would stagger as if intoxicated.

I could not sleep at night; my hands and arms used to swell and puff up, and I was in a condition of great misery, unable to work and almost in despair.

I doctored a great deal and took many medicines, but everything I tried failed. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised I got a box at Jas. Lynch's Drug Store. The change for the better was wonderful.

The first few doses seemed to lift a load from my aching back, and on taking three boxes I can conscientiously say that I am perfectly cured of all my complaints. I cannot too highly recommend this wonderful remedy."

BEHRING SEA TROUBLE.

Canadians Were Not Alone Pelagic Hunting—Americans Helped in the Destruction.

London, May 1.—Profiting by the temporary presence in England of a leading member of one of the oldest and largest Victorian sealing houses, a representative of the Associated Press called upon that gentleman to ascertain the views held by the Canadian or pelagic sealers on the latest phase of the sealing question. He said in part:

"To talk of extending the close season until the end of August means absolutely a death-blow to Canadian sealers. Under the existing arrangements Victorian schooners starting for the grounds in time for Aug. 1 can only reckon on six weeks, and only then under the most favorable conditions. If the time be extended as suggested, we could, at the very most, only hope for one week's sealing, and, as the weather is usually very bad, the chances are that sealers would return without a single skin.

"There are at present about 60 sealing vessels which set out every season from Victoria alone, but it is a mistake to think that pelagic sealing is done entirely by Canadians. Every year a number of pelagic schooners go out from San Francisco, Seattle and Tacoma and the United States Indians from Noah Bay, Washington State, also sent out vessels to Behring Sea.

"No people in the world have suffered greater hardships than the Canadian sealers. Many have been reduced to absolute poverty by the seizure of their ships, outfits and skins in '85, '86 and '87 by the United States Government. Up to the present not a penny of compensation has been paid. I am bound to say that the United States Government is not altogether to blame for this.

"Canadian sealers feel that they have been shamefully neglected by the British Government. Canadian sealers are not pirates. Our business is perfectly legitimate. Every vessel leaving for the Behring Sea is properly cleared by British authorities at the custom house, and it is shameful that a large and important industry should be killed by the overbearing conduct of American monopolists and the weakness of the British Government.

"But, in spite of all this, the Victorian sealers are determined to have their rights. We intend to fit out vessels for sealing as long as there is a seal left.

"At least 2000 British subjects on Vancouver Island alone derive their living from legitimate sealing on the high seas. The Canadians loyally respect the provisions of the Paris award, unjust as they think them.

"On the United States side of the question, Mr. H. Liebes, one of the members of the North American Commercial Company, makes the following statement to the Associated Press:

"There is no idea of making things hot or cold for anybody; neither is there a wish to hurt Canada nor to worry England. Much less is there any intention on the part of the Alaska Company to avoid or ignore any of the decisions come to by the Paris tribunal, which we are fully aware are binding for a period of five years. What, however, we do contend, and what we wish the public to clearly understand, is the fact that by their award the Paris tribunal intended to give all the protection they possibly could to the seal herd, consistent, of course, with fairness to all parties concerned, and the regulations were made to be binding for the period mentioned. The question at once arises as to whether the injury to the seal herd should be allowed to continue for the unexpired term set for the award or whether it would not be wiser, as well as more humane, for an attempt to be made by all parties interested to come to a mutual agreement without delay upon the basis of such alterations to the existing regulations as may be recommended by the commissioners. This is the real and only question to be satisfactorily settled, and it may be well to point out that the present low value of the sealskin not only precludes any hope of profit to Canadian sealers, but, under existing conditions, the result must be a total failure of their ability to continue the industry, so that it would seem that the present would be a most convenient and appropriate time to take the matter in hand and carry out the necessary means of giving effect to the views of the commissioners."

When fevers and other epidemics are around, safety lies in fortifying the system with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A person having thin and impure blood, is in the most favourable condition to "catch" whatever disease may be floating in the air. Be wise in time.

The Wonder of the Age.

DEAR SIRS,—I must honestly say that I have tried your valuable medicine B.B.B. for the disease called prairie itch, and have found this remedy to be the wonder of the age. I took only three bottles and to my great satisfaction was completely cured. I can highly recommend it to all who suffer from any skin disease or impurity of the blood.

PRINT ON POST CARDS

A Relaxation of Rules in That Connection.

LEAVE CLEAR SPACE FOR STAMP

Cards Will Go Into the United States All Right, But Not in Other Foreign Countries—Dairy Diplomas Being Sent Out—Indian Famine Fund Reaches About $200,000.

Ottawa, May 2.—(Special.)—The Postoffice Department has issued a notice to postmasters that the Postmaster-General has decided to relax the regulations on the subject of the permissible printing on the face or address side of private post cards passing between one place and another in Canada. No objection will, therefore, in future be made to printing, designs, etc., provided ample space is left for the address and for the postage stamp, and that there be a perfectly clear space, free from border, left for the postage stamp. It is important that the postage stamp should be as conspicuous as possible on the card, in order to facilitate its rapid and accurate cancellation in the postoffice, and for this reason the space immediately surrounding it should be quite clear. Under arrangements agreed to by the United States postoffice, such private postcards will be allowed transmission through the United States mails; but no other countries having so agreed, cards bearing such designs, if forwarded to such other countries, would be liable to be returned to Canada. Therefore the public are cautioned against having any such designs, etc., on the face of post cards intended for countries other than the United States.

Mr. Courtney, Honorary Treasurer of the Canadian National Indian Famine Fund, is just about closing the fund, April 15 being the last day on which the subscription lists were to be out. Stray sums of small amounts have been coming in, however, from outside places during the past two weeks. When everything is in from all sources the total contribution from Canada to the relief of the Indian sufferers will be in the neighborhood of $200,000. Canada's contribution to the fund is a very creditable one.

The Agricultural and Dairy Commissioner is sending out the diplomas earned by graduates of the Dairy Department of the School of Mines and Agriculture at Kingston during the session of 1895-96. Before the graduate receives his diploma he must put in one season at a cheese factory in manufacturing cheese, and the 13 graduates having now satisfied the examiners that they are qualified and had complied with all the regulations the diplomas are being issued to them.

Mr. A. E. Howey of the Dairy Commissioner's staff left yesterday for the Northwest Territories to assist in the work of developing the creamery business under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture. There are six superintendents now engaged in this work, under Prof. Robertson's direction, and two traveling inspectors. The duty of these officers is to see that the cold storage arrangements in connection with the creameries are properly carried out and that the plant and machinery are properly put up. The places where creameries will shortly be in operation are as follows: Yorkton, Moosomin, Whitewood, Grenfell, Wolseley, Indian Head, Qu'Appelle Station, Regina, Moose Jaw, Maple Creek, Prince Albert, Calgary, Innisfil, Red Deer, Witaskiwin and South Edmonton. In addition to these there will be 11 or 12 skimming stations, at which the cream will be separated from the milk and then forwarded by rail to one or other of the creameries.

Although the express companies have met the reduced rates of commission on money orders issued by the Postoffice Department payable in Canada by a considerable cut, it does not appear that there is any appreciable reduction in the amount of orders issued by the Postoffice Department, but, on the contrary, the reduced rates which came into force the first of last month seem to give much satisfaction. They are as follows:

Attractive Women.

Why is one woman attractive and another not? The most admirable and attractive thing about an attractive woman is her womanliness. Everybody admires a womanly woman. She must have health, of course, because without it she would lose the brightness of her eyes, the fullness of her cheeks and her vivacity. Real health must mean that a woman is really a woman. That she is strong and perfect in a sexual way, as well as in every other. That she is capable of performing perfectly the duties of maternity. Some are born with what is called "constitutional weakness." Those who do not enjoy perfect health, need only take the proper precautions and the proper remedy to become perfectly well and strong. Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription will cure any derangement of the distinctly feminine organism.

Trenton, N. J., May 2.—Ex-Mayor Frank A. Magowan, who made his appearance in Trenton last night with Mrs. Barnes, and installed her in the mansion adjoining that occupied by his former wife, gave out a statement to-night that he and Mrs. Barnes were married a second time on December 17 last, in Camden, N. J. He said the marriage was performed by Justice of the Peace Evans. Mrs. Barnes to-night showed the marriage certificate and a certified copy of the report of the marriage sent to City Clerk Varney by Justice Evans. This second marriage was for the purpose of overcoming any possibility of the Milwaukee marriage being declared invalid, because neither had been divorced for six months or over.

WHY SUFFER WITH PILES?

Dr. Chase's Ointment Will Cure Them at a Cost of But 60 Cents.

Piles, scrofula, eczematic eruptions, scald head, salt rheum and all other annoying and painful skin diseases can be easily cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

"I had protruding piles for ten years," writes H. H. Sutherland, commercial traveller, of Truro, N.S.; "tried many remedies, and had doctors operate. It was no use. Was completely laid up at times. Chase's Ointment was recommended to me by Mr. Brennan, of the Summerside, P.E.I., Journal. I tried it, and one box completely cured me."

Mr. Statia, the editor of the Streetsville, Ont., Review, gives this unsolicited testimonial under date of Nov. 6, 1895: "Half a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured my daughter of eczema. That was six months ago, and there has since been no reappearance of the disease."

T. Wallace, blacksmith, of Iroquois, Ont., was troubled with blind itching piles for 20 years. "I tried every remedy that came out in vain," he writes, "until I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment. It was a godsend. One box cured me."

All dealers and Edmanson, Bates & Co., manufacturers, Toronto. Price 60c.

Linseed and turpentine are every mother's household remedy for coughs, colds, throat and lung affections. Dr. Chase has disguised the taste and made the remedy pleasant to take. Large bottle only 25c.

It's a Mistake

To Think That Only the Rich Man Can Wear High-Class Garments.

We adopted the Cash System of Tailoring in Peterborough partly in order that men of moderate means might be as well dressed as the millionaire without any strain upon the finances. Suppose you need

A Genuine Scotch Tweed Suit, our Cash Price for Which is $17.50—

Isn't it easier to pay down the cash and be done with it than it would be to have a debt facing you for weeks or months, even if the price was the same?—but that could not be. No good Tailor could or would make it for less than $22.50 if he had to take his money in instalments, or, wait an indefinite time for it.

Obituary.

The death of Mr. Albert V. Huffman, second youngest son of the late Luther Huffman, occurred last evening at about seven o'clock. The deceased was twenty-three years of age and was formerly employed at the Electric Works. He has been a sufferer from consumption for over a year and has failed rapidly during the last few weeks. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock from the family residence, No. 116 Albert street.

The Jubilee Concert.

In the notice of the Jubilee Concert to be given by a chorus of children on June 18th, it was omitted to mention that a feature of the programme is to be a brief patriotic address by Mr. Hampden Burnham. The date of the concert, by a happy coincidence, falls upon the 82nd anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, by which Wellington closed Napoleon Bonaparte's European map-making operations. The unique features of the concert will make it a delightful occasion.

Furniture by the Carload.

We have just placed in stock a carload of selected furniture bought at the closest prices and delivered here to the best advantage. Fathers or Mothers.

Treat your boys to a new Easter suit. Teach them taste and economy by fitting them out for the season at the City Clothing Store. You can have your pick from a heaping stock of dressy new suits at special Easter prices. Bright new outfits for boys and youths is what we take pride in selling. Juvenile suits that last longer, fit neater, and look better than the general run. Our special Easter prices for two-piece suits are $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50, and are well worth your quick investigation. For three-piece suits for youths, the prices are $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 and up to $7.00. We like mothers to visit our store and do their buying personally. Fair, square prices for reliable children's and youths' clothing can be counted on every time you buy here. We ask the men to see our large assortment of popular selections in spring tweed and cloths for ordered suits and spring overcoats. We turn out the finest and lowest-priced spring clothing for men that ever left the tailors' lap. You also find every good kind of ready-to-wear clothing in spring suits and overcoats. Stacks of them to select from that will please and fit you, made by men that know how. Men's serge suits as low as $3, $4, $5 and up to $8. Tweed suits as low as $3.50, $4, $5 and up to $10. Fine black worsted suits at $8, $10 and $12. See our attractive window display of handsome Easter neckwear and furnishings—the latest out—right in style and the "top-notch" novelties of the day. Here's a snap—500 pairs of all-wool tweed pants, well made, strong working pants, for only $1.25 a pair—the best value we ever offered.—H. LEBRUN & Co., City Clothing Store, George street. dw

A CANOE UPSET.

A Couple of Young Men Get an Icy Bath in the River.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay witnessed a very thrilling incident from the Hunter street bridge on Saturday afternoon last.

A couple of young fellows in a canoe were endeavouring to see how far up the river they could sail against the vicious current which is running. The wind was strong and spectators were surprised at the progress the canoe seemed to be making. When it was found impossible to proceed any further up and when still several hundred yards below the bridge an endeavour was made to "come about" by the canoeists, but as soon as the frail craft was broadside to the current it capsized instantly, precipitating its two occupants into the icy water.

Half a dozen men were walking along the C.P.R. spur line at the time, and Mr. Hay states that they made not the slightest effort to effect a rescue.

The canoe was righted but it was found impossible to empty it of the water which was in it owing to the heaviness of the wet sails. By the time the wreck had drifted down nearly to the bridge works, a skiff put out from the shore and the two half drowned canoeists were rescued together with their craft. The names of those concerned are suppressed by request.

WEEKLY HALF HOLIDAYS.

If They are to be Held This Year the Fact Should be Advertised Now.

The employees of the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company enjoyed their first half holiday of this year on Saturday last. These weekly half holidays will be given until September, as usual.

If it is the intention of the stores to allow this weekly half holiday during June, July and August, the fact should be advertised at once in order that the farming community may be fully posted on the matter before the change is made. Through insufficient notice before hand, many farmers came into town on Thursday afternoons last summer and had their trouble for nothing, as on arriving here it was found impossible to transact business. If the movement is begun immediately and the matter given publicity through the daily and weekly papers, the difficulty would be done away with.

A SATURDAY RUNAWAY.

Mr. A. Parker's Horse Turns a Complete Somersault.

On Saturday afternoon last a horse attached to the delivery waggon of Parker's Dye Works became frightened at the C. P. R. station and snapping the tie rein, which fastened it, ran up George street.

Arriving at the corner of Charlotte street it turned to go down to its own stable, but slipped and fell, the waggon and horse turning completely over and the harness entangling the horse in such a manner that it could not rise.

Strange to say neither horse or rig was injured in the least by the accident. The horse was frightened, it is said, through a bus coming rumbling up behind it at the station. It is ordinarily quiet enough.

Dr. Clarke attending physician for month.

Physicians in attendance on private patients—Drs. Halliday, Boucher, King, Bell, Greer, Scott, Brown and Eastwood.

PERSONAL.

Miss C. Hoyt is nursing a case out near Omemee.

Miss Buck, who has been seriously ill for some weeks, is convalescing.

Miss S. Barnett, private nurse, has taken departments at the Croft House.

Mr. John Greer has been in Lindsay visiting his nephew, Mr. T. W. Greer.

Mr. J. W. T. Fairweather is in town for a few days, having came down from Toronto on Saturday.

Rev. Father Desaulniers, who is stationed at Verner, in the vicinity of Sturgeon Falls, is at present at the cathedral.

The little son of Mr. Z. Desautel, who was tossed by a bull last week, as reported in the EXAMINER, has recovered from the effects of the accident.

Rev. A. H. Ranton will continue his evangelistic services during the coming week at Lakefield. Bus loads have gone up from town to hear him on several occasions.

Mr. Will McClelland's many friends will be interested in knowing that he is now in Mexico assisting in the construction of a railroad and looking after the interests of the firm with whom he is engaged in Cleveland.

Messrs. Tom Ferguson, Will Connal and Hal. Burnham, who, as stated in Saturday's EXAMINER, have just graduated in applied science from McGill University, are all home and are receiving the congratulations of their friends.

Neuralgia's Persistent Agony.

Has but one source of relief. Nerviline—nerve pain cure—penetrates to the irritated nerves, soothes them into repose, and affords relief almost instantly. The whole range of medicine affords no parallel to Nerviline as a pain reliever.

A VERY SERIOUS CHARGE.

A Former Resident of Peterborough Committed for Trial.

Richard Land, formerly of Peterborough, was committed for trial in Norwood on Saturday, by Magistrate Edmison, on a charge of rape.

The principal witness in the case is Miss Mary Metcalfe, the alleged victim of the outrage. She is a girl of about 18 years of age, but looks much younger, and her story to the Magistrate is that whilst on her way to her home on the Hastings road from the village of Norwood, she was overtaken by Land in a buggy, on April 26th, and invited to ride. She accepted the offer she says, but when her home was reached Land refused to allow her to alight from the buggy, but whipping up the horse drove on for some distance, and there turned into a bye road and finally came out again on the main road at a point nearly identical with that at which he picked her up in the first place. It was during the ride, the girl states, that the outrage was committed.

What the Magistrate considered as strong corroborative evidence was the fact that on the girl's arrival at home she told her story to her parents and mentioned that in a scuffle which had taken place a bottle of medicine which she had in her pocket had fallen out and been broken. The bottle was afterwards found in exactly the place described.

The girl states, further, that the prisoner was a complete stranger to her and that she had never even seen him before.

A SUCCESSFUL MOTHER GOOSE PARTY.

The Sale and Entertainment in St. John's School House.

Saturday night was sloppy and rainy—just the night for young ducks, and incidentally, just the weather for Mother Goose, at least it answered the purpose of making the children's sale a great success. That is the children of the Mission Band of St. John's, who like many older children, got into of debt in a good cause, and were anxious to clear it off and make a little money for other good purposes. And this sale of articles made by them realised $30, clearing the debt, and leaving $15 to the good. During the evening a fine musical programme was presented, consisting of three nursery choruses—the tragedy of "Cock Robin" being especially effective.

The choruses were prepared by Miss Alma McCollum and Mrs. Finnemore, the latter arranging the special music, and the result must have well repaid them for their trouble. The fortune-teller's tent, tenanted by Miss Addie Armstrong, was a great attraction, and many were the momentous—more or less—decrees of fate delivered by the fair fortune-teller. At the conclusion of the sale the goods left unsold were put under the hammer, which was wielded by a local lawyer with a skill and success that almost suggested that he had missed his vocation. The occasion was an excellent success.

NEWS NUGGETS.

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—Court Forest Queen, C.O.F., holds a special meeting Wednesday evening.

—The Board of Trade meets this evening at eight o'clock in the town clerk's office.

—The Veterans of '66 meet in the drill shed to-night to elect the officers of the Association.

—The Police Court is now held at nine o'clock in the morning, as is usual during the summer months.

—This kind of weather is very disappointing to those who have invested in vehicles this spring.

—Mr. Alex. Elliott has a very handsome new sign in his store window. It was designed H. W. Watson, painter.

—All liquor licenses must be paid for before 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. License Inspector Cochrane will be in his office from 10 until 3 o'clock.

—The Orillia Packet gives the following good advice to wheelmen: "Don't carry a child on a baby carrier unless the child is borrowed or you have more children than you need."

—The Catholic Association will hold the last of the series of fortnightly entertainments on Monday, May 17th. Mr. Daniel O'Connell, B.A., will deliver an address on the occasion.

—Nearly seventy persons, with five carloads of freight, will leave Markham township next week for Temiscamingue district. The party will be joined in town, it is said, by a number from Centreville.

—The roadway during the spring has sank considerably on George street under the street railway line on account of the recent sewer operations. The corporation labourers are repairing the damage.

—Mr. John Leggat, Perrytown, has a hen, which if it doesn't lay the golden egg, lays one that is hard to match. A specimen measures 8¼ inches in circumference one way, and 6¼ the other way. Who can beat that —Cobourg will have a second brewery shortly. That town with a population of about four thousand now has eleven hotels, a railway restaurant selling wine and beer, and two liquor stores. It's a thirsty place surely.

—Messrs. John Davidson and F. B. Parney, of the Norwood High and Public schools, have written and expressed their willingness to the Board of Education, to accept a reduction of salary on account of the recent disastrous fire in Norwood.

—Dr. Burrows, of Lindsay, made a suggestion at the board of works meeting there the other night that met with the approbation of every member. He advised that the clerk insert a notice in the papers asking the citizens to report defective sidewalks whenever noticed, either to the street overseer or the clerk. The plan, if followed, will greatly aid the overseer and lessen the chances of accidents occurring. Something of the kind would not be amiss in Peterborough.

Baby Eczema and Scald Head.

Infants and young children are peculiarly subject to this terrible disorder, and if not promptly arrested it will eventually become chronic. Dr. Chase made a special study of Eczema and disease of the skin, and we can confidently recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure all forms of Eczema. The first application soothes the irritation and puts the little sufferer to rest.

SHOPLIFTING.

Merchants are complaining very much of the great prevalence of shoplifting. Now that there is no case before the courts, it permissible to insist on something being done that will prevent, or at least diminish, the prevalence of a practice that means great loss to our merchants. From the standing of the parties that are guilty of these practices, merchants hesitate to take the risk of offending families that are good customers, and it would be well that the authorities took some steps to make an example that would operate as a deterrent. And the more prominent the offending party, and the higher her standing in society, the more effective will be the example. If the offenders were children, without a full appreciation of the offence committed, there might be some ground for clemency, but when the offending party is of mature years, and above all, in a position not to need to resort to shoplifting to obtain goods, leniency is a much mistaken kindness to the individual, and a gross injustice to the merchant that suffers. The police magistrate, from his wide experience and knowledge of criminal procedure, might easily, one would think, suggest a means by which justice could be made to reach the parties guilty of shoplifting offences. The hard times merchants cannot afford the luxury of winking at shoplifting, but between the risk of offending good customers and the loss from these petty thefts, are placed in a peculiar position, in which the good offices of the authorities are especially indicated.

GREAT

Dissolution of Partnership Sale!

A unique state of affairs exists in our store. An Emergency Sale different in scope from all others is made necessary. All the Ultra Fashionable High-Class Stock in our establishment—postively everything—must be relentlessly reduced eight weeks earlier than heretofore.

Our house is founded on the granite rock of TRUTH and VERACITY. Those who build on false statements build upon quicksand, and will sooner or later be engulfed. To all the many thousands of our friends and patrons who in the past have favoured us with their patronage, we beg to extend our grateful acknowledgement, with the promise that however we may have served them in the past, we shall re-double our energies and try to serve them better in the future. And since great success comes only as a reward of great merit—we shall hereafter offer the best products of the world's best markets AT THE VERY LOWEST PRICES that scientific-modern-thoroughly-up-to-date store methods can ever hope to reach.

The crowds the last three weeks showed how thoroughly our Dissolution of Partnership Sale has been appreciated. The eagerness of the buyers proved how extraordinary the values are—proved how completely we made it a point at this sale to LOWER THE LOWEST PRICE RECORDS. It is altogether the Biggest, Best and most tempting in Price Sale ever held in Peterborough. All our departments have joined hands to make it the success of all successes, by offering everything of the most highly desirable lines of Goods AT PRICES THAT ARE ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT A PRECEDENT.

This space will not allow us to quote prices. We simply leave the matter with yourself. Come and be convinced. This sale will be one of the most remarkable events of the present year.

CHURCH CHIMES.

There were thirty baptisms yesterday in the George street Methodist church.

As an anthem last night St. Paul's choir sang Dudley Buck's beautiful Evening Hymn.

The evening anthem in the George street Methodist church was entitled "Trust in the Lord."

Mrs. Seward took the anthem "Nearer My God to Thee," very acceptably in the George street Methodist church yesterday morning.

Anniversary sermons will be preached next Sunday in St. Paul's church by Rev. Mr. Jordan of St. James' Square Presbyterian church, Toronto.

Rev. A. T. Dykeman, pastor of the Murray street Baptist church, preached on "Christ in the Old Testament" to a large congregation last night.

Rev. G. C. Elliott, the new pastor of the Park street Baptist church, conducted the services in that church yesterday. He will move to town next week.

Mrs. Main and Miss Mary Patterson sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul," as a duet in St. Paul's church yesterday morning, their voices blending in noticeable harmony.

Mr. G. W. Mulligan's voice was heard to good advantage last evening at St. Andrew's in the anthem "If ye love Me Keep my Commandments," in which he took the solos.

There was an exceptionally large attendance at Rev. Mr. Dykeman's Bible Class in the Murray street Baptist church yesterday. The interest in the class continues to increase steadily.

Mr. John Peace sang his first solo last night in the anthem, "In the Cross of Christ, I Glory," at St. Andrew's church. Mr. Peace has a voice of great compass, which is expected to develop into something above the average. His work last evening was the subject of much favourable comment.

There was a large attendance at the quarterly services in the Mark street church yesterday morning. The pastor preached an appropriate sermon from Luke xii, 8-9. Several new members united with the church, and the number of communicants was the largest during the present pastorate. The choir rendered special and appropriate music.

Charlotte street Methodist church held a song service last evening, three anthems being rendered, viz. "Praise ye the Father," "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace," unaccompanied by the organ, and "Nearer my God to thee." All the anthems were well given and the effect of "Thou wilt keep him in perfect Peace" was especially fine. Miss Hendren also sang as a solo "We've sighted the Golden Gate."

INSPECTIONS.

I made an inspection of the Protestant Home, Peterborough, on the 19th May, when the inmates numbered nineteen—nine men and ten women.

There was no change to be noted in building or grounds since my last visit. I found everything in satisfactory order.

Water from the town mains should be supplied to the building, and proper water closets provided. The lighting should also be by gas or electricity.

Only one inmate contributes towards his maintenance, paying one dollar a week. The books are well kept.

I instructed Mr. Mann to make an inspection of this Home. A copy of his report is annexed.

According to your instructions I visited the Protestant Home, Peterborough, on September 17th, 1896, on which occasion there were seventeen old people inmates of this institution, who all appeared to be as comfortable as possible, considering their infirmities.

The only change in the structural arrangement is the introduction of a new furnace.

There have been no cases of sickness during the summer.

Books were entered up.

INSPECTIONS.

I made an inspection of the House of Providence, Peterborough, on the 19th May. Its inmates on that occasion were thirty-two old people and two children.

The old men occupy a building upon the grounds of St. Joseph's Hospital, and the women are domiciled in a part of the Hospital building. Their apartments were all in good order. This charity is under the management of the Sisters of St. Joseph.

The books were properly kept.

I instructed Mr. Mann to make an inspection of this Home. A copy of his report is annexed.

The St. Joseph's House of Providence, which is under the same management as the St. Joseph's Hospital, was, as you instructed, visited by me on September 17th, 1896.

There were thirty old people in custody, nine males and thirty-one females.

No change has taken place and everything is in about the same shape as on previous occasions.

The books were in proper order.

BASEBALL.

The Park Nine will be called out for its first practice this week, and it is to be hoped that the boys will turn out as regularly as they have done in former years. Although hitherto classed as juniors, the Park Nine are now capable of putting up as excellent a quality of baseball as to merit the honour of upholding the reputation of the town amongst the best amateur senior clubs in the province.

The second nine of the Toronto University is making plans for a trip east, and the manager, Mr. F. K. Johnston, has written to the Sporting Editor of the EXAMINER asking if a game cannot be arranged for about June 1st. This will be a good opportunity for the Park Nine to show their mettle against one of the crack young teams of the province, and an effort should be made to come to terms with the Varsity boys.

The members of the Park Nine are requested to turn out for practice tomorrow evening as early as possible. A full attendance is urged.

The Havelock Standard says:—"Our baseball club will go to Campbellford on May 24th to play a Peterborough team. Last year the teams played and the game was a creditable one for the Havelock club. This year our team is considerably strengthened and the game on the 24th will prove that Havelock will be decidedly in it."

"Nit," Havelock! You may have a good team, but the Park Nine, though small, have established a reputation for "getting there," that will astonish any heavyweight teams that run up against them.

The members of the Port Hope base ball club met Thursday in the Y.M.C.A. and organized for the season. The following officers were elected:

President—A. Winslow.
Vice-President—J. A. Woodhouse.
Sec.-Treas.—Geo. McArthur.
Captain—T. Burt.
Managing Committee—C. Massey, Thos. O'Neil and Upton Runnals.

LACROSSE.

The lacrosse boys are requested to turn out for practice to-night.

Word was received this afternoon that the management of the Campbellford 24th of May Demonstration found it impossible to find a team to meet the Peterboroughs. The club will therefore make an effort to bring a good team here for a game on the Queen's Birthday.

The Havelock Lacrosse Club will play in Campbellford on May 24th against the Campbellford and Hastings clubs. Just where Peterborough comes in it hard to say, as no word has been recieved from Campbellford since the invitation was accepted to go there. The Wellingtons, of Toronto, were expected to be the opponents of the local team and a one hundred dollar trophy was offered.

President J. J. Craig, of Fergus, occupied the chair at the special meeting of the Canadian Lacrosse Association Council held at the Rossin House Friday. Also present were Vice-Presidents J. D. Bailey and T. R. Glanville, Secretary J. A. Vance, Past President H. J. P. Good, and Councillors D. J. Slater, J. A. Ross, W. H. Hall, P. MacMillan, W. J. Stark and Frank Nelson. A session of four hours was spent over the revised draft of the constitution and rules, and all the action of the meeting was in the line of drawing the strings tighter. The man who in future is caught playing under an assumed name or on another man's certificate is put out of the game. He is expelled to stay and there is no reinstatement.

The following arrangement of the district was made at the night meeting:

Central—Fergus, Berlin, Brampton, Georgetown, Elms.

York—Stouffville, Markham, Aurora, Richmond Hill, Troum che II.

Ontario—Beaverton, Whitby, Uxbridge, Port Perry, Lindsay.

Southern—Paris, Brantford, Woodstock, Ingersoll, Simcoe, Tilsonburg.

Northern—Wiarton, Owen Sound, Orangeville, Mesford.

Western—Chatham, Detroit, Thamesville, Windsor, Windsor Y.M.C.A.

Northwestern—Grand Valley, Orangeville II., Arthur, Mount Forest, Guelph, Elora, Fergus II., Shelburne.

Huron—Seaforth, Stratford, St. Mary's, Bright, Mitchell, Clinton, Goderich.

Northeastern—Barrie, Bradford, Orillia, Owen Sound.

Eastern—Peterborough, Port Hope, Madoc, Cobourg, Campbellford.

Saugeen—Walkerton, Chesley, Tara, Hepworth, Wiarton II., Owen Sound II.

Bruce—Kincardine, Lucknow, Paisley, Southampton, Listowel, Wingham.

Niagara—Niagara Falls, Alerts (St. Catharines), Athletic II. (St. Catharines), Thorold, Merritton.

Simcoe—Alliston, Cookstown, Tottenham, Streetsville, Bolton.

This list is subject to the revision of the committee, which will meet again in Toronto on the 10th of May. Junior York, Huron and Northeastern districts will be formed, and possibly others for the boys, where enough clubs can be found.

THE WHEEL.

Quite a lot of girls who know a thing or two about the requirements of a bicycle suit have adopted the bifurcated skirt this season. And I must confess that a long standing prejudice I have had against them has been greatly weakened by some of the skirts I have seen. They certainly look like an ordinary skirt at all times, and hang well on the wheel and keep in place splendidly, no matter how the wind may blow, but (it's too bad, but there is a 'but') they must be excessively hot for warm weather on account of the double fold which encircles the knees. I still hold my own opinion that an ordinary well-cut short skirt can be kept in place perfectly if the saddle is properly adjusted so that you don't pedal up into the air, and if you either wear silk knickers or have you skirt lined in front with silk so that it can't work up over the knees. I have yet to meet the wind which can afford me any dissomfiture by displacing my skirt, and I use no straps or bands or weights or complications of any kind to keep it in place. But, everyone to their taste—don't let me presume to dictate.—Cycling.

While Wm. Allen, a young fellow who lives near Orono, was riding on his bicycle to Newcastle school the other morning, he met with a very serious accident. He was passing a colt which took fright and kicking over the shafts struck him on the forehead knocking him unconscious. He was at once taken to Dr. Tucker's residence where he has been under the doctor's care. The last report was that he was still unconscious.

In Toronto on Thursday, Mr. Charles Richardson, on a Cleveland bicycle, won the coasting championship from Mr. Alex. Elliott, who has not been beaten on his Gendron in years. This is supposed to be the best test of an easy running wheel. There were others in the competition.

The secretary of the great Martin road-race, of Buffalo, writes to the Sporting Editor of the EXAMINER, enclosing entry blanks for any of Peterborough's road riders who wish to participate. The Martin road race is the biggest event of the kind held on the continent.

At the last quarterly meeting of the American Statistical Association Dr. W. S. Abbott, secretary of the Massachusett's board of health, presented some interesting figures regarding the proportion of pulmonary tuberculosis in females to that in males in Massachusetts. The rate in 1852 was 1,451 females to 1,000 males; in 1890, 1,055 females to 1,000 males; and last year only 974 females to 1,000 males. Last year was the first in the history of the state in which the number of deaths from phthisis in females was greater than that in males. The fact that a uniform reduction in the rate of female deaths began some five years ago, about the time when women were beginning to ride the bicycle extensively, Dr. Abbott considers significant, and he is induced to attribute the decrease in the death rate to the great increase in open air exercise among women which has been inaugurated by the use of the bicycle.

Seven cyclers have been fined $1 and costs by the Port Perry magistrate, for riding on the sidewalks. Two of the offenders were of the gentler sex.

A member of the Barrie bicycle club has been fined $1, and $3.45 costs, for riding the length of two blocks on the sidewalk before eight o'clock in the morning.

The wheelman who are to meet at Chatham won't do any coasting in that neighbourhood. The country thereabouts is so level that an ant-hill looks like Pike's Peak.

TURNING GRAY
AND THREATENED
WITH BALDNESS

The Danger is Averted by Using

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. Hearing Ayer's Hair Vigor highly spoken of, I commenced using this preparation, and was so well satisfied with the result that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good, natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HAIGHT, Avoca, Neb.

HOT TIMES AT THE CAPE.

The Ministry Sustained Only by the Casting Vote of the Speaker—British Guns at Delagoa Bay.

Capetown, April 30.—In the Cape Parliament to-day Mr. Merriman, the anti-Rhodes leader, moved a resolution of no confidence in the Cape Ministry, which he supported by a vigorous attack upon the hostile attitude assumed by the Cape Colony administration toward the Transvaal. The Chamber was crowded and the debate was of the most excited character. But the resolution was finally rejected by the casting vote of the Speaker of the House.

Sir J. Gordon Sprigg, the Prime Minister and Treasurer, presented the budget to the House of Assembly. It showed a surplus of £250,000 in the estimated receipts over the expenditures.

The budget contained a proposal for an increase in the strength of the Cape mounted rifles at an annual cost of £23,000. This increase is asked for on the ground that it is necessary for the protection of native territories.

It is announced here that the commander of the British Cape and West Africa fleet, Rear Admiral H. H. Rawson, has received permission from the Portuguese authorities to land a number of guns from the ships of the British squadron in Delagoa Bay, for the purpose of artillery practice. The landing of the guns will be made to-morrow.

SCHURTER GOES TO TRIAL

The Manager of the Private Bank in Carrick Committed Charged With Making a False Entry.

Walkerton, April 30.—A large number of Mildmay people were in attendance at the Court House here to-day in connection with the trial of Mr. Charles Schurter, manager of the late private banking company of Carrick. The manager was charged with making a false entry in the ledger of the bank, whereby its creditors and his partners were defrauded out of $35,886, with which he credited Kramer & Co., of which firm he was himself a member. There was no cheque or deposit slip to cover the entry, and it was not even entered in the day book. Mr. Schurter simply paid himself and Kramer that amount by entering it in the ledger. Afterwards, when brought to account for it, he lost his nerve and paid back the money. He got it from his wife, but did not know where she got it. Mr. O'Connor, Q.C., prosecuted for the assignee, and Mr. Arthur Collis, B.A., defended the prisoner. Police Magistrate Robb committed Schurter for trial, but accepted bail in the sum of one thousand dollars.

TORONTO HORSE SHOW.

The Great Society Event of the Spring Season Proves a Brilliant Success—Yesterday's Awards.

The words "a brilliant function" may now be used in describing the third annual Canadian Horse Show. The first day's performances placed it beyond failure as a sporting and artistic event, and yesterday's exhibitions assured it a social and financial success. In the afternoon a goodly audience enjoyed the ring program, while at night, despite the threatening aspect of the weather, a brilliant and distinguished throng filled the capacious Armouries. It would, perhaps, be easier to say who were not there than to give the names of those present, but a few of the latter may be mentioned. Among these were: Sir Frank Smith, Edmund Bristol, Robert Davies, Hon. G. W. Ross, Hon. John Dryden, Deputy Minister of Agriculture James, Captain W. F McMaster, Mayor Fleming, Ald. Sheppard, Shaw, Scott and Hallam, Col. Otter, D.A.G., S. H. Janes, Mayor Marks of Port Arthur, Major J. B. Maclean of Montreal, George Beardmore, W. R. Riddell, Q.C., Dr. G. Sterling Ryerson, M.L.A., Major Cosby, Melfort Boulton, Harton Walker, W. Walker and Reginald Fitzgibbons.

From Detroit in the private car of General Alger, United States Secretary for War, came: Mr. and Mrs. Russell Alger, Mr. and Mrs. John Owen, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Warren, E. S. Barbour, Mrs. Barbour, Miss Croel, A. H. Silby and A. W. Field.

The three performances around the tan bark yesterday showed another grand lot of horses. In the morning the classes were small, while big fields were the rule in the afternoon and evening, and all day the quality was first-class. Competition was generally keen, the jumping and tandem driving being especially interesting to the spectators.

Roup and Its Treatment.

Your fowls have the roup. The easiest way to get rid of this disease is to dispose of every fowl on the place. Plow a strip of land 20x50 feet and sow heavily with rye, fence it in with netting, build a small poultry house on it, buy a dozen healthy fowls and put them in this yard and keep them until winter. Fumigate the poultry house you now have by burning a pound of sulphur in it four or five times this coming summer. Clean it out thoroughly, whitewash the entire interior with lime, having an ounce of crude carbolic acid in each gallon of the wash. Carry all the scrapings and sweepings not less than a quarter of a mile away. Before putting any more fowls in this house see that there are no chinks to admit drafts. See that the floors and walls are dry and will remain so, then keep it clean. Bowel disease is the scourge that kills millions of chicks every year. It is caused by overfeeding, feeding improper food, cold, dampness and lice. Feed chicks lightly about four times a day. Give them what seems to be about half enough each time. Raw corn meal is not a good feed. Corn bread soaked in sweet milk and then pressed dry is good. Rolled oats are good. So is stale bread wet with milk and squeezed dry. See that they have pure water, grit and are kept warm and dry. Any sort of sloppy food will kill them. They must have exercise. Let them run at large every fine day.—Fred Grundy, in American Agriculturist.

"To tell the truth my mother has lived with one foot in the grave," writes Mrs. Eugene Stantzenberg, of No. 1604 Walker Ave., Houston, Texas, in a letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y.

"With a most thankful heart I will tell you about the wonderful cure effected in her case. She has been a perfect wreck for seven long years. No words can describe what she has suffered. She could not sleep on account of severe pains. She tried every doctor around here and spent hundreds of dollars without benefit. After hearing of your wonderful remedies I wrote to you. My mother has taken six bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and six of the 'Favorite Prescription,' and is now perfectly cured. Please receive the heartiest thanks and blessings from my father and seven children for saving the life of dear mother. May God bless you and your Institution, is the wish of your friend."

Tens of thousands of women have found complete and permanent relief from obstinate and seemingly incurable disease by using the wonderful remedies referred to above. The "Golden Medical Discovery" possesses the peculiar property of nourishing and vitalizing the blood with the life-giving red corpuscles which build up healthy flesh and muscular strength.

In the special weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organs, the "Favorite Prescription" is a perfect and positive specific. It is the only scientific medicine prepared for that purpose by an educated physician and specialist in that particular field of practice.

For weak and nervous women these two medicines taken conjointly constitute the most marvelously successful course of treatment known to the medical profession

For nearly 30 years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., at the head of a splendid staff of associate specialists, graduates from the leading medical universities of America and Europe.

TOM'S WIDOW.

"Yes-es," said Mrs. Craige, as we sat sewing in her cozy sewing-room, "most folks notice that tidy."

The tidy in question was a nightmare vision, a combination of gaudy colors never to be found excepting in those horrors devised by the economical to use up "odds and ends." It was made of canvas, and bits of zephyr wool, left from more ambitious pieces of work, were sewed in pell-mell, without regard to color, in a set black that was enough to set anybody's teeth on edge.

"Do—do you admire it?" I asked, fearful of giving offense by plain speaking.

The old lady took off her spectacles, wiped them, put them on again, leaned her head on one side, and said, slowly and gently, in a voice mild as new milk:

"My dear, I think it's the most unutterably, hideous object I ever beheld in the whole 70 years of my life. Nobody could have made that tidy but Tom's widow."

"Oh!" I said, not knowing exactly how to answer, for Mrs. Craige was almost a stranger to me. My husband, who was a missionary preacher, was making a lecturing tour and Mrs. Craige, an influential member of the Evanstown congregation, had invited me to stay with her and rest from much weary travel. I was soon made to feel at home in the dear old lady's motherly care, but it is easily understood that I could know nothing of herself or her neighbors and family excepting what she chose to tell me.

"You do not know who Tom's widow was, my dear," she said, presently, as I stitched in respectful silence; "how should you? Tom was my son; one of my sons, I should say, for I had nine, and four daughters, though you find me alone. Some are dead, some are married, but all who are living have their own homes and families. Tom went to California and started a business; he married there, and when he died it was natural for me to suppose that his widow would remain in her own home, among her own people. Tom was not 30 when he died, and I know she was very much younger. But one day when I was grieving, as mothers will, my dear, for my son, there walked in a little mite of a figure that I should have taken for a child, but for the heavy widow's draperies. She came straight to me, lifted her veil, and, looking out of a pair of baby blue eyes straight into my face, said:

"'I am Daisy, dear mother, Tom's widow. I am alone in the world, but Tom said he was sure if I came to you, you would be good to me.'

"I took her straight into my heart, the little, winsome darling, and I loved her as my own. So, my dear, if I tell you of my trials with her, do not think it was from want of love."

I was sure it was not, for the dear old lady's voice was full of tenderness.

"It was lonely for her for one thing," said Mrs. Craige, "for her mourning, and it was a deep-hearted sorrow, kept her secluded; and as there was no need for her to employ herself usefully, she began to plan delightful surprises for me. She was possessed by a very demon for fancy work. While she exercised it upon sofa cushions and footstools with distorted dogs and dislocated cats embroidered in Berlin wool upon them, I endured in patience, although my old-fashioned ideas were certainly amazed at the sums Daisy spent on materials. Tom had left her well provided for, and as she had no expense here, her pocket-money was a very handsome income. As I said I did not object to the poor little lonely child taking all the pleasure she could find in embroidering hideous designs on canvas, and putting the results in the most conspicuous places in the house, but this mild form of her mania soon gave place to the desire to excel in every species of work that came up to waste the money and time of idle women. This old house, which was in my husband's family before the revolution, is full of treasures endeared to us by age and association, and our sailors and travelers have added many a relic to the ornaments and furniture. The first piece of vandalism that I was expected to admire, and secretly groaned over, was the potichomanic transformation of a pair of Venetian glass vases that my son Henry brought from Europe for me. They stood in the spare room, and never was a servant allowed to touch them, the exquisite, fragile beauties! Imagine my horror when Daisy exultantly led me to the room and displayed her handiwork. My lovely vases! Inside of each one was pasted a colored landscape cut from paper, over which a garland of leaves was varied by bunches of grapes, currants, cherries, flowers, birds and butterflies. Then the inside was plastered with blue paint. What was on my tongue was never spoken, for the blue eyes danced with delight at my supposed pleasure, and how could I be cross to Tom's widow?"

"Could you never get it off?" I asked, pitifully.

"Never. My vases were ruined. The next really dreadful deed, varied by atrocities of minor importance, was Daisy's discovery of my great-grandmother's wedding dress, a white-brocaded satin that we cherished far more than any old gold, but which Daisy ruthlessly cut into pincushions, embroidering each one and producing them triumphantly for a Christmas surprise. The girls were here—my girls—and my sons and their wives, and there arose such a howl as sent the wee blue-eyed mite to my arms in sheer terror. It was at that party that Willie Norman, whose brother is my Kate's husband, first saw Daisy. Long after the others had forgotten the pincushions, I saw Willie in a corner with Daisy, evidently consoling her. Two babies, together, my dear, though Willie is the dearest fellow! He came over quite often after that (they live at Fernwood, ten miles from here), and was kind enough to discover all sorts of latent talent in Daisy for decorating everything within reach. What I suffered from the decalcomania fever never can be described."

"I can imagine it. I had five sisters, and we were all smitten," I said. "What started as a beauty to cover unsightly spots soon became a frenzy! My mother came to the rescue at last and scrubbed away every inch."

"Willie brought her all the designs to be found, and carried the china she decorated (?) to be baked! Oh, my dear! The tea set made in Canton for Mr. Craige's grandmother's wedding present, with gilt monograms, and quaint handles to the cups, all different, was decorated, carried off by Willie, the horrible pictures all baked in and then presented to me for a birthday gift. I could not tell you half, no, not the twentieth part of the dreadful destruction. You can see, dear, that the house is finished inside with oak, to which not a brush had ever been touched, but years of rubbing, waxing and polishing have made it like glass. We pride ourselves, I assure you, upon our oak finish."

"And well you may," I said, "I have admired it more than I can tell you."

"Then you can imagine my consternation when I came home, after a fortnight's visit to my daughter, Marian, to find Daisy was painting the doors of the dining-room in panels. Willie had put on the first coat all over two doors—white paint, my dear! The panels were in red, blue, green, yellow—each a different color—and upon each a different design. Such spiky grass! such stiff leaves, that looked as if they were cut out of tin! such wooden birds, that looked as if their wings were held apart with a skewer! such staring roses, flaring with red paint—"

"'Such an altogether!'" I quoted, as the dear old lady paused.

"I groaned in spirit, but consoled myself by hoping that some new fancy would spare my grand old oaken doors. And my hopes were verified. Daisy tired of panel painting when the dining-room was finished, and last spring I had the doors planed down. They are a little thinner, but will polish up to the old tone in time.

"But after that day Willie was more cautious about her undertakings, though more devoted to her. She had been with me then nearly three years, and she had recovered from her first grief. She was very young, not 20 when Tom died, and looking like a little girl. So when she shyly ventured upon a white dress and some blue ribbons, and came down to tea looking frightened at her own temerity, I said, lovingly:

"'What a prety dress, and how pretty my Daisy looks in it.'

"You don't think it is forgetting Tom, do you?' she asked, with quivering lips.

"'I am quite sure you will never forget Tom,' I said, kindly, for she was trembling all over, 'but I am as sure that Tom loved you too well to wish your young life spent in mourning, even for him. It is natural for you to be joyous, dear, and nothing gives me so much pleasure as to hear you sing or see you smile.'

"She had been wearing her blue ribbons for some months when the scrap-picture and card-collecting lunacy started. I bore my portion of the martyrdom as valiantly as I could. I saw a priceless old Chinese jar that was an heirloom plastered over with butterflies and grotesque heads, and varnished, and did not faint; I endured patiently when a costly Japanese vase, a present from a dear old friend, shared the same fate; but at last the traditional straw was laid upon the camel's back."

I looked at the dear old face, lighted by a half comical twinkle of the eyes, and wondered where such angelic patience could have given way.

"One of my boys," said the old lady, "my Paul, was a surgeon in the army, and from every voyage he brought me treasures that became sacred when he sailed away again and never returned. Amongst these doubly precious possessions was a sandal-wood table, a masterpiece of carving, with a top polished like marble. The heavy center-leg branched off into feet of carved leaves, supporting the center, which was carved into exquisite garlands of flowers, twisted round a tree trunk. But the beauty of the wood itself was the only ornament of the flat top.

"The table stood in a small room off the parlor that was seldom used, unless we had company, and I never imagined it in any danger until, coming rather unexpectedly from a walk, I saw Willie's head and Daisy's bent over it. I hurried into the room. Oh, my dear! the whole beautiful top was covered with hideous advertising cards nailed on with brass-headed tacks.

"'Oh, mother,' Daisy cried, 'don't come in! It is not finished.'

"'How dare you touch that?' I cried, and then cried like a baby. 'Paul's table!' I sobbed. 'You have ruined it!'

"It was the first time I had ever spoken harshly to her, and she was like a child.

"'Oh, Willie,' she said, 'she is angry, and I thought she would be so pleased.'

"Willie was equal to the emergency. He took her in his arms and cried, in great indignation:

"'It's a shame; Don't cry, Daisy! Oh, Daisy, be my wife, and you may nail scrap pictures on every table in my house.'

"Did you ever hear of such a proposal? Two babies, my dear. But they have been very happy, and there is not any aesthetic horror wanting in their home. Storks on one leg, reeds, sunflowers, lilies, dadoes and friezes. But there is a third baby now, nearly a year old. I expect to hear of that infant in classic costume, with a lyre in her hands, some day; but I can bear it. My responsibilities came to an end when Daisy ceased to be Tom's widow."—New York Ledger.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT;

The Mason & Risch Piano Co. L'td.

Beg to announce that they have assumed the Agency for Central and Western Ontario of the Pianos manufactured by Chickering & Sons, Boston.

It would be superfluous to make extended reference to the reputation of this famous house, or to the pianofortes manufactured by them. It is sufficient to say that for three quarters of a century they have occupied the position of absolute leaders in Musical Art manufacture, and their reputation was at no time greater than it is at present.

INTENDING PURCHASERS OF PIANO

Now have the choice in our warerooms of goods manufactured by the acknowledged leaders of the American and Canadian trade. The association of such Instruments as Chickering & Sons and Mason & Risch Pianos beneath one roof forms a unique combination.

AS TO PRICES!

Pianos of high artistic merit must of necessity cost more than poorer instruments, but there is no question of the direction in which true economy lies. As an evidence of this it may be mentioned that the first Piano manufactured by Chickering & Sons 73 ago is still in an excellent state of preservation, and Pianos made by Mason & Risch over 20 years ago scarcely show any sign of wear. RAILWAY NOTES.

Sparks From the Wheels—Cinders for the Eye.

New ties are being placed at the switch in front of the G.T.R. station.

Attention is again called to the danger of allowing children to play around the C.P.R. bridge. Half a dozen little youngsters, not ten years old, were noticed around it Saturday.

Mr. Thos. Osborne, formerly G. T. R. baggage master at the local station, who has been living in Napanee lately, with his family has gone to Vancouver, having accepted a position with the C.P.R.

The G.T.R. staff has some heavyweights on the local staff. Mr. Wm. Bunting tips the scales at 205 pounds, and Mr. Bert. Wallace at 220. They are not in it yet, however, with Engineer Bill and Conductor Bill.

The local G.T.R. station is turned upside down these days, as the place has been turned over to the housecleaners.

Mr. Wm. Hamilton, the popular G.T.R. engineer, says the Lindsay Watchman, has joined the list of riders of the silent steed, despite his 200 pounds avoirdupois. Friday last he was to be seen heading the procession down Kent street on a Cleveland wheel, and the way he pounded along would lead one to think he imagined he was sitting in his engine cab with his hands on the lever instead of the handle bars of the wheel, and headed for Port Hope with a full head of steam on. Mr. Hamilton rides his two-wheeled vehicle with almost as much ease and poise as he does his favourite engine, and passes over the ruts and crossings on Kent street, with no apparent inconvenience. It certainly speaks volumes for the famous Cleveland wheel.

NEW RATES IN FORCE.

Railway Changes on Flour, Grain, Sugar and General Merchandise—All Effective at Once.

Several new freight tariffs have been issued by the railroads on merchandise to and from Toronto, which are of interest to merchants here. The Grand Trunk railway put into effect Saturday morning a special rate on flour and grain in carloads, straight or mixed, minimum weight 30,000 pounds. The new rates are from Toronto to Cobourg, inclusive; from Agincourt to Cobbyville, including Lakefield and Madoc and stations south to Whitby and Port Hope, from all these places to Ottawa, Valleyfield, Montreal and intermediate stations at 12½ cents per 100 pounds. The rate to Quebec, Point Levis, Three Rivers and Doucet's Landing is 18½ cents, both rates exclusive of Montreal terminals.

A rate on general merchandise has also been made between the Cleveland and Port Stanley boat line, the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway and the Grand Trunk system to Canadian points. The rates on first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth class merchandise per 100 pounds are as follows to these points from Cleveland: Toronto, 44c, 37½c, 28½c, 19½c, 17c, 14c; Montreal, 64½c, 56c, 43c, 30c, 25c, 21½c; Montreal, for export, 56½c, 48½c, 37c, 25½c, 21½c, 17½c; Ottawa, 64½c, 56c, 43c, 30c, 25c, 21½c; St. John, N.B., and Halifax, N.S., $1.04, 86c, 67c, 49c, 38c, 31½c.

A new joint freight tariff on sugar is also issued by the Intercolonial and Grand Trunk Railways from Halifax, Dartmouth and Moncton via Chaudiere Junction, as follows: To Toronto, 24 cents; Sarnia and Windsor, 28 cents; London, 27 cents; Ottawa, 20 cents; Kingston, 22 cents; Hamilton, 25 cents; Guelph, 25 cents.

APRIL WEATHER NOTES.

There is nothing unusual to record, in a meteorological sense, of the month just passed. It had not the abnormally high temperature of April, 1896, nor the small amount of rainfall that characterized that month. It was simply an average April in almost every respect.

The average daily temperature of the month was 42.06 degrees. This is 2 degrees above the average, and 6 degrees less than April of last year.

The warmest day was the 22rd—72 degrees. On the 17th April, '96, 82 degrees was reached, and for almost a week summer weather was experienced, vegetation making exceptionally rapid strides. The coldest day of the past month was the 29th, when there was a fall to 16 degrees. This frost is reported to have played havoc with the fall wheat.

Rain, to a greater or less extent, fell on 15 days of the month to a depth of 1.82 inches. This is about the usual amount for the month. In April of last year the rainfall was 1.08 inches.

Snow fell on 3 days to about 2 inches, but melted almost immediately.

Thunder was heard for the first time on the 5th. There were thunder storms on the 22rd and 25th.

Frogs are said to have given their opening chorus on the 18th—a few days later than last spring. Swallows were first noticed on the 22rd.

PROVINCIAL DAIRY SCHOOL CLASSES.

NOTES OF THE WORK OF THE PAST SEASON.

A Letter From H. H. Dean on the Subject—What the School Can and Cannot do for Students—Graduates Have the first Pick of all Dairy Vacancies.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

The session of 1897 at the Provincial Dairy School closed March 6th. The cheese made by the students on practical examination during the last two weeks of the term, were scored by Mr. A. T. Bell, of Tavistock, on April 26th. The butter was scored soon after being made. Both butter and cheese scored up well considering the quality of milk which was available for the work.

The class was not quite so large as in other years, the students on the whole being very attentive and anxious to learn. Nearly all those who were not engaged for the season obtained positions before and since leaving the school. Several have gone to the United States. We would prefer to keep them at home, but American firms are usually willing to pay the higher wages for first-class men and we can scarcely blame the boys for going where they can do best. A number have gone to Manitoba and the Northwest for scientific dairy practice in our Western Canada. The results of their work will appear when the history of dairying in the new Canada is written. We still have two or three good cheesemakers, one or two good buttermakers, and a few young men, who would make capable assistants in either cheeseries or creameries, if any desire such. Already our students who have gone from the school this year, have been asked to address dairy meetings, and they are responding well. This is as it should be. Canadian dairying, in order to reach the topmost rung of the ladder, needs the brightest intellects, the smartest workers, the tidiest and cleanest men and women that our country can produce. In what other field is their opportunity for more effectual use of Canadian talents than in the queendom of the cow? Our students write back of the good work done for them at the school. One in far-off British Columbia, says:—"Before I took the dairy course my work was drudgery—now it is a pleasure. My butter has never gone begging for a customer. I wish that the school was nearer and I would take another course." Another student who is in charge of a large dairy in the Empire State writes that he now appreciates the sound teaching and practice which he received at the Provincial school.

TO LAY THE FOUNDATIONS

WHAT THE SCHOOL CAN DO FOR STUDENTS

1. It raises them above the drudgery of work. They live in a realm where labour is pleasure and where their mind continually rewards the body.

2. Students receive a practical and scientific training that is more valuable than rubies or fine gold. The trained mind unerringly guides the hand in the production of golden butter and palatable cheese.

3. The unseen foes of the dairyer are as naught to them, for their ways are understood and their efforts come to naught, whereas the unskilful man is continually in trouble, because of these small enemies, which harass them, yet are not seen.

4. Student who have taken the full dairy course are safe from frauds and quacks, who find a profitable field in the ignorant dairymen. How many sharks there are who devour the hard earnings of the unthinking man!

5. The best positions are open to the brightest men of experience who take the course. We are being continually asked to recommend some one for various places of trust in the dairy world. This feature will grow as becomes more important and scientific skill is more needed. We do not claim to be able to find "snaps" for all students, but our graduates will always have first choice so far as there may be openings.

6 Lastly, the school can give a training to cheese and butter makers which will enable them to produce a better quality of dairy goods, thus obtaining better rewards for their labour and for the labour of the man who produces the milk—the makers raw material.

WHAT THE SCHOOL CAN'T DO FOR STUDENTS.

1. It cannot put brains into them. The instructors and lecturers can train and develop the natural intellect by having the co-operation of the students, but the raw material must be supplied for them to work on. It is not reasonable to suppose that every student at a dairy school is a bright and shining light, any more than such is true of students in any college.

2. The Dairy School cannot make students work if they are lazy and are determined to avoid work. In every class there are a certain number who dislike washing pails, cans or vats, and who "skip" scrubbing the floors, bandaging the cheese, etc., as often as possible. To such we say and of our time to attend an instruction where practical work counts for more than anything else.

3. The instruction of the school cannot regenerate naturally untidy, slovenly, dirty men or women. We may improve such, but cannot wholly reform them. Ancestry and early training have most to do with tidiness and cleanliness. These are beyond the control of a college.

4. The school cannot make students like dairying. Unless a person has a natural liking for the dairy cow and her products, he or she ought not to engage in the dairy business. This love for the work is an important factor in a successful dairyman.

Many would like to share in the benefits of a dairy course. Make arrangements now to attend the class of 1898 in January, February and March. To the ladies we have this announcement to make—a lady instructor will be put on the staff for next year and you are specially invited to enter the Home Dairy Course.

THE HORSE SHOW CLOSED.

Lieut.-Governor Kirkpatrick Was Present on Saturday and Had a Warm Greeting—The Affair Was a Big Success.

Toronto, May 3.

The great Canadian Horse Show of 1897 is now a thing of yesterday, and as it fades into the past the memory of it will long linger in the minds of the thousands who participated in its delights. From artistic, social and sporting standpoints this year's show has proven a brilliant success, and there is no doubt that later, when the receipts of the exhibition are set over against the expenditures, there will be no cause to find fault with it for financial reasons either.

To the lustre of the two previous days' exhibitions Saturday's portion of the show added much. Despite the miserable weather the attendance both in the afternoon and the evening was surprisingly large. The feature of the day was of course the presence of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and Mrs. Kirkpatrick in the gubernatorial box. His Honor, accompanied Mrs. Kirkpatrick, Captain Kirkpatrick and Commander Law, drew up in his carriage at the main entrance to the Armouries at about 3.30 o'clock. On alighting the Government House party were received by Messrs. Stewart Houston, Edmund Bristol and Robert Davies, representing the Horse Show Committee, and before proceeding to the interior of the building Mrs. Kirkpatrick was presented with a handsome bouquet of roses.

On entering their box His Honor and Mrs. Kirkpatrick were greeted with tremendous applause, the Grenadiers band meantime playing the National Anthem. The Lieutenant-Governor is looking much heartier than would have been expected after the serious operation and the extended illness he has undergone, but he is probably not as strong as his ruddy appearance would seem to indicate. At any rate while in his box he occupied an easy chair brought up from Government House for his comfort, and the show seemed to tire him, for, after about three-quarters of an hour, he retired, accompanied by his wife. The exertion of returning the greetings of the many who welcomed him helped to wear him out, for, from the time they came in until their departure, His Honor and Mrs. Kirkpatrick were kept constantly engaged in shaking extended hands and acknowledging speeches of welcome.

Graced by the Governor's presence the show seemed to "go" better than ever, and everyone in attendance yesterday afternoon declared the function a brilliant one. The most applauded feature of the show was the gentleman's tandem driving contest.

PLENTY OF MONEY.

London Money Market Shows Favorable Features Owing to the British Budget and Peaceful Indications.

London, May 2.—The present condition of the money market, as compared with that of a week ago, shows money plentiful, and but little prospect of a change of rates. The stock exchange has greatly improved in tone now that it is seen that Europe is not likely to be plunged into a general war. The pacific utterances of the Czar, and of the Emperor Francis Joseph, during their recent interviews at St. Petersburg, have also had the effect of inspiring confidence; while a favorable British budget, showing the undiminished prosperity of Great Britain, justifies a renewal of investments. The result is that most of the markets show a distinct advance, the only gloomy spot being the Transvaal, particularly African mining securities, which have shown a further decline. On the other hand, Bulgarians have advanced six points, Turkish 1¼ to 3¼, Greeks 1, Italians 2. There is also a smart demand for Canadian Pacific, which has advanced 3½ on the strength of the new tariff. Americans, however, show but little improvement, and still take their cue from Wall-street. Central Uruguay has gone up 8 points.

A Prominent Lawyer Says:

"I have eight children, every one in good health, not one of whom but has taken Scott's Emulsion, in which my wife has boundless confidence."

RIDE A "MONARCH" AND KEEP IN FRONT.

"I have found the Monarch wheel delightful to ride, in fact I prefer it to all others."
LILLIAN RUSSELL.

So says all who will ride a Monarch wheel. The history of the Monarch is an interesting story—a story of success. The first year 150 wheels were made and sold, last year 50,000 wheels were marketed in every civilized country in the world. This year the capacity of their factory is taxed to the utmost, so great is the demand, 500 wheels per day is the present output. This growing success enables us to give still better value to our patrons. Our '97 Models are the nearest perfection of any wheel manufactured—the best the trinity of mechanical skill, excellence of material and the finest equipped bicycle factory in the world can produce.

The frame connection joints are steel drop forgings—flush throughout.

The Monarch patent crank shaft mechanism is by far the most simple and most effective in its working of any yet produced on any wheel.

Detachable sprockets, both front and rear.

No nuts or bolts to work loose, as wheels are fitted at saddle post and head, with patent clamp which does away with the annoyance and unsightliness of nuts and bolts.

5-16 inch balls used in all bearings—producing less friction than smaller ones.

And so on throughout the whole wheel, chains, hubs, saddles, wood rims and tires, the very best that can be bought for money and all fully guaranteed. The finish of the Monarch is unsurpassed for lustre and durability. All bright points are nickled on electro copper plate and the rest of frame is enameled Brewster Green, handsomely striped.

THE WAR TO GO ON.

Greek Ministers From the Front So Decide.

VERY HOT FIGHTING AT VELESTINO

General Smolenski Was in the Thickest of It and Had to Remain—Greeks So Fatigued That They Could Not Follow Up Their Victory—Crisis Approaching.

London, May 3.—The chief points of interest in the situation to-night are:

First, that the decision of the Ministers who have returned from the Greek frontier seems to be in favor of a continuance of the war; and, second, that fighting continued almost incessantly at Velestino from last Tuesday until Sunday, with the result that General Smolenski has been prevented from actually assuming his new duties as chief of staff.

As a further result the Greeks at Velestino have managed to retain their positions, but they are too much fatigued to follow up their success.

Altogether, 14 officers have been recalled from Crete to be sent on to Thessaly, and this also is a proof of the intention of the new Cabinet to continue the war. The movement is actuated by necessity. All the best officers are being sent to the front; nor is there any intention yet displayed to evacuate Crete.

The Turkish army is advancing in three columns on Pharsalos, while an additional column is operating in the direction of Volo.

As the Volo column could easily take Velestino in the rear, the Greek position is very precarious. This probably explains the retention of General Smolenski there, as it was natural to expect him to go to Pharsalos to assume the supreme command. Everything points to an inevitable retreat by the Greeks on Domokos.

Greek Mistakes.

London, May 3.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Arta says:

"One of the worst mistakes the Greeks have made has been the casual and intermittent character of the attack upon Prevesa. Its capture was essential if the Greeks meant business in Epirus. To capture so strong a place by the means adopted was quite impossible and now the opportunity is lost altogether. Instead of the desultory firing, which enabled the Turks to repair damage about as fast as it was done, the town should have been attacked with determination by the combined naval and military forces. Arta is now deserted; its wretched inhabitants living in the fields behind the town, many of them on the verge of starvation. Nothing is procurable in the way of food except a scanty and uncertain supply of bread. Women and children are suffering horribly with cold and hunger and to these tortures is added the dread of a Turkish attack at any moment."

The Crisis Approaches.

Athens, May 3.—The Cabinet remained in council from midnight on Sunday until after 7 o'clock this morning. It is evident that the crisis approaches.

Vassos Recalled.

Athens, May 3.—The Greek Government has recalled Col. Vassos from Crete. He will be replaced in command of the Greek forces in the island by Col. Stalkos.

WHAT IS THIS FOR?

Edhem Pasha Asking a Five Days' Armistice, So Report Says.

London, May 3.—A special despatch from Athens announces that Edhem Pasha has sent an officer with a flag of truce to the Greek headquarters, asking for an armistice for five days.

Another despatch from Athens says it is again reported that Bulgarian irregulars to the number of about 200 men have crossed the frontier into Macedonia.

They are Thoroughly Panic-Stricken.

Athens, May 3.—Advices from Arta say that the chief local authorities and about 100 inhabitants of that place have returned there. Panic, however, still prevails at Arta. All the stores are closed, and the military authorities are said to be contemplating further withdrawals of the Greek troops in that vicinity.

In the direction of Filippiada flames are visible.

An armed Greek priest has been attempting to restore the morale of the troops at Arta by preaching a crusade against the Turks in the public square.

GREEKS ARE NO GOOD.

They Flee Like a Lot of Sheep Without Any Attempt to Fight.

London, May 3.—The Times correspondent at Patras, giving further details of the fighting at Pentepigadia, notes the neglect of the officers to provide for the timely arrival of reinforcements, a matter so difficult in that wild section of the country, and proceeds: "When the Turks opened the attack I realized that their fierce onset might expel the mere handful of Greeks, but I did not realise that this one blow would throw the entire Greek army in Epirus into a hopeless panic, and cause the loss of all the positions gained since the opening of the campaign.

"Six thousand Turks scaled the mountain, covered as it is with bushes and rocks, and in the face of firing which was rapid and continuous. They lost heavily, in spite of the fact that two Greek guns were inexplicably removed from action shortly after the fusilade began. The Evzones fought bravely, but were compelled to retire.

"The rest of the Greek positions have been abandoned. There has been apparently no stand anywhere, and the whole army is crumbling up without firing a shot. We entered Kumusades with 3000 men, and then we descended the rough pass where for hours we met no one. The retreating and panic-stricken troops were far ahead. About midnight we and our mournful procession of villagers overtook the rout in the army road, crowded and in utter confusion, packed with a mass of humanity tumbling on through the darkness, without hurry and silently, for it was a strange panic that had seized the men, a sullen, unexcited, stubborn determination not to fight, but to press on toward Arta in a sluggish, irresistible wave. The officers, too, like their regiments, walked with gloomy and shame-faced expressions, quite unable to get their men in hand.

"At Kanopoulo Col. Botzari and his staff vainly tried to check the rout and to make a stand, but the mass, continually growing, kept rolling along. Presently there mingled with the troops the scared inhabitants of the villages on the line of defeat, who, fearing the vengeance for assisting the Greeks, were fleeing to Arta with their families and chattels, their cattle, sheep and goats, bellowing, bleating, trampling and killing each other, while the lurid glare of the burning homes behind reminded them all that they had lost."

A despatch to The Daily Mail from Paris says that 200 American volunteers for Greece have arrived there and gone on to Marseilles. They were all Greeks, and all wore ribbons bearing the inscription: "War, for victory or death."

The correspondent of The Times at Volo says: "Communication with Volo still remains uncut. Locomotives have pushed out a short distance towards Larissa, and they report that the line is apparently little damaged. The authorities are distributing rifles and bayonets to civilians indiscriminately, thus increasing the panic.

"The British warship Dryad has arrived here and reports that she sighted the main body of the Greek fleet off the Island of Skiatho."

The correspondent of The Standard at Constantinople says: "Said Eddin Pasha arrived at Janina Thursday night with seven battalions from Adrianople. Eighteen other battalions were expected on the following day. He intends to assume the offensive, and it is considered that the Greeks in Epirus have no alternative but surrender, with the Turks advancing from both Janina and Trikhala. Hafzi Pasha complained bitterly of the lawlessness and pillaging of the Albanians, and the palace council has therefore decided to distribute other regiments in that section."

The Morning Post's correspondent at Constantinople says: "An Imperial irade has been issued approving the telegram sent by the military council to Edhem Pasha, ordering him to advance with the utmost caution. This curious step is quite in accordance with Turkish methods. Such orders are of a nature greatly to embarrass the general in command at the front."

The Morning Post has a despatch from Larissa saying that the Greeks before evacuating the town seized the horses of the war correspondents, thus compelling them to go on foot.

The Daily Chronicle publishes a despatch from Pharsalos which says it is reported there that Osman Pasha has superseded Edhem Pasha.

A despatch to The Times from Pentepigadia, dated Thursday, says that the Greeks are arming the population of the district and have occupied Turkish territory, many villagers escaping through the Turkish lines and joining the ranks of the Greeks

Turks Occupy Karditsa.

Constantinople, May 3.—Word has been received here that a Turkish detachment from Trikhala has occupied Karditsa.

GREEK PRESTIGE GONE.

Evident Bungling in the Handling of the Troops—An Utter Rout.

London, May 3.—A despatch to The Daily News from Patras, on the west coast of Greece, and not far from Arta, dated Sunday, gives a most graphic account of the battle between the Greeks and the Turks at Pentepigadia, Epirus, and the retreat of the former from that place. It shows the rout and panic of the Greeks at Pentepigadia was as complete as the stampede which followed the fighting at Tyrnavos and the retreat of Larissa and Pharsalos, in Thessaly.

The Daily News' correspondent says: The net effect of the Greek retreat to Arta is that each army is now in the position which it occupied before war was declared, but with all prestige gone from the Greeks. The latter had held the hill near Pentepigadia on Wednesday evening against fierce Turkish attacks. The Greeks obviously needed to be reinforced, but, although considerable forces were near, no help was sent. On Thursday morning the Turkish fire was brisker and our guns on the crest of the hill, for some reason, were silent. The fury of the fire culminated at 3.30 p.m. The Turks' fire was easily distinguishable by reason of the sharper crack of the Martini rifles and it developed in the space of a quarter of an hour into the most terrific roar ever heard in any battle, diminishing to a fusilade in three-quarters of an hour. The Turks in the meanwhile were massing upon the slopes on our right front, preparatory to rushing the hill. Yet, our guns on the central hill were silent after 20 minutes and were withdrawn.

I asked a sergeant where the guns were going and he replied: "To a better position."

As a matter of fact they were being hurried back to Hanopoulo as fast as the mules could take them.

The Evzones on the crest of the hill made a gallant reply to the murderous fire and held out manfully, losing 100 men, until 5 o'clock, when cheers began to mingle with the roar of the Martinis. A moment later the Evzones tumbled over the crest, firing as they came, the Turks following and firing incessantly as the kilted men ran down the hillside. It only remained to make good our retreat.

The Turks continued to pour a smart fire at the Evzones. The latter eagerly responded, but it was obviously useless.

Then someone gave an order and the Evzones, with a groan of disgust, left their position and moved sullenly, though in perfect order.

The correspondent for The Daily News then describes the flight of the Greeks before the Turks. He then says: When I left Arta on Friday morning the Greeks had not a man left on the Turkish side of the River Arakphos. I have never seen men so demoralized for so small a cause. They had neither seen the enemy nor felt his fire, yet 11,000 men and 40 guns melted away. Had the Turks pursued the fugitives much farther, accompanied as they were by the peasantry, women and children and 30,000 sheep, besides cattle, the massacre would have been awful.

King George Has Spasms.

Paris, May 3.—An Athens despatch to The Figaro asserts that King George is suffering from cardiacal spasms, and that his physician insists that a change of air is necessary. A trip to the Island of Milo or to the Island of Syra is recommended.

THE MERCHANT SHIPPING BILL

Read a Second Time in the British House of Commons—It is to Apply to Foreign Ships Entering British Ports.

London, May 3.—In the House of Commons to-day the merchant shipping bill was read a second time. The object of the measure is to guard against insufficient crews, as well as unseaworthiness. As framed it was designed to apply to British ships only.

The President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Ritchie, in moving the second reading, announced that the Government had decided to make it apply also to foreign vessels entering British ports. He said he did not believe this could give a reasonable ground of complaint to any foreign Government, as the Board of Trade would enforce the measure with the least friction and the greatest consideration possible.

Mr. Bryce, Radical member for South Aberdeen, acquiesced in the extension of the application of the measure, but warned the Government of the difficulties ahead in the possibility that foreign nations would retaliate.

HE TRUSTS IN GOD.

President Kruger Holds Out the Olive Branch and Will Celebrate Victoria's Jubilee Year.

Pretoria, May 3.—On the reopening of the Raad to-day, President Kruger, in a speech prepared evidently with great care, asked the Raad, as a token of sympathy with Queen Victoria and appreciation of her long and glorious reign, to declare June 22, Diamond Jubilee Day, an official holiday in the Transvaal. He said that, in spite of unfavorable influences, the South African Republic continued to enjoy friendly relations with all foreign powers. After asking that provision be made for the election of his successor next year, he said the Government intended to submit proposals for the facilitation of traffic and the promotion of trade with adjoining states, and he added that the Government hoped as soon as possible to submit the report of the commission appointed to enquire into the conduct of the Transvaal mining industries, with a view of adopting such measures as might seem desirable.

The Government, he added, recognized that the general welfare of the country went in hand with the prosperity of its mining interests. In conclusion, President Kruger said: "It would have been a cause of heartfelt joy if the Government could give a frank assurance that the political horizon was unclouded, but we must gratefully admit that many light-giving points can be discerned, and we are animated with a firm resolve and an earnest wish to do what lies in our power, while guarding our independence, to break up the clouds which seem to menace the whole of South Africa, and to make the way clear and light, by means of peaceable co-operation. We look to the future cheerfully and fearlessly, trusting to God, who holds the fate of all peoples in his hands, and relying also upon your hearty support and the righteousness of our cause."

AWFUL FIRE AT PITTSBURG.

Tremendous Destruction of Property in the Heart of the Smoky City—Loss Two Million Dollars.

Pittsburg, May 2.—The immense wholesale grocery house of C. Jenkins & Co., on Liberty-avenue, is in flames at midnight, and will probably be a total loss. Several buildings in the immediate vicinity are now burning. The losses will be very heavy.

Later—The fire has extended across the avenue, and is now eating up Joseph Horne & Co.'s dry goods store and W. P. Grier & Co.'s china house. With Horne & Co.'s building went those of Mayer's glove house, Horne's office building, containing a large number of offices, with P. Grier & Co.'s china store, S. Naman's carpet house and the Methodist Episcopal publishing concern, all on Penn-avenue; on Liberty-street, Huck's cigar factory and Hall Bros. The Jenkins Building is a total loss, and the walls have fallen in. Estimates of the loss are only guesswork as yet, but it will reach at least $2,000,000.

HE WAS 87 YEARS OLD.

Mr. Norman Leonard Strong of Port Hope Passes Over the Line.

Port Hope, May 3.—One of the oldest and most respected residents of this town passed away on Saturday in the person of Mr. Norman Leonard Strong. Mr. Strong was 87 years of age and leaves a widow to whom he had been married for upwards of 60 years. They were the oldest couple in this vicinity.

The untimely death of a promising young man must also be recorded. Mr. Hugh Patterson died here yesterday of consumption at the age of 26. He was the only remaining son of Mr. Stanley Patterson, and was very popular with the young men in town. He was employed for some years in the Toronto Bank and gave promise of a very bright career.

The grim destroyer has also carried off a victim in the person of Mrs. Lydia Scott, relict of the late James [illegible] at the age of 74 years. She was the daughter of the late William Barrett, [illegible]

Sour

Stomach, sometimes called waterbrash, and burning pain, distress, nausea, dyspepsia, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This it accomplishes because with its wonderful power as a blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla gently tones and strengthens the stomach and digestive organs, invigorates the liver, creates an appetite, gives refreshing sleep, and raises the health tone. In cases of dyspepsia and indigestion it seems to have "a magic touch."

"For over 12 years I suffered from sour with severe pains across my shoulders, and great distress. I had violent nausea which would leave me very weak and faint, difficult to get my breath. These spells came oftener and more severe. I did not receive any lasting benefit from physicians, but found such happy effects from a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I took several bottles and mean to always keep it in the house. I am now able to do all my own work, which for six years I have been unable to do. My husband and son have also been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla—for pains in the back, and after the grip. I gladly recommend this grand blood medicine." MRS. EDITORIAL NOTES.

In delivering the budget speech in the British Parliament the Chancellor made a comparison of the past year with the finances of 1896-97. Then the revenue was £89,500,000 ($262,500,000), and now it is £113,000,000 ($560,000,000). Then 71 per cent. of the revenue was derived from taxes on commodities, now only 44 per cent. of the revenue is derived from such taxes. Then the total of foreign trade was £125,000,000 ($625,000,000) now it is £738,000,000,000, ($3,690,000,000), over three and a half thousand millions of dollars. Our monarchy was never so valuable to the country as now. We are the best and cheapest monarchy in the world. In 1896-7 it cost the nation £534,000 ($2,670,000), now it costs the nation £135,000 ($625,000). The total exchequer expenditures for the current year was estimated at £101,104,000 ($105,520,000), and the revenue is estimated at £103,360,000 ($516,800,000), showing an apparent surplus of over £1,500,000 ($7,500,000). But in view of the increase in the strength of foreign navies, the Government intends to add half a million to the naval estimates already presented.

THE VILLAGE FATHERS.

Discussion on the Advisability of having a Water Service.

At the meeting of the Ashburnham Council last evening, Reeve Adams occupied the chair, and the following members were present: Councillors Smith, Rutherford, Morgan and Johnston.

COMMUNICATIONS

were received and referred as follows:

From the town clerk of Peterborough re the new arrangements for fire protection. On motion of Councillors Morgan and Rutherford, the matter was referred to a committee of the whole to deal with the matter.

From the Peterborough Water Co., re placing mains, etc., in the village for fire protection. It was decided to procure a plan of the village, showing the mains and hydrants that would be placed, and submit it to the Water Co.

From the Three Rivers Iron Works, offering to send an engineer to submit plans and estimates for the laying of water works.—Referred to a committee.

Moved by Councillor Smith, seconded by Councillor Johnston, that the clerk subscribe for the Municipal World for 1895.—Carried.

Moved by Councillor Rutherford, seconded by Councillor Morgan, that the Court of Revision be held on May 20th and that the clerk notify those interested.—Carried.

Moved by Councillor Morgan, seconded Councillor Smith, that Constable Fitzgerald be appointed truant officer at a salary of $10.—Carried.

The following tenders were received for street watering for the whole district:—Wm. Frith, $200; O. Buck, $200; Geo. Lipsett, $210; Thos. Mitchell, $200; J. McAuley, $200; Wm. Allen, $197; G. A. Cook, $150; Jas. Valois, $170.

—Moved by Councillor Morgan, seconded by Councillor Smith, that the lowest tenderer, Joseph Valois, be awarded the contract at $170, he to provide proper security that the work will be done to the satisfaction of the street inspector.

Moved in amendment by Councillor Rutherford, seconded by Councillor Johnston, that the tender of O. Buck (namely, $100 for watering Elizabeth street as far as the town hall) be accepted.

The original motion was put to the council and carried.

The Street and Bridge Committee will inspect the streets and bridges next Saturday afternoon.

The Council then adjourned.

THE ALADDIN OVEN.

Even Chuck Roasts Made Tender and Appetizing by Its Use.

A well-known writer on financial and economical subjects, Edward Atkinson, has been striving for years to teach the people that they can make of an ordinary box an oven which will cook meats and other food much better and more cheaply than is done with a stove. He calls his apparatus the Aladdin oven. He derived his theory from the Norwegian cooking box, says the American Agriculturist. The principle of the Aladdin oven is that heat may be conveyed by a lamp to the inside of a box so as to cook food. The box should be made of incombustible, non-heat-conducting material. It should be lined with metal. A given temperature can be maintained for any length of time; herein is the secret of this method of cooking. An inner oven made of sheet metal, with shelves, and in other ways corresponding to the common oven, should be placed in the outer box, as shown in the accompanying illustration. There is no opening between the lamp and this inner oven, the heat circulating around the outside, and the products of combustion escaping by way of the same opening through which the heat passes. When the heat is kept at 300 degrees to 350 degrees Fahrenheit, no offensive odors are generated and no injury is done to the food. Meats, fish, vegetables, custards, etc., may all be cooked in the same oven at the same time without either imparting any flavor to the other or losing any of its own special flavor or juices.

THE ALADDIN OVEN.

One of the chief recommendations of the Aladdin oven is its economy. Cheap cuts of meat can be made tender and appetising. Mr. Atkinson states that a piece of beef, commonly known as the chuck roast, costing 10 cents per pound, or the shoulder, costing 5 cents per pound, put into this box and allowed to remain three hours, will be taken out as tender and nutritious as the best tenderloin, and of the most excellent flavor. Food cooked in this slow oven is far more nutritious than when done in a range, as the juices are preserved. Food can be put into the oven at night, the lamp being then lighted. In the morning the cooked food is taken out, ready for consumption, without waste. This apparatus can be made at home, or the so-called Standard oven, with its complete equipment, can be bought for $30.

Ants as the Guests of Plants.

All insects producing nectar may be regarded, as a whole, as ambulatory nectaries. They are more powerful causes of attraction to ants than the extrafloral nectaries. Scattering themselves nearly all over the surface of the plant, they determine the coming and going of the ants, which indirectly protect the whole plant. Yet the damage done by the "ambulatory nectaries," which extract the nutritive juices from the plants and cause deformities in their organs, can hardly be said to be compensated by the incidental and uncertain protection which the ants may afford them in other respects.

The ants which are really protective to plants are not those which obtain their food (indirectly for the most part through the aphides) from the vegetable kingdom, but those which are really carnivorous. These are numerous in temperate climates, and their usefulness to agriculture and sylviculture is incontestable. Thus the field ant is a great insect destroyer. A nest of this species is capable of destroying as many as 28 caterpillars and grasshoppers a minute, or 1600 an hour; and such a colony is at work day and night during the pleasant season. In the arid plains of America the beneficient work of ants is revealed in the ilex of verdure around their hills.

There are plants hospitable to ants, which furnish them shelter, and often food, within the cavities of which the instincts of the ants prompt them to take their abode. This is the case with several ferns, among them the Polypodium nectariferum, the sterile fronds of which bear nectaries on their lower face, and are, moreover, of a shape favorable to sheltering the insect.—Appleton's Popular Science Monthly.

The Wonder of the Age.

DEAR SIRS,—I must honestly say that I have tried your valuable medicine B.B.B. for the disease called prairie itch, and have found this remedy to be the wonder of the age. I took only three bottles and to my great satisfaction was completly cured. I can highly recommend it to all who suffer from any skin disease or impurity of the blood.

Life was a Burden.

Four Years of Agony and Misery.

A Marvellous Cure by Paine's Celery Compound.

Three Bottles Suffice to Make Mr. Finter Well and Strong.

The hopeless, despairing, and all who imagine they are lost, because the doctors have failed, should rejoice to know that Paine's Celery Compound fully meets the worst cases, and never fails to restore lost health.

It is no vain or idle boast when the declaration is made that Paine's Celery Compound cures when all other means fail. To-day a grand army of men and women in our own Canada can vouch for the truth of the statement made.

As a proof that Paine's Celery Compound cures in the darkest times of disease and misery, we give the testimony of Mr. F. Finter, of Ottawa, Ont., who was saved at almost the eleventh hour. He says:

"I consider it a duty to acknowledge the great good that I derived from your valuable remedy, Paine's Celery Compound. For four years I endured terrible agony and misery owing to pains in my head and chest. Life was a burden to me, and no living mortal could describe my sufferings. I was treated by doctors, and tried many patent medicines, but nothing gave me relief until I used your Paine's Celery Compound. I thank God for the day it was brought to my notice in the Ottawa papers. I have taken three bottles of the medicine and to-day I can truly say that I feel like a new man. I feel certain that if the suffering people of Canada would only try Paine's Celery Compound they would be cured. I will recommend this remedy whenever I have the opportunity, as it is the best ever given to sufferers."

Captain Sweeney, U. S. A., San Diego Cal. says: "Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy is the first medicine I have ever found that would do me any good." Price 50c. Sold by John Nugent, 359 George Street.

A VERY DULL DAY.

Members of the Commons Had a Night Off.

THE ATTENDANCE WAS VERY LIGHT

No Financial Aid to the Toronto Exhibition—The Bindery Twine Contract—Building of Quebec Bridge—The Matter of Appointments Taken Up by Sir Charles Tupper.

Ottawa, May 3.—(Special.)—In the House to-day the proceedings were quiet. There was a small attendance of members, and, on the motion of Mr. Laurier, a holiday was taken and there was no evening session.

One of the first questions asked was in regard to a dismissal from the Intercolonial Railway. The question was put by Mr. Gillies for Mr. Casgrain, and the answer of the Minister of Railways shows how the majority of these were effected. Mr. Blair said that Pierre Begin had been dismissed from the position of section foreman on the Intercolonial Railway for active and offensive partisanship in the late election. There had been no investigation, the Minister having acted simply on the representations made by Dr. Guay, the member for Levis.

Mr. Wallace asked if the Government intended to make a grant towards the Dominion Exhibition in Toronto this year.

"I have reason to believe," replied Mr. Laurier, "that the secretary of the exhibition has been informed by the Minister of Agriculture that the Government did not see its way clear to give any financial aid to the Dominion Exhibition this year."

Replying to Mr. McLennan (Glengarry) the Premier said that the total cost of establishing the binder twine factory in Kingston was $40,280; that there were employed in 1894 in the manufacture of twine four officers, aggregate salaries $3620, and about 40 convicts; in 1895, four officers, salaries $3620, and the same number of convicts; in 1896 three officers, salaries $2800, and 40 convicts. He said further that the sale had been made this year to the Hobbs Hardware Company of London, the sale including the actual output up to Aug. 1, an approximate quantity of 500 tons, but, as the goods have not yet been put on the market, the price cannot be made public at present. The terms and conditions of sale are cash on delivery.

Mr. McLennan further asked if the Government had taken precautions to stipulate with the purchaser that the consumer will be protected in getting the twine at the same price as formerly sold by the Government.

The reply was that no such conditions had been exacted, the Premier adding that "the keen competition of the past few years and the lowering of the duty in 1894 have made this unnecessary." As to whether the Government would continue the manufacture of twine, the question was under consideration, the Premier said.

In answer to a question by Mr. Casgrain, Mr. Laurier said the Government was not aware that, according to Le Soleil, Mayor Parent of Quebec declared he had a letter from Ottawa, giving assurance that the building of the Quebec bridge would soon begin. Neither was the Premier aware that Mr. Parent had received any such letter. There was no change in the Government's policy in that regard.

Sir Charles Tupper moved for a "copy of schedule B, showing recommendations of the Treasury Board as submitted by report of council to His Excellency the Governor-General on July 6 and 7, 1896, and intended to be approved by him, laid upon the table of the House last session, with a statement of the action taken by the Government on each of these appointments, as made by the said order-in-council, approved by His Excellency, or, where no action has been taken, the reason for such a course."

In the debate of last session Mr. Laurier had referred to him (Sir Charles) as an office-grabber, but no public man in Canada could better vindicate himself from such a charge than himself. Mr. Laurier in the previous debate had claimed that when the constitution of the Senate was under consideration at Confederation it was agreed that both political parties should be equally represented on the floor of the Senate. As one of those present at the Confederation conferences he (Sir Charles) could state that the policy agreed upon almost unanimously was that it should be a Senate nominated for life, and that in regard to first appointments due regard should be had to a fair division of the seats between the two great parties. After that first division of the seats there was to be no limitation as to the power or policy of the Crown to make appointments, so that on that point Mr. Laurier's statement was incorrect.

Mr. Laurier, dealing with the last point mentioned by Sir Charles Tupper, conceded that it was understood at Confederation to be the rule that both parties should be equally represented in the Senate, but if that were the case then could it not be consistently argued that the rule should always apply? He quoted from Pope's "Life of Macdonald" to show that Sir John himself held that view. It was but reasonable to suppose that if the rule held good for the first appointments it must be good for all time to come. Practical exigencies had led to Sir John acting differently. With reference to the motion for papers, there was no objection to it passing. Those papers would show that except in a few cases the Government had respected all the recommendations of the late Government which were approved by His Excellency.

Mr. Foster pointed out the impropriety of officer who had been regularly appointed, being kept on the tenter hooks for eight or nine months without any notification as to whether they were to fill the offices or not. Referring to the Senatorial appointments, he reminded the House that at Confederation a coalition Government was in power in Canada, and that that was the reason why a division of the seats in the Senate was agreed upon. The original appointees, as a result, nearly all came from the old Legislative Council.

After a few observations from Mr. Davies, the motion passed.

Mr. Martin moved for papers in connection with proposed extensions to the P. E. I. Railway. He was discussing the matter at 6 o'clock, when the debate was adjourned and the House quit work for the day.

Chinese Envoy Chang, who is in quarantine at William's Road, B. C., and who is en route to London to represent the Emperor at the Diamond Jubilee, does not like the idea of being fumigated, and has appealed to England. The Deputy Minister of Agriculture said that Chang had cabled Mr. Chamberlain and that the Colonial Secretary had cabled the department to show as much consideration as possible for the distinguished visitor. The department here telegraphed Dr. Watt, superintendent of quarantine, to show whatever consideration he could towards Chang, but at the same time act in the public safety.

Collectors of customs have been notified that Mr. Fred L. Jones, having been appointed acting chief preventive officer of customs, they are instructed to give him every facility for the due performance of his duties, and assist him in the suppression of smuggling. Such customs officers at ports and outports are are required so to do by the chief preventive officer, and all officers at preventive stations in Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island are to report weekly to the chief preventive officer, Ottawa.

Canadian publishers, after wrestling for years with the copyright question, are now in trouble over the tariff on books. To-day there is in town a deputation consisting of Messrs. Dan A. Rose, J. T. Johnston, James Murray, Toronto, and J. R. Barbour, Georgetown, who complain of doing away with the specific duty of 6 cents, and making a 20 per cent. ad valorem duty, which, they say, will fill up the country with cheap books and deprive Canadian printers of work.

H. G. Lamothe, who was superannuated from the State Department under the late Government, has been appointed assistant Clerk of the Privy Council, the apointment to date from

In the case of Peterson v. the Crown Cork and Seal Company judgment for plaintiff was given for default of pleading to the claim to set aside certain patents for non-fulfilment of the provisions of the 37th section of the Patent act. J. F. Smellie for Peterson.

In the case of the Queen v. Bolond et al. Newcombe, Q.C., D.M.J., moved for judgment in default of plea to information claiming certain excise duties from plaintiffs. Judgment was given as prayed, with reference to registrar to find the exact amount due.

Military men are all agog over the appointments on the staff of the jubilee regiment. There will be required for the contingent two majors, four captains, eight or ten subaltern officers, an adjutant and a quartermaster, with a surgeon and probably a paymaster.

THEY BEAT THE STORM KING.

An Austrian Brought a Battery of Artillery Into Play and Broke Up Hailstorms.

London, May 3.—A special despatch to a morning paper gives an account of a hail dispersing experiment at Annaberg, Austria. An Austrian owned extensive vineyards situated on the southern slope of the mountains, a locality often visited by destructive hailstorms. At first he tried galvanised wire netting, but this was too expensive, and he decided to install a battery and test the plan of causing explosions to drive off the hailstorms. He erected six stations on prominent mountain summits, commanding a territory about two miles in extent. Each station sheltered ten mortars and a corps of volunteers handled them. The practical test is thus described:

"Threatening black clouds made their appearance on the summits of the Bacher Mountains. At a given signal all the mortars were discharged and the continuous detonations in a few moments caused a sudden reaction in the movements of the clouds. The cloud wall opened up funnel-like; the mouth of the funnel began to rise in the form of consecutive rings, expanding gradually until all the clouds scattered and entirely disappeared. No hail nor even a sudden downpour of rain fell. The same experience was gone through six times last summer and has without a single exception proved successful.

A child was cured of croup by a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A neighbor's child died of the same dread disease, while the father was getting ready to call the doctor. This shows the necessity of having Ayer's Cherry Pectoral always at hand.

SHIPMENTS INCREASED.

Nearly Two Thousand Tons More Last Week Than the Previous One.

Chicago, May 3.—Eastbound shipments last week were 54,089 tons, against 52,655 for the preceding week and 65,830 for the corresponding week of last year. The roads carried tonnage as follows: Michigan Central 5804, Wabash 4283, Lake Shore 8202, Fort Wayne 7292, Panhandle 7029, Baltimore and Ohio 3193, Grand Trunk 3720, Nickel Plate 5785, Erie 6418, Big Four 2176.

Lake shipments for the week were 48,128 tons, comparatively small, being due to the heavy gale which prevented boats from leaving the port for four days.

DUST AND GRIT CANNOT GET NEAR THE BEARINGS OF RED BIRD BICYCLES.

THE SECRET of the Red Bird's phenomenal success as a bicycle lies in the fact that it is the most carefully constructed bicycle sold in Canada to-day. The best skilled mechanics and choicest materials are employed in its construction.

By no means the least important feature of a bicycle are the bearings. Red Bird bearings are so constructed that they are absolutely dust proof. As a result of their perfect construction Red Birds are wonderfully easy running, stand hard wear without end, and scarcely ever require repairs.

The front wheel bearings are all ground out perfectly true before being pressed into hub, and are afterwards submitted to a thorough test.

Front Hub.

Unlike most wheels, each wheel is trued on its own bearings, not temporary ones used just for fitting them up.

The balls of the bearings are kept in place by ball-retaining washers, which are very easily removed should it be necessary to take out balls. This only becomes necessary in case of accident, however, for each bearing has a double dust proof cap that proves a most effective preventive to dust or grit.

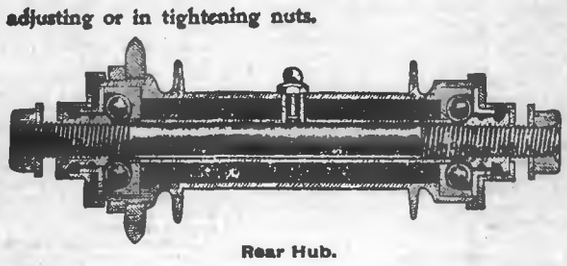
The dust cap on left side of front wheel also acts as a cone adjuster. This renders the adjusting of the bearings exceedingly easy. By loosening one nut the bearings can be adjusted with the fingers, which, in addition to being a much more sensitive means of adjustment, does away with the necessity of carrying an extra kit of tools or calling in the services of the expert repairer

Red Birds are fitted with patent ball oilers that are convenient, simple and effective. In oiling it is merely necessary to push ball to one side with the point of the oil can, inject oil, and when the can is removed the coil spring underneath brings the ball back into its original position. The oil goes straight through the hub by way of the direct conveying oil tube, to the bearings. The oil is thus prevented from going all around the hub before reaching the balls, as it does with most wheels. Many wheels run hard and are taken to the repair shop to be doctored just because the bearings do not get properly oiled.

'97 Oiler.

Half Section of '97 Oiler.

In case it is desired to remove front wheel from forks, two wrenches are not necessary, as with other bicycles, for the cone pin is prevented from turning by a dowel in front fork that is fitted in a slot in front pin. Without this the cone pin turns in adjusting or in tightening nuts.



Rear Hub.

The eleven 3/16 balls used in front hub form a perfect circle, and when properly adjusted run so easily as scarcely to be heard.

The rear wheel is similar to the front wheel in being absolutely dust proof and very easily adjusted. More spokes and larger balls are used, however, as the greater strain comes on the rear wheel.

Throughout every part of the Red Bird, modern mechanical skill and great care in construction is evident. The most modern of bottom brackets, the strongest pedals, the stiffest frames, all go to make the perfect Red Bird. A post card will bring our handsome '97 Catalogue.

THE "MAJESTIC."

The Name of the New Steamer that Replaces the "Mary Ellen."

For the past twelve or fifteen years the good steamer "Mary Ellen" has splendidly served the thousands of tourists and cottagers who have enjoyed the pleasure of a steam on her over the beautiful waters of Stony Lake. But time and wear and use had their effect upon her, and her enterprising proprietor, Mr. P. P. Young, bound to have the best of its kind, determined to overhaul the "Mary Ellen," to bring her up to the requirements of the trade. So thoroughly was the work entered upon, and so complete was the change that there is very little of the "Mary Ellen" left. Her keel is the only part of the original steamer that remains, otherwise she has been built anew from stem to stern, new hull, 16 feet beam and 80 feet in length. Her new boiler will furnish steam to send the "Majestic," the name of the new steamer through the limpid water of the lakes at the rate of from twelve and fourteen miles an hour. The "Majestic" is resplendent in white attire throughout. The deck arrangements will be the same as those of the Mary Ellen. The handsome interior fittings are entirely new and of the most modern and approved style. "The Majestic" is to all intents and purposes an entirely new boat, with the exception of the keel, and she will be ready for running in a few days. With the pleasant experience of the past, under Mr. Young's capable and courteous management of the "Mary Ellen," the travelling public will look forward with delight to enjoying the comforts and conveniences of the snow white "Majestic." It is the intention of Mr. Young to give the cottagers a free trip at an early date, due notice of which will appear in the papers.

PERSONAL.

Mr. John Carnegie is East on a business trip.

Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., is in Ottawa for a day or so.

Mr. A. Cutting is leaving town to take up his residence in Toronto.

Mrs. H. G. Friel, of Ottawa, is in town, the guest of her sister, Mrs. H. Phelan, 336 Rubidge street.

Mr. A. D. Starrock, one of the leading baritones of Canada, now in Ottawa, has been engaged to sing at the Jubilee Concert in the Opera House, on June 18th. Mr. Sturrock has been heard with delight in Peterborough, and his re-appearance will be heartily welcomed. He is working on some of the latest first-class jubilee songs which he has just imported from England, and when they are rendered at the Jubilee concert with Mr. Sturrock's finished style and heroic baritone, the audience will be delighted. Rev. Mr. Armitage is very fortunate in securing Mr. Sturrock's services, but not more fortunate than those who will have the pleasure of hearing him on June 18th, for Mr. Sturrock is an ideal interpreter of patriotic music with his rich, robust voice and soul stirring style.

THE BOARD OF TRADE ON THE TARIFF.

MANUFACTURER'S COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The Changes in the Tariff Might Seriously Interfere With the Working of a number of Town Industries, and the Government is Petitioned to Consider a Readjustment.

A special meeting of the Board of Trade was held in the town clerk's office on Monday evening.

There was a fair representation of members present.

In the absence of the President, Mr. John Carnegie, in Ottawa, Mr. Peter Hamilton occupied the chair.

The minutes of the previous meetings were read and approved.

Mr. Fair said that in accordance with the recommendations of the Manufacturer's Committee, he would submit the following report. Representations had been made to them that the new tariff seriously interfered with some of the most important establishments in Peterborough—the Wm. Hamilton Company, the Bridge Works, Peterborough Lock Company and the Auburn Mills, and he thought the report which he would present, should be adopted by the Board:

To the Members of the Peterborough Board of Trade:

In accordance with the instruction given them your manufacturers' Committee beg to report recommending the passage of the following resolution:

"Whereas it appears that several of the changes proposed by the tariff now under consideration in the House of Commons are calculated to seriously interfere with the working of a number of the manufacturing industries now carried on in the town of Peterborough, this Board desires to recommend to the favourable consideration of the Dominion Government the representations now being made to them on behalf of such industries and to express the earnest hope that they will see their way to such a readjustment of its several items as will enable such industries to continue in operation."

They would also recommend that a copy of said resolution be forwarded by your secretary to the Premier, the Ministers of Finance and Trade and Commerce and the Controller of Customs.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

R. FAIR,
Chairman of Committee.

Peterborough, May 3rd, 1897.

The report was unanimously adopted.

NEW MEMBERS.

Mr. R. S. Davidson, and Mr. J. W. Garvin were elected members of the Board.

The secretary, Mr. H. S. Macdonald, called the attention of the Board to a large Brooklyn manufacturing establishment, with a capital of $300,000, that was looking for a site in Canada, and the matter was referred to the manufacturer's committee, with a request that prompt action be taken to lay before them the numerous advantages Peterborough possesses for manufactury.

The bylaws of the Board were amended by adding a Finance Committee to the list of committees, and the chairmen of the several committees and the chairman of the Board were elected members of the Finance Committee.

The matter of the application of the Bell Telephone Company to the Governor-General in council for power to increase their rates was discussed, and upon motion the secretary was instructed to have the petitions, which have already been prepared in opposition to their requisition, properly signed by the citizens and telephone subscribers, and that they be forwarded to James Kendry, M.P., to be presented to the Governor-General-in-Council.

The question of cheap fares on Wednesday and Saturday was discussed and referred to the Railway Committee.

Mr. Dumble explained the arrangements that the citizens' Jubilee Demonstration Committee were making for the proper celebration of her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee, which may be read in the town council report.

The Board then adjourned.

ALAN MACDOUGALL DEAD.

Demise of the Secretary of the Canadian Institute.

Very general regret will be felt throughout the city, says the Globe, at the announcement of the decease of Mr. Alan Macdougall, C.E., which occurred on Friday, April 23, at Exmouth, in the south of England, The feeling, though of regret, will not be of great surprise, as it was generally known that Mr. Macdougall's health was failing, being obliged, about a year ago, to go to England for his health. Mr. Macdougall was well-known in Toronto, where he came from Scotland, his native country, about twenty years ago. He was the third son of the late Col. Macdougall of Edinburgh. He quickly took a high place in his profession, and was for a number of years Assistant City Engineer, retiring eight or ten years ago, since whence he had been a consulting engineer. He rendered a number of important services to the city, among them being valuable assistance in connection with some extensive experiments which were made with floats to determine the direction and velocity of the currents in the lake. He also made a valuable report upon the northern "ridge" lakes as a source of water supply from Toronto. He took a deep interest in all matters relating to sanitation, and was also interested in the good roads movement, having been one of its earliest patrons. He was deeply interested in the Canadian Institute, and was secretary of that institution for a number of years.

Mr. Macdougall frequently visited the old country, and in particular spent some time in Scotland in 1880, and took an active part in opposing Mr. Gladstone in the famous Midlothian campaign, being a strong Conservative in politics. Mr. Macdougall married in this country, his wife being a daughter of the late Dr. McCaul, for many years the venerated President of Toronto University. He leaves a widow and four children, two sons and two daughters.

The deceased will be remembered in Peterborough as having prepared the plan of sewerage under which the town is now supposed to be working.

THE LATE MR. SAMUEL SMYTH.

A Nonagenarian Passes Peacefully Away.

Last night Mr. Samuel Smyth, of Stewart street passed away at the advanced age of 92 years. His sister died four years ago at the age of 96 years. The deceased gentleman was born in Limerick county, Ireland, and came to Canada about fifty years ago. He first settled in the township of Ops, Victoria county, subsequently, in a short time, removing to Emily. From there he removed to Otonabee, where he lived several years. While there he was united to Miss Bennett, who died about a year ago. Mr. Smyth came to Ashburnham, where he lived ten or twelve years. He then returned to Otonabee, and about two years ago came to live at 205 Stewart street, town. In religion Mr. Smyth was an adherent of the Anglican communion, and in politics he was a Liberal. He leaves behind him five direct descendents: Mrs. Wilson, Norwood; Miss Christina Smyth, Toronto; Mrs. Joy, Toronto; Mr. John Smyth, Rochester; and Miss Sarah Smyth, who resides at home in town.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from the family residence, 205 Stewart street, town, to Little Lake cemetery.

PETERBOROUGH CHEESE BOARD.

The Magnitude of its Operations—What it Means For Peterborough.

Fortnightly during the season the Peterborough Cheese Board meets in Peterborough, and very few perhaps think what importance to the town is to be attached to these meetings.

In 1896 the value of the cheese sold on the Peterborough Cheese Board amounted to about $250,000 ($256,752). This is about the average annual amount for the past fifteen years, therefore the grand total paid for cheese through the Peterborough Cheese Board would amount to the large sum of $3,750,000. What this means to Peterborough, may be seen from the fact, that the great bulk of this large sum was distributed in this county and practically spent in Peterborough. Considering the importance of Peterborough as a cheese producing and cheese selling district, it would be a fitting recognition of this importance to arrange to have the next annual meeting of the Dairymen's Association held in Peterborough.

TOWN COUNCIL'S REGULAR MEETING.

BUSINESS LIGHT AND AN EARLY ADJOURNMENT.

The Jubilee Demonstration Committee Ask for a Grant to Assist in Celebrating the Day—Report of the Work to be Done During the Year in Wards No. 3 and 4—The Matter of the Control of the Police.

The regular meeting of the town council was held last evening with very little business to consider on account of the meeting held last week when the slate was cleared off. The members present were the Mayor and Messrs. LePlante, Robinson, Denne, Neill, Davis, Dawson, Cobb, McWilliams, Meldrum, Graham and White.

COMMUNICATIONS

were received and referred as follows:

From the Salvation Army band, asking for their usual grant of $50.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

From E. B. Edwards, stating that the taxation of costs was concluded by the taxing officer at Toronto, on April 30th, re. Peterborough and North Monaghan, and that the bill was taxed at $295.67. By the agreement the town is to pay 85 per cent. of the costs, amounting to $251.32. The solicitor asks that a cheque for this amount be issued to Edmison & Dixon, solicitors for the township as early as possible—On motion of Councillors Denne and Dawson, the cheque will be issued at once.

From E. A. Nott, H. Lacheur and J. Richardson, asking permission to erect a boathouse on the vacant land north of the C.P.R. bridge, and south of Dalhousie street.—Referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.

From the Underwriters Association asking if any further steps have been taken towards correcting the deficiencies in the fire appliances—Referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

The treasurer submitted a statement showing the receipts during the month to be $1,263.90 and the payments $8,068.17. On the 30th April the town account at the Ontario Bank was overdrawn $10,228.75.—Received.

From A. L. Grover and other residents on Bolliver street asking for the grading and water-tabling of that thoroughfare.—Referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.

From the Peterborough Water Co., stating their willingness to place a hydrant on the corner of Lock and Romaine streets and one on Crescent street and asking when the councillors of No. 1 Ward can be seen to arrange location of the latter.—Referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Accounts were received from and referred as follows to the Finance Committee:

THE MARKET COMMITTEE

through its chairman, Councillor Denne, reported and recommended

That no action be taken on the application of Mr. H. P. Kennedy for the remission of fine for buying pork on the market before eleven o'clock.

Adopted.

Councillor Neill reported that as many of the citizens were anxious to postpone the payment of their taxes until the first of May, he had decided, after conferring with the other members of the Court of Revision, not to hold a meeting of the court until after the first of May.

Councillors Dawson and Davis moved that the chief of police be authorized to arrange what streets the police shall patrolled.

Councillors McWilliams and Denne moved in amendment that the matter be left in the hands of the chairman of the Committee on Police Supervision, and that he arrange what streets shall be patrolled and at what hour.

The motion was withdrawn and the amendment declared carried.

STREETS AND BRIDGES.

Councillor McWilliams, chairman of the Street and Bridge Committee, presented a report from his committee, on the repairs, etc., needed in Wards Nos. 2 and 4 this year. He stated that a report on Wards Nos. 1 and 3 would be submitted at a later date, after the committee had gone over the ground in those wards. The report recommended the following work:—

New sidewalk on the north side of Smith street, from Inverlea street to Water street 4 feet wide.
Stand pipe platform at Anson street.
Crossing at east Communication Road.
Culvert opposite No. 939 River Road.
Widen east grade east side of River Road.
Old culvert cleaned out and repaired.
Crossing at power house two planks wide.
Crossing on Benson street, near W. Hales house.
Culvert at the corner of Antrim street, and Aylmer street two culverts.
Grade Smith and Rubidge streets.
Crossing at Smith and Reid streets.
Grade down top of hill near Blackwell's, on Benson street.
Make plans and estimates for footbridge at Barnardo Home.
Make plans and estimates to remove bridge on Donegal street.
Make profile to grade hill on Cedar street.
Make profile to grade hill on Walnut street, and grade hill on south side.
New sidewalk south side of Cedar street. 80x8 wide.
Open ditches on Weller street, north side, from G. Morrow's west to foot of hill and make culvert entrance into Park street drain.
Put in culvert at Douglas' on Gilmour street, and make entrance into Park street drain.
New sidewalk on Park street, south side, to connect old ones from King street north.
Renew sidewalk from Fairweather's gate to Babb's lane.
Grade up Park street and water-table from the C. P. R. south to little Mission church.
Repair and grade Crescent street where required.
Grade College street and put in an approach to bakeshop.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS.

Repair and renew all sidewalks where required.
Renew crossings where required.
Pay special attention to draining all streets.
Grade and metal such streets as directed.

Adopted.

Mr. D. W. Dumble was heard on behalf of the Jubilee Demonstration. He urged that the town invite the military and local branches of the different societies to co-operate in full regalia in holding a grand procession in the morning and also to furnish funds to procure a band for the occasion and defray the expenses of decorating the town. He asked for the adoption of such a scheme and the appointment of a committee to aid in carrying out the details. The council might also, by proclamation, request the citizens to illuminate their residences in the evening.

On Councillor Meldrum's motion, it was decided that the matter be referred to a committee of the whole council and that the Demonstration Committee be notified to attend.

The matter of the bicyclists riding on the streets, and the Historical Society grant will come up at the same meeting.

Councillor McWilliams asked the members of the council to meet the members of the Historical Society, and look over Inverlea House to night at seven o'clock.

This was agreed to and the council will meet again in committee of the whole on Thursday evening.

Councillor McWilliams brought up the matter of the "cave ins" over the sewer on George and Water streets.

He stated that he had authorized the street inspector to have these filled up but to keep a separate account of the work, as he was undecided who was to pay for such occurrences. He had seen Mr. Edwards since and received a letter from him, stating that in his opinion Contractor Bogue was liable for any expense incurred in remedying the damage.

The Engineer was instructed to notify Mr. Bogue of the state of affairs.

On motion of Councillors McWilliams and White, the Street Inspector was instructed to procure gravel for use until the next meeting of the council, at the usual rates.

On motion of Councillors White and Meldrum, Mr. Rehill was authorized to supply the town offices with ice for the season.

The council then adjourned.

THE VETERANS OF '66.

They Meet and Elect Their Officers for the Year.

The drill shed was the scene of a reunion of the Veterans of '66 last evening, when the Association met to elect its officers for the year.

Mr. A. P. Poussette, Q.C., was appointed chairman of the meeting, and Mr. J. D. Collins secretary. The following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Lieut.-Col. H.C. Rogers.
President—A. P. Poussette.
Vice-President—Lieut-Col. J. Z. Rogers.
Captain—T. A. S. Hay.
Lieutenant—H. Rush.
Sergt.-Major—John Irwin.
Sergeants—Wm. Logan and D.H. Holmes.
Secretary-Treasurer—J. D. Collins.
Executive Committee—Geo. Brown, Wm. Anthony, David Breeze, Geo. Stethem, H. W. Watson.

The executive committee was authorized to procure suitable badges for the occasion.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the receipt of a communication from eleven Lakefield veterans, expressing their wish to become members of the Association.

The secretary-treasurer, Mr. Collins, wished it to be understood that to constitute a member in good standing, the fees must be paid before the 24th of May.

The meeting was concluded by the singing of the National Anthem, as provided by the constitution.

SPORTING PASTIMES.

Wheeling and Other Items of Local and General Interest.

LACROSSE.

The lacrosse Club held a fine practice last night—the first of the season. There was a large turn-out, and from last night's showing, both teams will play good fast lacrosse this year. Next practice Wednesday evening. A good attendance is requested.

THE WHEEL.

The town council meets the bicyclists on Thursday evening to confer with them regarding the rescinding of the bylaw forbidding the riding of wheels on the sidewalks. A large delegation of bicyclists should be in attendance and the speakers chosen before the conference begins.

The Central School yard is an excellent place in which to learn to ride, as the grade appears to be just about right.

ST. JOHN'S ADJOURNED VESTRY MEETING.

PROCEEDINGS OF AN INTERESTING MEETING

Various Favourable Reports Presented and Dealt With—Other Items of Interest.

The adjourned meeting of the Vestry of St. John's was well attended last night in the school house.

Rev. E. V. Stevenson occupied the chair.

In presenting the clerical report for the year Mr. Stevenson stated that so far as appearances would indicate the work of the clergy during the year had been attended with good results. The services as a rule had been well attended. There had been 77 celebrations of the Holy Communion. The number of communicants at Easter had not been as large as last year being 383, as against 409 last year. This was to be regretted as communicants were evidence of spiritual growth. Last June his Lordship the Bishop had confirmed forty-two candidates. There had been 51 baptisms, of whom nine were adults. There had been 12 marriages and 19 burials. Services had been regularly conducted at the Nicholls Hospital, the Protestant Home, and occasionally at the jail. During July and August there had been services at Chemong Park. Regretful reference was made to the departure of Mr. Carl Smith and a reference to the excellent work of his successor, Rev. W. L. Armitage, was heartily applauded.

Reporting in reference so the Sunday School, Mr. Stevenson said there were 21 teachers, 4 officers, and an average attendand of 150, not including the Bible classes. Sunday School work was much assisted by the boys' department of St. Andrew's Brotherhood, whose services in keeping up the attendance were much appreciated. Of the teachers, seventeen were females and four male, and the need was for more interest in the Sunday school on the part of the male members of the congregation. Every Sunday the lack of room was impressed. The choir under the leadership of Mr. Owens, was working well and faithfully. During the year $20 had been expended for music.

ST. JOHN'S MISSION.

Rev. Mr. Armitage reported that so far as his knowledge went, the conditions were satisfactory. There had been twenty-eight celebrations of the holy communion. Altogether 587 had communicated—an average of twenty-one, an improvement over the last year, though the Easter communicants were not as many as last year. The Sunday school work was very encouraging. There were eighteen teachers—one male—and four officers, and very faithful work had been done. He was glad to report this evidence of growing interest. There was a good attendance. There were 200 pupils enrolled—sixty-five in the infant class alone. Finances sufficient to meet expenses, while other places had to make appropriations to help Sunday Schools. The Women's Auxiliary was prospering—the meetings were well attended and the members worked together together harmoniously and energetically. The Girl's Guild was also prosperous and hard working, with good retults. In June a Boys' Brigade was formed—present membership over fifty. From his experience he felt very much encouraged. All worked well, and the speaker hoped to see progress demonstrated by addition to the building. (Applause.)

Miss Errett, secretary presented the report of the Women's Auxiliary as follows:

The membership is 64. Ten meetings have been held during the year with an average attendance of 17. Weekly sewing meetings have been held and three bales of clothing have been sent to Sandy Lake mission, Saskatchewan diocese and Marksville, Algoma, of the value of $84.42. The visit of Mrs. Broughall was mentioned. The work of the Auxiliary is steadily growing and greater interest is being manifested in mission work. The treasurer's statement shows that including a balance at the beginning of the year of $17.78, the total receipts were $343.77, and there was expended for various purposes $293.24, leaving a credit balance of $50.53.

The report was adopted and the thanks of the Vestry was tendered the ladies for the faithful work of the past year, the motion being carried with applause.

Mrs. Sherwood presented the report of the Church Guild, showing that the duties of the guild had been well and regularly performed. Though there was a credit balance the guild requested the churchwardens to make a small grant.

The report of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew showed the great help this organization was to the clergy. Personally addressed invitations to the church had been left at hotels throughout the year, and the members had held, or assisted in, services at the hospital, etc., and had also assisted in the Sunday School.

Master Archie Hagel reported from the boys department of the Brotherhood. The work had consisted of looking up Sunday school absentees, visiting sick members and bringing boys to church services. There had been organized a Boys' Brigade and the churchwardens had been assisted in distributing notices. The only cause for regret was that the chapter had not enough work.

Mr. Dennistoun testified to the cheerful help that had been supplied the church wardens by the boys.

Miss Halliday, reporting for the King's Daughters, detailed the work done in comforting the sick and distributing charity. Fifty families had been assisted, not including the Christmas donations. Altogether $120 had been disbursed in the shape of food and clothing, besides a bale to Rev. E. H. Hartley's Mission, and a motherless child had been supported the past winter, a room had also been furnished in the Y.W.C.A. Home. The record of work was ahead of last year.

Master Percy Clarke reported a membership of 45 for Boys' Brigade. There were weekly meetings and weekly drill. The work of the brigade was very well done.

The chairman referred to the retirement of two officials from Sunday school work—Mr. Walkey, who had retired as lay superintendent, and Mr. A. L. Mudge, who had left the town.

The election of Messrs. W. B. Bamford and A. W. McFadden, as assistant church wardens—at the Mission—was confirmed.

Mr. Dennistoun was appointed to prepare the Year Book for printing.

A cordial vote of thanks was given to Mr. P. Campbell who had represented the church on the Town Charity Board and Mr. Stevenson referred to the fact that the system had worked well and better relief had been extended. Mr. Bamford, representative for the Mission, was also included in the vote of thanks.

On motion of Mr. Long votes of thanks were heartily passed to the Chancel Guild (to whose credit the church wardens were instructed to place $25), the Decoration Guild and to the Mission Band.

Before concluding the meeting Mr. Stevenson read a document that had been inscribed in the parish records, stating that on May 1st, 1897, Messrs. Harry Long and F. R. Yokeome had planted on the church grounds, six feet from the edge of the terrace and in front and to the east of the church, an elm tree, to be known as the "Victorian Elm," and on the third of May, Rev. R. V. Stevenson, and Messrs. Harry Long, John Butcher and Wm. Leugh had planted in a similar relative position to the terrace and on the west side of the church an oak tree, grown on the grounds, to be known as St. "George's Oak." Both were planted as living and growing memorials of the Diamond Jubilee year of her Majesty the Queen.

When you are weak, tired and listless, you need to enrich and purify your blood with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

PRESENTATION TO REV. F. H. HARTLEY AT SOUTH BEACH.

A Number of his Parishioners Bade him Farewell on Tuesday Last.

Tuesday evening, the 27th of April, was the occasion of a very pleasant gathering at South Beach House, where Mr. and Mrs. Allan had invited a number of mutual friends to bid farewell to the Reverend F. H. Hartley, who is leaving for Toronto shortly. Amongst those present were the Rev. G. Warren and Mr. F. J. Tate, Lakefield; the Rev. A. Graeme, Mr. Jones, Miss Purser, Miss Pope and Mr. J. Purser, Buckhorn; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey, Burleigh; Mr. and Mrs. A. Kearney, Mr. J. Kearney, Mrs. R Heard, Mrs. A. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilson, R. Pammet, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Pammett and Mr. Giles, of Young's Point.

Mrs. Allan, with her usual kindness and hospitality had provided a sumptuous repast for her guests who did ample justice to the good fare.

After tea Mr. Allen, in a few appropriate words, called upon the Rev. G. Warren, the Vicar of Lakefield, to read

THE FOLLOWING ADDRESS:

YOUNG'S POINT, April 27th, 1897.

To the Rev. F. H Hartley, Church of England Mission Priest of the South Burleigh, Buckhorn and Young's Point Mission:

REV. AND DEAR SIR,—For more than two and a half years we, the members of the Church throughout the mission have profited by your ministrations, and within that period you have given substantial evidence of your devotion to the church and to our spiritual welfare. It has been due to your labours that churches have been built at Haultain and Buckhorn, church buildings acquired at Young's Point, Stockdale, Lakehurst and Deer Bay. Besides this many have been added to the church, and cared for in the interest of their souls; Sunday schools have been established for our children and friendly and temperance societies for our young people.

We feel that through the will of God and the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ your self-sacrificing labours have enabled many to recognize the true position and office of the church of England as a branch of the one Holy Catholic and apostolic church, and now that your are about to leave, we now desire to express our sense of loss at your departure and to present you with a watch as a token of our gratitude and love, praying that God will bless you continually in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Signed on behalf of the members of the church in South Burleigh, Buckhorn, Young's Point, Stockdale, Lakehurst and Deer Bay.

Mr. Warren in the course of his remarks said that with the present company and with very many more who were not present he had to express his regret at the removal of Mr. Hartley from the South Burleigh and Buckhorn Mission. Very valuable work had been done in the neighbourhood, not only for the church but for individuals, and as Mr. Hartley had made so many friends, so there would be very many who would miss him. He sincerely hoped and indeed felt sure that Mr. Hartley would not fail to make as many friends in his new sphere of work, nor to interest people in his work who were not members of the same holy church.

He was also anxious to know whether the work would suffer materially when Mr. Hartley had left.

A beautiful and costly gold watch furnished by Messrs. Clarke & Gibson, of Peterborough, was then presented to Mr. Hartley by Miss Purser of Buckhorn. The ladies then sang the beautiful and affecting hymn entitled, "God be with you."

Mr. Hartley said that he hardly knew how to thank his many friends for this kind expression of their hearty good will. The past two weeks had been a very painful experience to him—to say good bye to so many whom he had learned to love as much as his own father and mother and brothers and sisters.

During his incumbency of the South Burleigh Mission he had worked hard and always for the salvation of souls and the increase of Christ's kingdom, and it had been his care to attend to the spiritual and temporal needs of the people in his charge. It had been his aim to be an instrument for good to people of all classes and creeds and he was only sorry that more people outside the church had not asked his help. He did not think the Mission would ever have a priest who would work harder and more willingly than he had done, though he felt sure that another might be more successful. He would never forget the South Burleigh and Buckhorn Mission, and looked forward to seeing his many friends again before long.

Mr. Jones said that on behalf of the Buckhorn people he could say that while they were very sorry indeed to part with Mr. Hartley, still they had no intention of allowing the work to fall after he had gone. He hoped the Bishop would send a competent priest to supply the vacancy.

Mr. Allan, on behalf of Young's Point, said that Mr. Hartley would be badly missed in the neighbourhood, but the church was gaining ground and he was sure all would do their utmost to advance the cause they all had at heart.

Mr. Hartley once more thanked those present for their great kindness and many expressions of affection and good will, and especially Mr. and Mrs. Allan, who had been so very kind.

Mr. Hartley, we understand, has been appointed chaplain to the Sisterhood of St. John the Divine, in the diocese of Toronto, in succession to the Rev. J. C. Roper, who has been appointed Professor of Dogmatic Theology at the General Theological Seminary, New York. Mr. Hartley will also assist in the parish and church of St. Thomas, Toronto. We also understand that the new incumbent of the mission will be the Rev. Dr. Mockridge, Canon of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, assisted by the Rev. A. Hamond Graeme.

TURNING GRAY
AND THREATENED
WITH BALDNESS
The Danger is Averted by Using
AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. Hearing Ayer's Hair Vigor highly spoken of, I commenced using this preparation, and was so well satisfied with the result that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good, natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HAIGHT, Avoca, Neb.

HOW TO HAVE ROSES.

EVERY GARDEN SHOULD CONTAIN THESE BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS.

The Method of Procedure to Attain Success in Rose Culture Small Cost if the Planter Is Guided by Intelligent Knowledge and Enthusiasm.

I have often asked the question: "Why have you no roses?" "Oh, my soil is far too light and all rose growers, when writing, say the soil must be a strong clay loam." True, roses do best in such soil if well drained. A few years ago some friends from London happened to call on me at Delaware one fine morning when I had about seventy rose bushes in full bloom, says a writer in The Canadian Horticulturist. The first word spoken was, "We did not know it was possible to grow such roses on soil so sandy and poor as we know yours was; how do you manage to get such roses?" By applying every fall a good coating of cow manure, leaving it on the surface till the spring, then dig it in with a fork, and before raking the ground apply bone-dust till the ground is fairly white all around the bushes, prune the bushes as soon as the buds begin to open. By doing this every year I find my bushes growing stronger and giving me plenty of fine roses, but no one can have good roses without manure, and a rigid system of pruning; also care must be taken to allow no insect pests to get the upper hand, for if the foliage is destroyed the whole plant receives a severe shock. A few words about small roses or "bantlings," of which a critic says: "One honest, 2-year-old, pot-grown rose is worth 50 of the baby roses sent out by mail." He must not forget roses are like men, in that both must be babies at the starting point. Now, I know that many persons, when reading a catalogue they see a lovely picture of roses, and they see 2-year-old plants quoted at $4.50 per dozen. "Oh, I would like a dozen, but I cannot afford it," and so on year after year, and no roses.

During the last 25 years I have grown many roses, and as a rule always buy small plants. My plan is to buy one dozen plants, for which I pay $1.00. I get them in May, and plant them in a bed in the kitchen garden where I know the ground is rich, about 20 inches apart each way, keep the ground free from weeds and loose till November. As soon as you see any buds forming, take your knife and cut the branch off about three inches below the bud, by so doing you will find you have by November a fine lot of stocky bushes.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS
FOR WEAK PEOPLE.

At all Druggists. Price 50 cents per Box, or 3 for $1.25. Sent by Mail on receipt of price. T. MILBURN & CO., Toronto.

In the spring as soon as the ground is fit for work, dig your holes in your flower border and take up each bush with a shovel with as much earth as will remain on the roots, and see that the earth is made solid round the roots then with a sharp knife cut back all growth to within six or eight inches, and if your soil is good you may be sure of good roses. Last May I planted out four dozen baby roses, and every one grew, and I feel confident that they will outgrow any pot-grown plant because they will receive no check in moving. So friends, for a little care and trouble for one summer you can have roses at a very small outlay, only get your plants from some reliable florist and have them come by express.

CANADIAN CLIMBERS.

Some Hardy Roses That Will Cover Any Unsightly Old Thing.

Where is the devotee of Flora, says The Canadian Horticulturist for April, who does not long for an arbor, porch, or trellis, on their own grounds adorned the summer long with clusters of handsome roses? There seems to be a desire in the heart of every rose-grower for varieties of this description. Thousands of Canadians every year buy everblooming, climbing roses from Southern florists; and thousands are disappointed because they do not survive the chilly Canadian winters. The florists are generally much abused in consequence, but it should be remembered that each firm covers a wide range of territory with its catalogues, and it is more than likely that the varities described in those catalogues as hardy are quite so with a vast majority of those who buy from them.

Hardy, climbing roses of fine quality and color are certainly one of the additions to the "Queens of Flowers," which the future holds in store. It appears to be but the matter of a little time till such varieties shall be obtained, for never before have the efforts of professional hybridists, in this line, been so fruitful; and never has there been so many promising new varieties upon the market. Excepting some recent introductions of which we cannot yet speak with certainty, we think the following review includes all the best known hardy climing varieties:

Baltimore Belle, Prairie Queen and Gem of the Prairie head the list for hardiness. They are old, it is true, the first two varieties being raised at Baltimore in 1843; but they will undoubtedly bear more frost than any later introductions. Baltimore Belle bears pale blush flowers, often white. Prairie Queen, rosy red, sometimes marked with white. Gem of the Prairie, rosy red, the only one of the three that has a fragrance. Greville (or Seven Sisters), color blush, tinged and striped with various colors; the flowers are borne in clusters of seven or more. It is decidedly tender at Hamilton. Mary Washington, a variety of uncertain parentage. It is said to have been raised by George Washington, and to be still growing in the old garden at Mount Vernon. It is a rapid grower and a free and constant bloomer. Flowers pure white, globular in shape, and fragrant; would be of great value were it more hardy, but we have seen it, when unprotected, freeze more severely than some of the Tea roses. Those who give it sufficient protection are rewarded by great quantities of elegant flowers, that amply reward them for their trouble.

Caroline Goodrich, a well-formed flower, rivalling Gen. Jacqueminot in color; though it winters well sometimes, it lacks that degree of hardiness possessed by Prairie Queen and other prairie roses.

Crimson Rambler, the new climber from Japan. It grows well, winters well, and blooms grandly. The flowers are not large, but the huge clusters in which they appear, render this no defect; the color is rich glowing crimson. Promises to become a permanent favorite in this country.

Empress of China; this new variety has many good points to recommend it. The growth is wonderfully rapid, bears most freely and constantly, flowers that resemble a tea rose in shape; the color is light red or pink. Though we cannot yet speak of its hardiness from experience, there seems to be no cause for uncertainty about it. The introducers frankly state that it has stood 16 below zero, without injury.

Climbing Captain Christy, Cl. Jules Margottin, Cl. Victor Verdier and other climbing forms of Hybrid Perpetual varieties are largely planted in Britain, but there tendency to winter-kill to within a short distance of the ground, and the fact that they flower but once in the season, render them unpopular here.

Climbing LaFrance and Cl. Meteor; these originated as "sports" from the dwarf Hybrid Tea varieties of the same names. There is no occasion to look further for finer, sweeter-scented climbing roses than these; but one must not expect the canes to live, where the wood of the dwarf varieties are injured, for they are identical with the parent variety in every way, except that the canes grow much longer. However, the quality of their flowers, and constant blooming habit, entitle them to the most elaborate protection the gardeners' art has devised.

Marechal Neil, Glorie de Dijon, Cl. Malmaison, Cl. Perle des Jardines, Cl. Hermosa and other climbing Teas, stand the winter on the Pacific Slope (B.C.) with little or no protection, and will winter outside here on the Niagara Peninsular, if well protected. When uninjured by the cold they make a glorious display all summer. Roses of this class should not be wrapped or covered too early; the first frost simply assists the ripening of the wood.

Attractive Women.

Why is one woman attractive and another not? The most admirable and attractive thing about an attractive woman is her womanliness. Everybody admires a womanly woman. She must have health, of course, because without it she would lose the brightness of her eyes, the fullness of her cheeks and her vivacity. Real health must mean that a woman is really a woman. That she is strong and perfect in a sexual way, as well as in every other. That she is capable of performing perfectly the duties of maternity. Some are born with what is called "constitutional weakness." Those who do not enjoy perfect health, need only take the proper precautions and the proper remedy to become perfectly well and strong. Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription will cure any derangement of the distinctly feminine organism.

HER BODY PETRIFIED.

The Corpse of Mrs. Ella Ireland Found Turned Into a Substance Like Stone.

Brockton, Mass., May 1.—Last autumn Mrs. Ella Ireland, the wife of a well-known Brockton man, died after a short illness of acute gastritis. Her body was buried in the family lot in a cemetery on the outskirts of the city. Near the lot a spring boils up, whose waters are strongly impregnated with mineral substances. A few days ago it became necessary to remove the coffins to another lot. While this was being done the cover of the coffin containing the corpse of Mrs. Ireland was accidentally dislodged by the pickaxe of a careless laborer.

The workmen who looked at the body were astonished to see that decay had apparently made no inroads. Mrs. Ireland looked as though she lay sleeping in the casket. Even the flowers upon her breast seemed as fresh as when they were placed there six months ago.

Investigation showed that the body had become petrified and was as hard as though it had been sculptured from a marble block. There seemed to be nothing that would prevent its enduring for hundreds of years without suffering any change. The peculiar chemical constitution of the soil in the cemetery is supposed to be the cause of this phenomenon.

CATARRH
Mrs. Dobell, of London, Ont., Cured for 25 Cents

Doctors Could Help, but Couldn't Cure—Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure Released the Prisoner, and To-day She is as Well as Ever—She Says it is a Great Remedy

"Yes, I am Mrs. Dobell," said a comely, pleasant-faced woman at her home on Horton street to a News reporter to-day, "and I will very gladly tell you what you want to know. About three years ago my husband was very ill, and I had frequently occasion to rise in the night and go for a doctor or to the druggist. In my hurry I often neglected to properly clothe myself, and contracted several heavy colds, which turned at last to chronic catarrh. I tried doctors, who helped me, but did not cure me, and several special catarrh medicines. I was relieved but not cured. I was suffering intolerably when Mr. Stuff recommended me to try CHASE'S CATARRH CURE, and it began at once to help, and in about two months had entirely cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this remarkable medicine, and cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers from catarrh." The blower included is a great help to sufferers.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT!

The Mason & Risch Piano Co. L'td.

Beg to announce that they have assumed the Agency for Central and Western Ontario of the Pianos manufactured by Chickering & Sons, Boston.

It would be superfluous to make extended reference to the reputation of this famous house, or to the pianofortes manufactured by them. It is sufficient to say that for three quarters of a century they have occupied the position of absolute leaders in Musical Art manufacture, and their reputation was at no time greater than it is at present.

INTENDING PURCHASERS OF PIANO

Now have the choice in our warerooms of goods manufactured by the acknowledged leaders of the American and Canadian trade. The association of such Instruments as Chickering & Sons and Mason & Risch Pianos beneath one roof forms a unique combination.

AS TO PRICES!

Pianos of high artistic merit must of necessity cost more than poorer instruments, but there is no question of the direction in which true economy lies. As an evidence of this it may be mentioned that the first Piano manufactured by Chickering & Sons 73 ago is still in an excellent state of preservation, and Pianos made by Mason & Risch over 20 years ago scarcely show any sign of wear. When a woman falls overboard she sometimes drowns when there is a life buoy just within a few strokes of her—all because she doesn't happen to see it. Sick people often perish in the same way. Help is within reach, but they don't know just where it is. They become discouraged and disgusted with taking medicines and give up in despair.

Mrs. Mary J. Stewart, of Saratoga, Santa Clara Co., Cal., in a letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I suffered for fourteen years with female weakness, nervousness and general debility, trying everything I could find to help me—all to no avail. Although I was thoroughly discouraged and disgusted with taking medicine when I heard of Dr. Pierce's medicines, I thought I would try once more to find relief. I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription,' and too great praise cannot be given for the rapid relief they gave me. I am now free from the former troubles, and may God bless Dr. Pierce in all his undertakings to cure suffering humanity."

Thousands who had reached this forlorn and hopeless condition of body and mind have found new hope and rescue in the use of these marvelous remedies.

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" is sent free in paper covers for 21 one-cent stamps to pay cost of customs and mailing only; or, cloth-bound for 50 stamps. Address, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Rev. J. K. Thompson, of East Cusick, Washington Co., Vt., writes concerning this great work: "I am charmed with the style and general subject matter of the entire work. I consider it a valuable addition to my carefully selected library. The purpose to set men right physically is a noble one. I am also pleased with the refined and at the same time fearless way in which you handle those delicate subjects pertaining to biology, thus making the work admirably fitted for the young."

THE FIERCEST OF DOGS.

Fighting a Bull Terrier Is a Very Dangerous Undertaking.

Did you ever have a struggle with a bull terrier? Probably not. If you had you would know that the adhesive power of a bull terrier's teeth is at the ratio of about sixteen to one with that of a vise.

Nature has kindly endowed the bull terrier with a peculiar osseous formation of the jaw. By means of this he is enabled to hold on without apparent effort.

That is the reason his lower jaw sticks out further than his upper jaw. When he closes his jaws upon an object they lock themselves and he can keep them in this position with contentment and even amusement while he watches the torture of his victim.

Dute Cabanne of St. Louis, says the New York Journal, has just had a struggle with a bull terrier that illustrates the benefit of collegiate education and the superiority of human intelligence over brute power. Mr. Cabanne was in the football team when he was at college, and so is accustomed to rough handling.

He was a quarterback, and nothing less than the impact of a locomotive would throw him off his balance. Moreover, he is a noted bicyclist, with great power in his shoulders and a grip in his hands like that of death itself.

These are the qualities that enabled Dute Cabanne to get the best of the bull terrier that sprang at him one day as he was walking down South Seventh-street. Why the dog sprang at Cabanne is not recorded. He evidently did not know that his intended victim was a college man who had served on a football team. The terrier probably thought that he was a mere lawyer, a doctor, a minister, or even a pugilist, and so regarded him with the contempt born of a long experience with men of that calibre.

Mr. Cabanne was about ten feet away when he heard the terrier coming for him with his mouth wide open. The brute had broken away from his master, who was leading him with a chain.

As Mr. Cabanne realized what was about to happen he leaned over in the approved football fashion and prepared for the onslaught. He grabbed the terrier around the throat with both hands.

Mr. Cabanne's hands are strong. With them he has often grasped a football.

He squeezed the terrier's throat until his tongue protruded. The dog grasped for breath and Mr. Cabanne squeezed all the harder.

He collared that dog and held him up in the air, kicking. Then Mr. Cabanne performed a remarkable feat.

Dropping the dog suddenly, as he would drop a football, he at the same time raised his right foot, caught the brute on his toe and sent him sailing into the air. As he turned over and over the bull terrier gazed at him, and the growls that came from his interior could be heard a block away.

The blood-red eyes plainly said: "You wait till I get down." The dog fell to the ground before Mr. Cabanne had a chance to run.

"Landing on all four feet," said Mr. Cabanne, "he lit into me again with a vengeance. This time I was better prepared for the savage beast. As he came at me I let him have my heel good and plenty. It was a red-hot soak and the terrier caved like an embankment.

"Talk about a knockout. It was nothing to this knockout. That terrier never knew what hit him the second time I gave him my foot. He rolled over like a sure-enough dead one, and when his owner came up and surveyed the brute stretched out on all fours he remarked:

"'Well, I guess you have finished him.'

"It was the closest call I have ever had. Yes, it frightened me considerably. After the affair was over and I realized what a tight fit I had gone through, the thought of it was more terrifying than the actual fight itself. It was just like tackling a man on the football field. They come at you like a locomotive and the jar is enough to knock one's lung out."

When fevers and other epidemics are around, safety lies in fortifying the system with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A person having thin and impure blood, is in the most favourable condition to "catch" whatever disease may be floating in the air. Be wise in time.

A Shady Rustic Seat.

The illustration shows the foundation for a vine-covered rustic seat. In rustic work of any kind it is best to select fairly smooth pieces or wood, with not too much irregularity of branching. Smooth sticks, closely covered with bark, make much the more satisfactory work, providing plenty of the rustic look where more would look incongruous. The top of the seat shown could be arched, if such a style were preferred. Vines planted at the ends and in the rear will soon cover the whole and give a delightfully shady seat.

Roses of tree growth, climbers or trailers could be utilized in any of these structures, and if combined with clematis would give magnificent results.

Blood Meat for Chicks.

A correspondent asked Nellie Hawks, of The Practical Farmer, what she thought of feeding blood meat to chicks and she replied: "We have found it valuable, and have noted much difference in the growth of chicks that were fed on it, as compared with chicks that were not. But green cut bone is also a valuable food for chicks, as well as for adult fowls, and meat meals, are also of great value in chick-rearing. Wheat is given our chicks when three weeks old, but we do not stop feeding the millet seed. A kettle of wheat boiled for them every day pays well in time, for they do better on the wheat boiled than upon the wheat dry. They prefer it cooked, and it is more readily digested. But it should be boiled dry, that is, the water should be either all evaporated or poured off, for sloppy foods invariably bring on bowel troubles. Chicks that are strong to begin with should be nearly all raised, if properly fed and kept warm and dry, free from lice, and in clean, healthy quarters. It all means work. And yet, it is a work so pleasant and profitable that it may be made to be almost as play, and women more particularly than men are everywhere lining their purses with quite a deep lining of silver from the proceeds of their poultry.

Quackery is always discovering remedies which will act upon the germs of disease directly and kill them. But no discovery has ever yet been approved by doctors which will cure consumption that way. Germs can only be killed by making the body strong enough to overcome them, and the early use of such a remedy as Scott's Emulsion is one of the helps. In the daily warfare man keeps up, he wins best, who is provided with the needed strength, such as Scott's Emulsion supplies.

TEN YEARS TROUBLED

With Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia--Suffered Greatly and Found No Relief in the Scores of Medicines Prescribed.

South American Nervine Was Recommended, and Before Half a Bottle Was Taken Relief Came.

Have Since Improved Rapidly, and Am Now Completely Cured—So Says Mr. David Reid, of Chesley, Ont.

What ills come to humanity from a disordered liver! Henry Ward Beecher has said that it was impossible for a man to hold correct spiritual views if his liver was out of order. The liver is so important a part of the mechanism of man that when it ceases to work with ease the whole man is unable to do his work aright. Can we not appeal to thousands, nay, tens of thousands, for a verification of this fact? Certainly it is, that Mr. David Reid, of Chesley, Ont., felt that the enjoyment of life had been taken from him, through the unhealthy condition of his liver. For ten years he says he was troubled with liver complaint and dyspepsia. Employing his own language: "At times my liver was so tender I could not bear it pressed or touched from the outside. Had tried a great many remedies without any benefit. Was compelled to drop my work, and being worse than usual, I decided as a final resort to try South American Nervine, which had been recommended to me by friends who had been cured by it. I got a bottle from A. S. Goodeve, local druggist, and commenced taking according to directions. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to go to work again, and I have improved steadily since. I can conscientiously recommend South American Nervine to any suffering from dyspepsia or liver complaint." This is Mr. Reid's story as he tells it in his own words. Were it thought necessary it could be corroborated by a host of witnesses. Mr. Reid has lived a long time in Chesley, and his case was known to be a very bad one. But that makes no difference to Nervine. This great discovery rises equal to the most trying occasions. Let it be indigestion, the most chronic liver trouble, as with Mr. Reid, nervous prostration, that makes life miserable with so many, sick headaches, that sap all the effort out of man or woman, Nervine measures to the necessities of the case. It is a great medicine and thousands to-day in Canada are happier and healthier men and women, because of its discovery. There is no great secret about it, and yet there is an important secret. It operates on the nerve centers of the system from which emanate all life and healthfulness, or if disordered, sickness, even death. Nervine strikes promptly at the nerve centers, hence, as with Mr. Reid, where ten years' use of other medicines had done no good, less than a bottle of Nervine brought about encouraging results, and a few bottles cured.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

THE REPORTS OF THE YEAR WERE SUBMITTED.

The Old Board of Directors Again Re-Elected—$564.72 was the Amount Expended during the Year in the Purchase of Books.

The annual meeting of the Public Library was held last evening with the President, Dr. Burnham in the chair.

The report of the Directors was submitted as follows by the President.

Your directors, in compliance with the by-laws, present for your consideration the following report of the business of the Public Library for the year ending April 30th, 1897:

They are greatly pleased in presenting this 20th annual report to be able to state that very considerable improvements have been made in the rooms since last year. Your Board of Management, aided by a liberal grant from our landlords (the trustees of the Nicholls estate) have rearranged and greatly enlarged the library, so that there will be sufficient shelf space to meet all the requirements for a number of years. As these improvements have been carefully described in our town papers at the time of their completion, and have been seen and highly commended by most of the members since, we do not think it necessary to enlarge on the subject in this report.

Owing to the expense incurred in making these improvements, we have not been able to carry out the intention mentioned in our last report of preparing a new catalogue, but as one is frequently asked for and greatly needed, we trust to be able to do so during the current year.

The reading rooms has been well supplied with all the leading magazines and periodicals of the day, and have been used more extensively by members than any previous year, and are frequently filled with readers of both sexes. The reference library, too, was found a great convenience to many of the members and has been much consulted by those connected with different literary classes.

The drawing class taught by Messrs. Banfield and McCallum was continued during the winter and was more regularly attended than usual. Pupils have written on the Government examination papers, and we hope most of them may be successful in gaining certificates. Since our last report a diploma and bronze medal, awarded at the Chicago World's Fair for work done by a former class, have been received and also separate diplomas for each of the members contributing, from the Education Department for Ontario.

The following is a classified list of the books added to the library during the year, with their cost, and also the names of books issued during that time:

A—Biography, 28	$ 40 10
B—Essays, 11	13 85
C—Fiction, 104	127 91
D—History, 32	44 65
F—Natural History, 3	3 60
G—Standard Works, 61	81 75
H—Miscellaneous, 19	18 20
I—Philosophy, 1	1 80
K—Poetry, 4	5 25
L—Periodicals, 6	5 10
M—Religion, 10	12 57
N—Science and Art, 13	21 70
O—Voyages and Travels, 13	17 60
R—Reference works, 34	169 25
Total volumes, 325. Total price	$564 73

Included in the above list are the following books presented to the library: House of Commons Debates, by John Burnham, Esq.; Hours of the Working People, by Rev. H. Symonds; Fruits of the Cane, by the Dominion Alliance; Reincarnation and the Ocean of Theosophy, by Miss Yates; and Canada; History, Productions and Natural Resources, and also Graphic Statutes of Canada, by the Dominion Government.

The financial statement and report of the class committee are herewith appended:

The report was received and adopted, after which Mr. Peter Corkery, treasurer, presented the financial statement, as appended, for the year ending April 30th, 1897:

Received and adopted.

The drawing class report was presented by Mr. A. C. McCallum, as appended:

To the President Mechanics' Institute:

Report of Drawing Class, held winter months 1896-7.

The class was held for forty lessons, as required by Provincial Government Education Department.

Nineteen pupils attend the class, all of them attending on an average 37 lessons.

The subjects taught were descriptive geometry, machine drawing and elementary mechanics.

The progress made by the pupils was most satisfactory.

Much encouragement was given the pupils to study, by the generous act of the Canadian General Electric Co., and Dr. Burnham, the worthy President of the Institute, in presenting the class with prizes.

The results of the examination being held this evening determines who shall receive the prizes, and will be made public upon the returns from the Education Department early in June.

The class should be conducted for a longer period than has hitherto been the case.

From 1st September to 31st April, the class should be considered as in session.

More attention should be paid to the senior pupils in the way of affording them advancement in mechanics and in machine design. A large class could be formed of those pupils, who have attended this class in other years, and is a matter worthy of your serious consideration.

Yours respectfully,
A. C. McCALLUM,
Instructor.

The report was received and adopted, after which the Directors of last year were re-elected as follows: Dr. Burnham, H.S. Macdonald, John Corkery, R. Robertson, W. H. Hill, J. S. Knapman, J. Richardson, T. A. S. Hay and James English.

A vote of thanks was passed to the auditors, Messrs. John Crane and A. Stevenson, before the adjournment of the meeting.

ASHBURNHAM BOARD OF HEALTH MEETING.

The Annual Report of the Medical Health Officer Submitted.

The annual meeting of the Ashburnham Board of Health was held last evening, with the following members in attendance, Messrs. Frank Adams, A. McCarthy, J. T. Wright, J. H. Smith, John Wood and Dr. Clarke, Medical Health Officer.

Mr. J. H. Smith was appointed chairman for the year on motion of Messrs. F. Adams and J. Wood, after which the Medical Health Officer submitted his annual report as follows:

To the Chairman and Members of the Ashburnham Board of Health.

GENTLEMEN,—In presenting my report for the year 1896, I am glad to say that the total death rate has been very moderate, reaching only 15.2, and that only two deaths from infectious disease, one from diphtheria and one from typhoid fever, occurred. Whenever such diseases have appeared proper precautions have been taken as regards isolation and disinfection, and the result has shown, as in previous years, how beneficial these means are in limiting the spread of the infection.

SLAUGHTER HOUSES.

These are gradually disappearing. We made frequent inspections of those in the village and found as a general rule that they were well kept. Scarcely any complaints were made in reference to slaughter houses throughout the year, and that one regarding which complaints were made has been removed outside the municipality.

HOG PENS.

Notices had to be served in some cases requesting removal of these. I am glad to say that they are almost extinct in the village.

HOUSE TO HOUSE INSPECTIONS.

House to house inspections have been made throughout the year and notices served where necessary. Most places are kept in good order, but some require constant attention. Disinfectants are used much more freely than formerly. I do not find it so necessary as in past years to insist upon privy-vaults being changed to earth closets. The former are much more regularly cleaned, and consequently there is far less necessity for the latter.

COMPLAINTS.

Many complaints have been sent in from time to time, which have been attended to according to circumstances. Some difficulties arise as in the matter of junk-shops. Inspections have been made of these places and they have been found more often untidy than unhealthy. I think that unless very well kept it would be better that establishments of this kind should be kept outside of the village altogether.

WELL WATER.

A good number of samples have been sent in for inspection. Some are fairly pure, and some impure. Wells are not cleaned out as often as ought to be done. We do not wish to be too harsh on ratepayers, but must remind them that, according to statute of the Ontario Legislature, every well in the municipality must be cleaned out thoroughly each year before the first of July.

MILK.

Samples of milk has been sent in from time to time for analysis. As in former years, the principal impurity has been dilution with water. The Provincial Board has recently sent around circulars calling attention to the necessity of guarding against tuberculosis and calling in a veterinary surgeon to examine all suspected animals, but it has not seemed to be necessary so far.

ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL.

I have inspected this institution from time to time and always found it in a good sanitary condition. Arrangements have been made recently for the reception of cases of infectious disease. I have gone through the hospital thoroughly and found that every means were used to isolate and disinfect in case of infectious disease. There are also arrangements made for the reception of suspicious cases.

GENERAL COMPLAINTS.

We have attended to all forms of complaints and seen them rectified as far as possible. I think that more power ought to be given to the Board of Health regarding the rectification of nuisances. Cases are constantly occurring that are a source of nuisance without being positively deleterious to the public health. I think that most of these complaints are well founded and that there ought to be some means of relief. I remain, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,
J. CLARKE, M. D.,
Medical Health Officer.

HONORS TO COL. HAY.

Unusual Distinction Accorded to the New United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

London, May 3.—Col. John Hay, the newly appointed United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James, received unusual distinction to-day while presenting his credentials to Queen Victoria at Windsor Castle. During the morning a royal carriage drove up to Col. Hay's residence with a coachman and two footmen in the royal scarlet livery, to convey Col. and Mrs. Hay to Paddington Station. At the station they were met by the Marquis of Salisbury and the Master of Ceremonies, Col. The Hon. Sir William James Colville, who accompanied them to Windsor. At the Windsor railroad station Col. and Mrs. Hay found a royal carriage in waiting to convey them to the Castle, where luncheon was served.

Col. Hay first had an audience with the Marquis of Salisbury and then presented his credentials to Her Majesty. The audience was brief and formal, but the Queen was specially gracious and exchanged with the Ambassador mutual expressions of good will and amity between both nations. Mrs. Hay was then received in audience by the Queen, being presented by the Countess of Erroll, the lady in waiting. As the wife of an Ambassador Mrs. Hay took precedence over the Portuguese and Chinese Ministers, who also presented their credentials upon this occasion.

Col. and Mrs. Hay remained three hours at Windsor Castle, returned to the Windsor railroad station in a royal carriage, and were met at Paddington railroad station by a royal carriage, which conveyed them to their residence.

Dean Richmond Found Dead.

New York, May 3.—Dean Richmond, a grandson of the late Dean Richmond, former President of the New York Central Railroad, was found dead in his room at the St. Charles Hotel this morning. Marks on his face appear to have been made by a man's fist, and have given rise to a suspicion of murder and robbery. Mr. Richmond had a large income and spent money lavishly. He was about 35 years of age and lived on his means.

THE HOUSE IN SUPPLY

Tackled the Estimates and Passed Some Items.

THERE WAS A LITTLE CROSS-FIRING

But on the Whole the Proceedings Were Harmonious—The New Member for Winnipeg Was Introduced, So Were Several Bills Before Estimates Were Taken Up.

Ottawa, May 4.—(Special.)—The Commons to-day did a solid day's work in supply. The first time the estimates have been under consideration this session. There was considerable cross-firing on some of the items, but on the whole the discussion was good-natured.

After routine proceedings to-day the new member for Winnipeg, Mr. Jameson, was introduced by the Premier and Minister Sifton, and took his seat amidst vigorous applause and coyote cries of other Liberals from the plains.

Bills were introduced, respecting the Sun Life Insurance Company, by Mr. Rosamond; respecting the Great Eastern Railway Company, by Mr. Bourvert; to incorporate the Columbia and Western Railway Company, Mr. Bostock; and respecting the Montreal Bridge Company, Mr. Boisvert.

The House then, for the first time, went into Committee of Supply and proceeded to tackle the estimates, Mr. Baiu in the chair, and Sir Richard Cartwright in charge. The first snag was struck in the estimate for the Department of Justice, Sir Richard explained that the clause "Including $4000 for the Deputy Minister of Justice" meant that portion of the Deputy Minister's salary ($400) heretofore paid that officer as solicitor of the Department of Indian Affairs, and out of the appropriation of that department was to be voted in bulk. Sir Oliver Mowat, he said, desired to consolidate the vote and the Deputy Minister would not continue to act as solicitor for the Indian Department.

Mr. Foster asked if the Minister proposed to carry out his promises of economy by doing away with this arrangement, and creating a new office, that of Law Clerk of Indian Affairs.

Sir Richard Cartwright explained that there would still be a reduction in the estimate for the latter department.

On the vote for the Interior Department Mr. Foster required explanations of the recent changes.

Mr. Sifton responded. He defended the appointment of Mr. Smart as Deputy Minister. It was in the interest of the department relating to the Northwest and Manitoba, and it was thought necessary to have a deputy in charge, fully acquainted with the people of that part of the country and their requirements. He further explained the superannuation of Mr. H. H. Smith, Dominion Lands Commissioner in Winnipeg, and the appointment of Mr. Burgess to the Chief Commissionership of Dominion Lands at Ottawa.

Then, when it came to the "promotion of T. G. Rothwell, $2000," and $1900 for the "promotion of K. J. Henry to chief clerkships." Mr. Sifton laid down the principle that when he found an officer competent and worthy he was going to advance him.

Dr. Sproule reminded the committee that those two officers were among the very men whom the honorable gentleman and friends railed against in 1891, and blamed the then Government for not dismissing them. The fact that Mr. Sifton's first act had been to promote these officers was a significant endorsation of the Conservative Government's course at that time.

Mr. Somerville denied that the Opposition had railed against Messrs. Rothwell and Henry. On the contrary the straightforward manner in which they gave their evidence before the Public Accounts Committee that year had commended them.

Sir Charles Tupper vigorously denounced the system thus introduced. Where a couple, or half a dozen, were singled out and all others disregarded, it was a reflection upon the great body of the service. It was opening the door to the grossest demoralization and to the most serious kind of favoritism. The system heretofore in vogue provided that the statutory increase should be given upon a certificate of emcieency given by the deputy.

Sir Richard Cartwright said that but two courses were open to the Government, either to discontinue the system of automatic statutory increases, or dismiss several scores of civil servants. He would not say that the latter ought not to be done, but the Government did not do it. The country was now paying all it could afford, about $1,400,000 a year, for the civil service. Therefore for the present the Government decided not to consider the statutory increase as a matter of course. The check of deputy ministers' certificates was, he declared, merely nominal.

Mr. McNeill held that the Minister of Trade and Commerce seemed to ignore the implied condition of permanency attaching to the position of a civil servant.

Mr. Davies made a frank statement of his own civil service policy. He contended that existing facts were the best guarantee that could be given of the permanency of the service. Here was a party that had been 18 years in Opposition, coming into power and practically retaining the service intact. The Government had discussed the alternative of large dismissals, and it was a long time before they could make up their minds rather to forego the system of treating statutory increases as a matter of course. The intention was to recognize merit in the service. A difference would hereafter be made between the "4 o'clock" official—the man who kept his eye on the time-piece and skipped away sharp at 4, or perhaps five minutes sooner—and the civil servant who was willing to stay till 6, or work till 10 or 11 at night if need be, and these he admitted constituted the great majority of the service. True, the system might be open to the imputation of favoritism, but in nine cases out of ten justice would be done.

Mr. Cochrane drew attention to the contradiction implied in increases asked for in the estimates as compared with the Liberal professions of economy.

Sir Richard Cartwright replied by referring the honorable gentleman to the total saving of over $30,000, as compared with the previous year.

Mr. Foster said he would like to know what view the Government took of the clause in the act which said that the statutory increase could be withheld for cause.

Mr. Davies said the Minister of Justice gave a lengthened and reasoned opinion to the council, that the granting of increases was permissive, not compulsory.

Sir Charles Tupper: Then we ought to have that opinion laid before the House.

Mr. Foster said the principle which the Government proposed to adopt was bad for the service and bad for the Ministers. It would afford facilities for the partisan to get in his work and bring political influence to bear to get his friends increases in salaries. Referring to Mr. Sifton's change in the Interior Department, he asked how it was possible for that gentleman in three months to become acquainted with the capabilities of his officers. And yet in that period he had so learned about them that he boosted four or five officers above the heads of their fellows with large increases in salary. He was sorry to hear what the Minister had said about Mr. Burgess, as that gentleman was one of the most capable officers in the public service. To say that Mr. Burgess had not shown an intelligent interest in the welfare of the Northwest was most unjust. He had been deposed to make way for a political friend of the Minister's. In conclusion, Mr. Foster asked Mr. McMullen to support him in resisting these increases.

Dr. Landerkin: "Don't you do it, Mac." [Loud laughter.]

Mr. McMullen said unfortunately he had not heard the Minister's explanation. As a rule he was opposed to all increases except for good and sufficient reason.

Mr. Foster asked that the item stand until Mr. McMullen was given an opportunity to read the Minister's explanation. [Laughter.]

Continuing the discussion on the interior items after recess, Mr. Wallace enquired how it came about that the Minister of the Interior made promotions to chief clerkships without the examination which the Civil Service Act required. He assured the honorable gentleman that grave dissatisfaction would result from this procedure. Moreover, the vote for the department, $104,814, was the largest any Minister had been asked for.

This, Mr. McMullen explained, was due to the inclusion of the lands branch at Winnipeg in the inside service at Ottawa.

Mr. Haggart said the objection was not to the regular promotion of officials, but to increase so largely in excess of the statutory allowance.

After some further discussion the item passed.

On the item of $10,350 for the Northwest Mounted Police, in reply to Major Hughes, Mr. Sifton said the force was to be reduced by 250 officers and men, leaving the total membership at 500. The item carried.

The Postoffice Department estimates were next taken up. Mr. Mulock explained his new system of organization of the railway mail service. He said the principle had worked well in the United States. Controller Armstrong and Inspector Sweetman had been instructed to select for the positions of chiefs of the several districts the best men in the service.

To Major Hughes the Postmaster-General replied that he was not prepared to state how far the re-adjustment of the railway mail service would affect the staffs of postoffice inspectors, but he thought he could say there would either be a reduction in the number of inspectors or a reduction in the number of inspectors' districts.

After passing further items the House adjourned at 11.25.

THE WAR NOT ENDED

Greek Cabinet Decides That the Fight Will Go On.

REPORT BROUGHT FROM THE FRONT

And Considered by the Government at Athens—Powers Have Offered to Intervene, But the Greeks Have Not Yet Decided to Accept Mediation Latest News.

London, May 4.—The difficulty of saying what has actually occurred at the seat of war continues. But the presumption from the known facts of the military situation, is that Edhem Pasha is merely feeling the Greek position at Pharsalos preparatory to delivering a general attack. Edhem Pasha's repeated assaults on the wings of the Greek formation have probably had the object of compelling Prince Constantine to send them reinforcements and thus weaken his centre at Pharsalos. We may soon, therefore, expect to hear that Edhem Pasha has struck hard at this weakened point.

It looks as though Greece was giving up the game in Crete and the recall of Col. Vassos can only be regarded as making for peace, and is, apparently, the first step in that direction.

Greece may thus regain the friendship of the powers, which have always stipulated this amende before using their good offices at Constantinople. The appointment of a nominal successor to Col. Vassos is undoubtedly only a blind to allay popular protest.

The Parliamentary Secretary for the Foreign Office, Mr. George N. Curzon, in the House of Commons to-day, replying to a question, said communications on the subject of mediation were continually passing between the powers, who earnestly desire to see the war between Greece and Turkey ended.

"But," he added, "the first essential to successful mediation is evidence that the belligerents are prepared to accept it."

Regarding Crete, Mr. Curzon said the powers intended to carry out the project of autonomy, but the continued presence of the Greek troops and the consequent attitude of the Christian Cretans rendered progress very difficult. It was not true, Mr. Curzon added, that the Christians lacked food, supplies from the interior being ample from their own crops and the crops of the evicted Musaulmans. The only serious fear of destitution was among the masses of Musaulmans gathered on the coasts.

A Royal proclamation was gazetted this evening enjoining upon all British subjects strict neutrality in the war between Turkey and Greece.

The Cabinet Decides to Fight On.

London, May 5.—The Athens correspondent of The Daily Mail says that the Ministers of War and of the Interior have returned from Pharsalos and made their report to the Cabinet.

The Athens correspondent of The Times says: "The Cabinet sat till daybreak (Tuesday) hearing the reports of the Ministers from the front, and finally resolved to continue the war.

"Gen. Smolenski has declined to accept the post of chief of staff of the Crown Prince, as he prefers to remain with his own brigade.

"The decision of the Government is momentous, but it is difficult to say whether it is absolutely final."

The Athens correspondent of The Daily Chronicle says that the Foreign Ministers have tendered the intervention of the powers to Greece, but the Government has reserved its reply.

The special correspondent of The Times with the Turkish forces at Velestino telegraphs under date of April 30 that the Turks have captured the village of Kephalo at the foot of the pass, adding that with the reinforcements then en route from Larissa, the Turks would undoubtedly be able to force the defile and, if necessary, capture Velestino.

A despatch to The Daily Chronicle from Pharsalos dated Monday says it is rumored in the Greek camp that peace will shortly be proclaimed.

Garibaldi and the King.

Rome, May 4.—An Athens despatch to Il Corriere Della Sera, of Milan, says Ricotti Garibaldi has had a long conference with King George, who seemed more preoccupied with his position in the eyes of the powers, than with the war. His Majesty, it appears, was in excellent humor. Continuing, the despatch asserts that M. Rallí, the Greek Premier, after suggesting that Ricotti should enroll Greeks among the Italian volunteers, now requests him to suspend the enrollment of Italians, leading to the belief that secret negotiations to end the war are proceeding.

Calling on Gladstone.

New York, May 4.—A London special to The Journal says: "The report cabled you on Friday that the Princess of Wales was using her utmost influence to bring about English intervention in favor of Greece in the east is corroborated by the London press to-day. The Princess, accompanied by the Princesses, takes the unprecedented course of asking the assistance of Mr. Gladstone. They have made an engagement to visit the ex-Premier at Hawarden on May 10. Mr. Gladstone is in splendid health once more and walked home from church on Sunday to Hawarden Castle, a distance of half a mile, in a boisterous storm."

Serbia Mimics George.

Paris, May 4.—The Gil Blas says the King of Greece used the crisis in the affairs of his country to speculate in Greek and Turkish bonds, with the result that His Majesty has cleared 30,000,000 to 35,000,000

Giving the Fleet a Show.

London, May 4.—The Daily Telegraph correspondent at Volo says that the foreign warships have moved further out, leaving the Greek fleet free range, and that the Greek fleet have sent four heavy guns to Velestino.

A despatch to The Times from Larissa says it is alleged there that the report that Volo has been occupied by the Turks is not true, but that the Greeks have received to concentrate their forces there and make a stand.

Mothers

Anxiously watch declining health of their daughters. So many are cut off by consumption in early years that there is real cause for anxiety. In the early stages, when not beyond the reach of medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla will restore the quality and quantity of the blood and thus give good health. Read the following letter:

"It is but just to write about my daughter Cora, aged 19. She was completely run down, declining, had that tired feeling, and friends said she would not live over three months. She had a bad and nothing seemed to do her any good. I happened to read about Hood's Sarsaparilla and had her give it a trial. From the very first dose she began to get better. After taking a few bottles she was completely cured and her health has been the best ever since." MRS. ADDIE PECK, 12 Railroad Place, Amsterdam, N. Y.

NORWOOD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The Clancy House is having its exterior renovated and will soon come out in a bran new coat of paint.

Dr. Hall, dentist and J.G. Sherry, lawyer, have their offices in the Ackerman block.

Tucker Bros. have erected a new shed at their bake shop.

Paterson Bros. have purchased the Foster and Tucker Bros', baking business, and a new delivery wagon has been added to the business in connection with Tucker Bros.

Drs. Harry and Arthur Scott, of Detroit, are home spending a few days visiting the family here.

Sacramental ordinances and quarterly communion services were observed in the Methodist church last Sunday morning. A meeting of the board was held on Monday.

The Sunday school rooms in basement of Methodist church are ready for the painters.

We are pleased to say Mr. W. E. Roxburgh intends building a fine new block on Front street, beginning on the corner with a double store for R. W. Waters, and continuing south with three single stores.

J. B. Pearce, we believe, has about decided to rebuild on the old stand—a fine block which will contain a new post office.

Miss Scott spent Sunday in town visiting her father, Mr. Robt. Scott.

A new fence of artistic design graces the front of Mrs. Buck's place lot on Peterborough street.

Miss Graham, of Lakefield, has located in town and will engage in dress and mantle making for the summer.

Mr. Jas. Cumming is putting his woollen mill in shape for commencing spring trade.

Court of Revision for village of Norwood meets on May 25th, at 1 o'clock p.m.

Miss C. C. Calder left for Rochester last Tuesday for a few weeks visiting friends.

Mr. Geo. Benor, agent for North American Life Insurance Company, was in town this week.

Mr. A. B. Richardson has leased the Finlay block on Peterborough street, recently occupied by the Norwood Steam Laundry, and will continue mercantile pursuits. Mr. Lang has moved his laundry business to his residence on Belmont street.

Mr. Perney, Principal of the Public School, and president of the Public Library, was in Peterborough on Saturday, selecting $79 worth of new books for the Public Library.

The Reynolds block on Front street is being scraped, preparatory to receiving a coat of paint.

The cheese factory is now running with full force.

Gardening, housecleaning and domestic muddles are in order this week and next.

The annual meeting of the Public Library will be held next Monday evening at 8 o'clock, in new temporary rooms near the Union Bank.

The C.O.O.F. have taken temporary rooms in Masonic Hall.

Court Norwood, C.O.F., are talking of joining their lot with Court Rob Roy.

To the many inquirers we can safely say we are to have fire protection in the near future. Just a little patience will give the council time to conclude negotiations already gone into with regard to a satisfactory conclusion and practical fire protection.

After discussion, it was moved by Messrs. Walker and Harper, that council lay the matter over until reeve returns for next meeting.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Walker and Harper, that reeve and Mr. Ebbs be committee to confer with Board of Education committee and Agricultural Society re park and race track.

Council adjourned to meet at reeve's call.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

CAN ONLY BE ENJOYED BY THOSE WHOSE BLOOD IS PURE.

We Are Living in the Age of Pale and Sallow Faces — Heart Palpitation, Severe Head Aches and Extreme Weakness the Distressing Result—There is Hope for Such Sufferers.

From the Belleville Sun.

There is no home complete in its happiness where there is not perfect health, especially among the younger members of the family. How often is the beauty of a young girl marred and her spirit broken by weakness and irritability caused by those complaints to which so many females are subject at the present day. Mrs. Robt. Twa, New Carlow, Ont., tells for the benefit of others of the restoration of her daughter from a life of misery. She says:—"For upwards of three years my daughter Lydia, now eighteen years of age, was utterly broken down in health, and her condition appeared to be going from bad to worse. She became so weak that she could not endure the least excitement, and the smallest amount of exertion would fatigue her. If she did any work about the house she would tremble with weakness. She was pale and seemed almost bloodless. Her heart at times would palpitate violently, and she was the victim of severe nervous headaches. Her condition was such that we became much alarmed. We tried a number of remedies but they did her no good. Then we decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and before the first box was completed we could see that they were helping her, one of the first signs of returning health being an improvement in her appetite, which before had been extremely fickle. A continued use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills drove out every symptom of her illness, and she has since enjoyed the most robust health. She has not in fact, had a day's illness since she discontinued the use of Pink Pills, and it is with feelings of gratitude that I recommend them to mothers whose daughters may be in a similar condition.

It is a lamentable fact that there are thousands of young girls throughout Canada whose state of health is alarming and whose condition is certain to develop into hopeless decline unless prompt measures are taken to give new vitality to the blood and nerves, by which means only can disease be driven from the system. In this emergency Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the only medicine which will effect a prompt and certain cure. The pills supply the blood with its lacking constituents, strengthen the nerves, and bring to pallid faces the rosy glow of health so much sought for. There is abundance of evidence to prove that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure after all other medicines have failed, but it is better far to apply to them for relief at the outset than to experiment with other medicines until perhaps it may be too late. Insist upon getting the genuine, put up in boxes the wrapper round which bears the registered trade mark "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." Refuse all pink coloured imitations and other medicines alleged to be just as good.

GALWAY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

A quiet wedding took place last Monday in the Roman Catholic church, the contracting parties being Miss Hannah O'Brien and Mr. Thos. Cain. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Nolan, of Fenelon Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Cain have taken up their residence on a farm in Galway, and their numerous friends wish them many years of happiness and prosperity.

Mr. James Mountaney, who formerly resided at Swamp Lake but moved to Dorset about two years ago, has returned again, accompanied by Mr. Pomeworth. They are going to convert the unbroken forest and dismal swamp into productive fields and comfortable homes.

Mr. John Owens has purchased a farm from Mr. H. Clouston and has just moved into his new home.

A child was cured of croup by a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A neighbor's child died of the same dread disease, while the father was getting ready to call the doctor. This shows the necessity of having Ayer's Cherry Pectoral always at hand.

The Wonder of the Age.

DEAR SIRS,—I must honestly say that I have tried your valuable medicine B.B.B. for the disease called prairie itch, and have found this remedy to be the wonder of the age. I took only three bottles and to my great satisfaction was completly cured. I can highly recommend it to all who suffer from any skin disease or impurity of the blood.

"I AM SHOT!"

Was the Exclamation of Mrs. Dean, a Widow of Proton, and She Fell Dead.

Mount Forest, Ont., May 4.—A very sad and distressing accident happened some miles from here, in Proton Township, by which Mrs. Dean, a widowed lady, met her death. It appears that while visiting Mrs. Jacks, a neighbor, the subject of how to dispose of tramps was being discussed, when Mrs. Jacks said, bringing out a revolver, "This is how we do it," and in answer to Mrs. Dean's request to take that out of her sight said it was not loaded. Mrs. Dean finally proceeded to examine it and, as it was pointed toward her and being a self-cocker, it exploded, sending the bullet into her body. She jumped to her feet and exclaimed, "I am shot," and, running to the door, fell dead. The sad affair has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood and much sympathy is felt for both the Jacks and the family of the victim.

Attractive Women.

Why is one woman attractive and another not? The most admirable and attractive thing about an attractive woman is her womanliness. Everybody admires a womanly woman. She must have health, of course, because without it she would lose the brightness of her eyes, the fullness of her cheeks and her vivacity. Real health must mean that a woman is really a woman. That she is strong and perfect in a sexual way, as well as in every other. That she is capable of performing perfectly the duties of maternity. Some are born with what is called "constitutional weakness." Those who do not enjoy perfect health, need only take the proper precautions and the proper remedy to become perfectly well and strong. Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription will cure any derangement of the distinctly feminine organism.

A DREADFUL AFFAIR

Fire at a Charity Bazaar in Paris.

ONE HUNDRED CORPSES LAID OUT

Among the Victims of the Holocaust Were Members of the French Aristocracy —Many People Injured and Others Missing—A Panic With Fearful Results.

Paris, May 4.—Fire broke out at 4 p.m. in a crowded charitable bazar in the Rue Jean Goujon, at which the Duchesse d'Uses and other well-known patronesses were present. Many people were burned to death, and there was a terrible panic, during which a large number of persons were injured.

The bazaar in which the fire broke out was a temporary structure of wood. The flames were first discovered above the stall occupied by the Duchesse d'Uses, and while the place was densely crowded with well-known society people, the holding of the bazaar in the cause of charity being an annual function, presided over by the leaders of Parisian society. A terrible panic and crush followed the alarm of fire. There was a wild rush for the exits, and the weaker persons were trampled on, after having been knocked down in the stampede. The inflammable nature of the building and its contents caused the flames to spread with great rapidity, and in a very short time the bazaar was a mass of flames.

The managers of the bazaar had arranged the stalls so as to represent a street of old Paris, and it was opened yesterday, an event which was greatly looked forward to in society. The proceeds of each stall were devoted to a separate charity.

The stalls were presided over by Mme. Fevrier, the wife of Jen. Fevrier; the Marquise de L'Aigle, Mme. Jacobs, the Baronne de la Douchesse, the Marquise de St. Michel, the Duchesse D'Uses, Mme. Mignotte, the Baronne de St. Ideadre, the Comtesse Dan n, aka, the Marquise le Gouester, the Marquise D'Argence, the Marquise de Pitti, the Duchesse D'Alencon, a member of the Orleans family; Mme. D'Arlu, Mme. Boisseau, the Baronne F. de Schickler, Mme. Morgan, the Marquise Costa de Beauregard, Her Royal Highness the Duchesse de Vendome, the Marquise de Maison and the Comtesse de Grefful, nee la Rochefoucauld. Mlle. de Flores presided over the refreshment stand. These ladies were assisted by many equally well-known society ladies.

As a somewhat remarkable coincidence, the stall presided over by the Duchesse D'Uses was No. 13. It is impossible as yet to identify the victims. At 6.30 p.m. when these details are telegraphed, the bazaar is almost an obliterated heap of charred wood. Ambulances are conveying the recovered bodies to the Palais de l'Industrie.

The number of injured, however, is much greater than at first estimated. One hundred and sixty injured persons have been conveyed to the Hotel Dupalais, in the Cours de la Reine, but many of the critical cases have been transported to the Hospital Beaujon. A policeman who was on duty at the doors of the bazaar says that from 1500 to 1800 people were in the building when the fire broke out.

The bazaar was 100 yards long by 66 yards wide, and constructed almost entirely of wood. Enormous crowds of people gathered around the scene of the fire. Among them were a large number of liveried servants, enquiring for their mistresses, and the indications are that among the dead are numbers of the French aristocracy, although it is hoped the missing ones may be found among the many injured persons who are being cared for at the hotels, hospitals and other places.

Twenty corpses and a number of the most seriously injured are now laid out in the right wing of the Palais de l'Industrie, Admiral Besnard, the Minister of Marine, arrived upon the scene shortly after 7 o'clock. Further details just obtained show that before the firemen had time to arrive the roof of the bazaar crashed in, burying numbers of those who had been unable to escape from the building.

Very soon after the alarm was given, assistance was hurried to the burning bazaar and effective help was rapidly organized. The police officers strove energetically to release the victims from the burning building, but every door was jammed with struggling women, terror-stricken.

Although an alarm was sent out with reasonable promptness, the whole wooden structure was blazing before the firemen could approach the bazaar, and when they were within a short distance of it the roof and almost the whole building collapsed almost immediately, falling upon the unfortunate people, many of whom are supposed to have been previously suffocated to death.

In spite of the efforts of the firemen, some time elapsed before the charred bodies could be pulled from the smoking and burning mass of debris. The prefect, M. Lepine, was one of the first officials to reach the fire, and he directed the operations for the recovery of the bodies. In the meanwhile the pumps played on the burning ruins, and as the work progressed and the enquiries became more numerous and pressing it was seen that the death rate would also be much higher than at first estimated. The police officials this evening say they believe it to be certain that the number of deaths would exceed 100, recalling the terrible fire at the Opera Comique.

Among the injured are the Duchesse de la Torre, the Princess Kotchoubut, the Vicomtesse d'Avenel and Mesdames Moreau, du Breuil, Malesieux, Eugene Challemel, Becanier and St. Didier.

WORSE AND WORSE.

General Mounier and Several Members of the French Nobility Dead.

The missing, who are said to be dead, include Gen. Mennier, the Marchioness de Gallifet, the Duchess d'Alencon, the Comtesses de Mun and St. Perier, the Marchioness de Flores, the Viscountess Humol Holstein, Baroness Mackan, wife of the leader of the pro-Raillists in the Chamber of Deputies, and Mme. Morlaunelamon, her son and four daughters.

One hundred corpses have now been laid out in the Palais de l'Industrie. It is believed that another hundred are beneath the ruins.

The building was erected in the flimsiest manner, the nudity of the scaffolding inside being concealed by tapestry hangings of the most inflammable material. Moreover, there was only one exit. The bazaar was in full swing, when suddenly, about 4 o'clock, the cry of fire arose in the quarter where the kinematograph was being exhibited.

One of the survivors tells the correspondent of the Associated Press his experience, as follows:

"The place was crammed full of people and the heat was stifling. Being very uncomfortable, my friends and I determined to leave, but somehow, we could not make much headway through the throng toward the door. I lagged a little behind, when suddenly the shout of fire was raised. Instantly all was commotion. We tried to keep cool, but the rush from behind forced us forward and we were separated. Then I tried to work my way back, but I was carried off my feet and carried backwards and forwards in the swaying crowd. All this happened in a few seconds. Immediately the full extent of the calamity dawned upon us all. The flames spread with startling rapidity through the whole building, which rumbled like a living furnace, but the uproar of the conflagration could not drown the groans and cries of the agonized crowd. Gradually I found myself pushed back against the wall of the building, and finally succeeded in scrambling through an opening made by some of those who were near by. Two seconds later I would have been a victim, for hardly had I struggled through the hole before I heard a dreadful crash as the blazing room fell in. The whole thing was over in 12 minutes and nothing remained but the charred and blackened ruins of the bazaar."

The dead were piled in heaps, especially near the exit, where the charred remains were five feet deep. In some cases only the trunks remained, with no vestige of clothing on any of the bodies.

The firemen arrived at 6 and a company of infantry followed to clear the ruins and search for corpses. All the Cabinet Ministers now in Paris went immediately to the scene.

Hundreds of equipages streamed along the Champs d'Elysees, their occupants with anxious and tear-stained faces enquiring for their relatives.

Policemen, their hands covered with gloves, have been deputed by the prefect of police to pick out the portions of remains and to wrap them in pieces of cloth, to be transferred in ambulances to the Palais de l'Industrie.

On all sides can be seen stretchers piled with mutilated corpses.

The correspondent of the Associated Press has had an interview with Mrs. Elsie Bushbeck of Philadelphia, who, with the Misses Hawthorne and Dreher, was one of the few who escaped, although not unscathed. Mrs. Bushbeck said:

"I was a saleswoman at booth No. 15, close to the place where the fire originated. In my booth four nuns presided. In the booth were also three blind girls working, one reading the blind alphabet, the other writing and the third making brushes. I started to look around the bazaar, and happening to turn round, I saw and called my friend's attention to a flicker in the corner of the wall about 15 yards away. Hardly had I done so, when a gentleman behind me cried, 'Fire! Ladies, hasten out,' and pushed me toward the door rather, but fortunately for me, roughly.

"As this was my second experience under such circumstances, I advised my two friends to raise their skirts in the front so they would not stumble over them. We were then just stepping on the first of three steps leading out of the building.

"Turning my head to look back, I saw the whole place in flames. At my left I caught a glimpse of an old lady emerging from an adjacent door and saw her stumble on her skirts. The next instant quite 20 persons piled on top of her. I crossed the street and turned round to face the fire, but already the heat was so intense that it scorched me and I was obliged to raise my hands to protect my face. When the roof fell in with a terrible crash, certainly not more than five minutes had elapsed from the first alarm. Such was the intensity of the heat that I saw a fireman's jacket ignite and several of the horses were badly singed. Out of the pile of persons who fell near the door, none were saved. All were burned in a moment. Of the nuns at my booth, two were saved, and one blind girl. The burned visitors were for the most part ladies, most gorgeously dressed."

The Duchesse d'Alencon, sister of the Austrian Empress, is among the injured.

In the streets adjacent to the bazaar were long lines of sumptuous equipages. The most of these returned empty; their owners were dead. The others were seen moving off with occupants injured in head or limb, and in many cases with faces streaming with blood.

The search in the debris will continue all night. It appears that the illuminating apparatus of the kinematograph exploded and set fire to the Turkish curtains and hangings. In a few moments the flames spread along the whole left side of the bazaar. The public threw themselves instinctively to the right side of the building, which backed on a high wall of an adjoining edifice. The bazaar, altogether, had eight doors, three in front and one on the left side. In the rear were four, like French windows, which were specially reserved for the employes. The crowd near the main entrances was able to escape, but those at the other end, not knowing of the doors reserved for the employes, found themselves hemmed in as in a cul de sac.

As the fire spread, the pressure on the right side, where there were no exits, kept steadily increasing. Here a number of the victims were crushed to death. Happily, the wall of the Hotel de Palais, against which the bazaar backed, furnished a barred window. The servants hurriedly broke the bars and were able to rescue a large number.

In the Avenue Montaigne, the Place Alma and the Rue Francois, adjacent streets, there was a veritable flight of maddened people, mostly women without skirts, petticoats or hats, their feet naked and their clothing either burned off or torn off. Every available fiacre was taken by assault.

Words would fail to describe the horror of the scene at the Palais de l'Industries, where the bodies are exposed on the side next to the Avenue Danton, in a portion of the building now in course of demolition. Here, in a large room, rudely covered with rough planks and on sheets hastily spread over planks, the bodies as they arrive from the ambulances are being placed in three long rows.

Six bodies have been recognized with certainty. They are the bodies of Mademoiselle Henriette Hinobsdal, Baroness Elizabeth St. Martin, Viscomtesse Marie Bonneval, Sister Guinoux, the Superior of the Sisters of the Convent of St. Vincent de Paul at Raley, Mdlle. de Graney and the Comtesse St. Perier. Other bodies supposed to be recognized are those of the Baroness St. Didier, Mme. Laurent Cosselin and Mdlle. Cherigny.

DEATH OF JOHN WHITE.

The Most Historic Character in the County of Halton Passes Away at the Great Age of 96 Years.

Milton, May 4.—John White, ex-M.P. for Halton, died last evening. He was born in Ireland in 1811, and came to Canada in 1823, settling first in Etobicoke and later in the County of Halton. He carried on an extensive lumbering business with his brother James and soon became the most influential man in the county. He was first elected to Parliament as a Liberal in 1851, and, with the exception of one term, sat continuously for the County of Halton in the old Parliament of Canada and the Dominion House until 1874, and for a number of years was Liberal whip. Of late years he was out of public life, but always took a keen interest in matters affecting the County of Halton. With his brother James he owned the Halton stables, and for a number of years their horses won the Queen's Plate. He was a man of good business ability, strict integrity and fearless in what he believed to be right, and never shirked a fight in behalf of that cause. In his death Halton loses its most historic character and his kindly disposition made him many friends, who mourn his loss.

A TERRIBLE TIME!

A Port Hope Lady Undergoes a trying experience, from which she is at last freed by the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This Is Home Talk From Home People.

Mr. F. J. Armstrong, one of Port Hope's best known citizens, speaks as follows:—"My wife has had a terrible time with her heart for the last fifteen months.

The pains were intense, and she had a smothering feeling together with shortness of breath, weakness and general debility. Medicine seemed to do her no good, and we had about given up trying when she started to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which she got at Deyell's Drug Store. They have toned her up wonderfully.

She is stronger to-day than she has been for months, thanks to Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I am sure there can be no better remedy from their remarkable effects in Mrs. Armstrong's case."

"Scandal"

It is not often that good is done by disseminating scandal, but the presentation by the Amateur Dramatic Club of "Scandal" has an object worthy of practical encouragement. "Scandal," the society comedy to be presented in the Opera House Thursday night, is one of two or three very successful comedies written by Miss Chadwick, of Toronto, and all have been most successful. The object of the entertainment is a most laudable one. After necessary expenses are met the surplus funds will be given to the Children's Aid Society, a most deserving charity. Thus the amateurs serve two good purposes—the development of our latent histrionic talent and the assistance of an organization which has no superior in its aims and effects.

OFF FOR ENGLAND.

An Old Peterborough Boy One of the Blest — The 57th to be Indirectly Represented on the Canadian Jubilee Force.

The Daily Graphic, of Portage la Prairie contains the following item referring especially to Mr. Alfred S. Brown, son of Mrs. Templeton Brown, of town:

"The matter which has been agitating the minds of the members of "B" troop and their friends for the past week has now been settled, and the man who are going to England in the jubilee batallion have been selected. While Captain Woodside was given full authority by Colonel Aylmer, Adjutant-General, who will command the force from Canada, to select the whole four, the officers of the troop here felt that it would be a graceful act to give their sister corps at Virden, "A" troop, Manitoba Dragoons, the choice of two men of the four. The commanding officer of "A" troop acknowledged the courtesy, and selected his best man, Sergt.-Major Joselin, to represent them. This left three men to be selected from "B" troop. The commanding officer, anxious that the best men should be picked, availed himself of the assistance of the troop committee, which represents each rank of the troop. The matter was fully debated, their views unanimously agreed, and he named the following men on the various claims of seniority, long service, capability, and representative quality, with merit: Sergt.-Major J. O. Williams, Sergt. Irvine R. Snider, Sergt. Alf. S. Brown.

"With so many qualified and good men to pick from, for this troop probably holds the record among Canadian cavalry for the number of certificate qualified men, it was not so easy a matter to narrow down to three, but we think when everything is fully considered, they are the best to represent our force. They are all pioneer Manitobans, they are all veterans in service although young men, they are smart and soldierly in uniform, are all good riders, crack rifle shots, including Sergt.-Major Joelin, of "A" troop, and are well up in their work. Their height in each case is over 5 feet 10 inches, and all come from families which have furnished plenty of good soldiers for their country.

"Sergeant Alfred S. Brown, quartermaster sergeant of the troop, is third on the list in seniority. He was born in Peterborough, Ont. Served in the 57th Battalion for three years. Came to Manitoba in the early eighties, has been connected with many survey parties from Winnipeg all over the west and Rockies. Joined the cavalry troop in 1893 and has taken a regular course in the Winnipeg Cavalry School, where he secured a certificate. Is an indefatigeable worker in the interests of the troop here and is especially adapted to the position he occupies in the troop."

It is expected that the squad will leave here about the first of June and will be away from five to six weeks.

THE MAJESTIC AFLOAT.

Launch of Mr. P. P. Young's New Stony Lake Steamer.

An event not only of special interest to the citizens of Young's Point, but to the people of Peterborough who frequent Stony Lake during the summer season, took place at the Point this morning.

The new steamer "Majestic," a short description of which appeared in yesterday's EXAMINER, was launched. There was a large attendance of spectators present, who as the white hull of the new steamer glided into the water sent up a hearty cheer. Mrs. P. P. Young, wife of the proprietor, broke the customary bottle of wine on the steamer's bow, naming her the "Majestic," which title the spectators considered she well deserved. As stated yesterday, she is a completely new craft. All the interior fittings are of the most modern and best character. The ever popular Capt. Scollard will walk the decks of the Majestic as Captain, and Mr. Ed. Young will act as mate.

Mr. Young will give the cottagers a complimentary run in a few days, of which due notice will be given.

Will Stay in Belleville.

The Belleville Sun says: As already announced, the Government has decided on the consolidation of the Kingston and Belleville weights and measures department into one, and has instructed Mr. Wm. Johnston, of this city, to take charge of both. It was practically decided to remove Mr. Johnston to Kingston, but his co-workers in Bridge street church decided not to let him go without an effort to keep him in the city. The result has been that the local Reform Association has taken the matter up and it has been arranged that the deputy will be a Kingston man, but Mr. Johnston remains in Belleville. The fact that a vacancy in the office would lead to the appointment of a local Liberal has also had its weight in securing strong advocacy of the proposal to keep the office in Belleville.

SHALL WE HAVE A MUSEUM?

CONFERENCE OF THE COUNCILLORS AND HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

The Premises at Nicholls Park Examined—The Claims of the Museum to Assistance Presented to the Councillors—No Action Taken, but Evident Good Impressions Created.

There was not an overflowing attendance at the joint meeting of the town council and Historical Society at Inverlea House, Nicholls Park, last night to confer upon the museum project. The council was represented by Messrs. J. E. McWilliams, James White and, towards the close of the conference, by Messrs. T. H. G. Deane and James Graham. The town clerk was also present. The members of the Historical Society present were Col. H. C. Rogers, President, and Messrs. T. A. S. Hay, secretary, Hampden Burnham, R. M. Denniston and F. R. Yokome.

The first business was to inspect the premises so kindly placed at the disposal of the Society by Mr. Richard Hall, and all were very much impressed with their suitability for the purposes of a museum. The rooms available on the first floor are the spacious entrance hall, 17x21 feet; the drawing room, 17x21; the library, 14x17 with permanent shelving at one end, and the dining room, 23x23 feet. On the second floor, reached by a spacious stairway from the entrance below, is a hall of similar size as the lower hall; besides the landing, affords considerable space for shelving and the disposition of curios.

The members impressed the advantages of these rooms upon the visiting councillors, and pointed out their excellent adaptability to the purpose, and explained that the society being without funds other than that derived from a small membership fee (which is only sufficient to meet current expenses) it was desirable that the council make a small grant to assist in putting the rooms in a condition for the reception of articles already available for the museum.

Mr. Hay, secretary, has prepared an estimate of the cost of ash shelving required to furnish the three rooms it is intended at present to utilize. This will cost about $200, and as lighting is necessary, it is estimated that an additional $50 will be required for putting in a satisfactory system of lighting—preferably electric. Therefore it was submitted that if the council made a grant of some $250, an excellent start could be made.

It was also impressed upon the councillors present that the proposed museum was to be a free resort to the public, and that in view of that the representatives of the people should be made shareholders, and that this could be done by the town practically taking it under their charge by the appropriation of the small sum mentioned as a beginning.

It would be a matter of much regret if, from the lack of a little financial assistance, the Historical Society should be compelled to abandon the establishment of a museum at Inverlea House, Nicholls Park. The society was not organized for this purpose. It was instituted with the object of collecting and preserving facts relating to the early history of the town and county, and for these purposes it is fairly well equipped. But when Mr. Hall generously placed Inverlea House at the disposal of the Society it was thought that the offer was too good a one not to be readily accepted. In accepting the responsibility the Society had to have some faith in the prospect of getting financial assistance in establishing a museum for the free use of the public and it seems that the most natural source to which to look for such aid is the regularly elected representatives of the people and the constituted custodians of the people's interests.

The museum project is exceedingly popular. The Historical Society has had most liberal and numerous offers of articles that would be of great interest to the museum. Mr. J. B. McWilliams has offered a fine collection of minerals and other objects of interest and Mr. J. M. Irwin has donated a similar collection. The latter's is already in the rooms at Inverlea House, contained in a cabinet also belonging to Mr. Irwin. This and the first cedar rib canoe made, presented by Mr. Geo. Dunsford, are the only articles in the building at present, it being impossible to place the others till proper shelving and other provision is made for their safe-keeping. From the numerous articles already available for the museum, and from the numerous offers made it is certain that the building proposed could be filled in a very short time with a fine collection of most interesting articles, and the sooner the museum is established the better its chances for securing a large collection. If we could receive them now, we might get valuable specimens from existing museums, especially from those in charge of the Provincial and Dominion Governments, which in their large collections have duplicates of interesting articles, which could doubtless be secured.

It would indeed be a pity if the fine building, so pleasantly situated, should not be made available for a museum. It is one of the finest of the series of parks which we owe to the munificence of the late Mrs. Nicholls, and its popularity as a resort, and its accessibility by the street car lines, together with the fine building already available, mark it as the ideal location of a public museum.

But unless the council, or some other body or persons, comes to the assistance of the society, the building remains on the society's hands as a responsibility of very little practical utility.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Arthur Strickland, Lakefield, was in town to-day.

Mr. Thos. Brooks, of the Lock Works, is in Ottawa on business.

Mr. D. W. Dumble is back at Stony Lake for a few days at his summer cottage.

Mr. W. Donnelly has returned home from Rochester, where he has been residing for the past year.

The eleven-year old son of Mr. Alex. Reid, who was kicked by a horse on Saturday last, is able to be out to-day, although he was quite delirious on Sunday through the effects of the injury.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Brown left this afternoon for an extended trip. They will visit the relatives of Mrs. Brown in Providence, Rhode Island, and afterwards go abroad. The trip will probably keep them away until fall.

Mr. Wm. Hayes, the well-known repairer of musical instruments, left this morning to take residence with his daughter in Parkdale, Toronto. Mr. Hayes will be greatly missed, as he was an exceedingly careful and expert repairer of musical instruments, especially stringed instruments. He has made outright many excellent violins.

A Growing Habit.

You have no doubt heard man say that they could regulate their drinking to a moderate amount, but this in ninety nine cases out of a hundred proves a dismal failure. The liquor habit grows and keeps growing. If you find it growing on you, now is the time to stop it. It can be done without interfering with your business. ANTI-BOOZE is put up in pill form and can be taken in one's food or drink, as it dissolves quickly. It builds up the system and makes a healthy man of a broken-nerved drunkard. It has proved successful in far advanced cases. We will send a box in sealed plain wrapper on receipt of $1.00. Oriental Chemical Co., St. Alexis street, Montreal.

ACCIDENT ON CHARLOTTE STREET.

An Electric Car Runs into a Buggy and Creates a Sensation.

Yesterday afternoon as a young lad was returning a horse and buggy to Wolstenholm's livery on Charlotte street he collided with car No. 4 and broke the shaft and front axle of the rig.

It appears that he was coming from the west on the north side of the car track and did not notice that a motor was running along just behind him.

When he attempted to cross the tracks into the livery stable yard, he observed that the car was almost upon him, and swerved the horse back to the north side of the track again, but he was unable to get the buggy entirely clear of the track before it was struck. Neither horse nor driver was in anyway injured.

LACROSSE.

A great joke is told concerning one of the last young defense players on the senior team. It is said that he participated in rather a lively practice on Monday evening last and fearful least the exertion should make him stiff, he rubbed himself down with liniment on his arrival home after practice. His dismay may be imagined when he discovered that after patiently rubbing himself for an hour or so, a glance at the bottle showed that a worm exterminator specific had been used instead of the liniment. This might have answered the purpose with a Port Hope player, but it wasn't needed with the aforesaid player.

BASEBALL.

Mr. Dan McCabe left this afternoon for Preston, where he will occupy the pitcher's box for the team of that town in its games in the Waterloo League. Dan is a steady, level-headed twirler and doubtless his services will prove most acceptable to the team he has identified himself with.

Fathers or Mothers.

Treat your boys to a nobby new suit. Teach them taste and economy by fitting them out for the season at the City Clothing Store. You can have your pick from a heaping stock of dressy new suits at special Easter prices. Bright new outfits for boys and youths is what we take pride in selling. Juvenile suits that last longer, fit neater, and look better than the general run. Our special Easter prices for two-piece suits are $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50, and are well worth your quick investigation. For three-piece suits for youths, the prices are $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 and up to $7.00. We like mothers to visit our store and do their buying personally. Fair, square prices for reliable children's and youths' clothing can be counted on every time you buy here. We ask the men to see our large assortment of popular selections in spring tweed and cloths for ordered suits and spring overcoats. We turn out the finest and lowest-priced spring clothing for men that ever left the tailors' lap. You also find every good kind of ready-to-wear clothing in spring suits and overcoats. Stacks of them to select from that will please and fit you, made by men that knew how. Men's serge suits as low as $3, $4, $5 and up to $8. Tweed suits as low as $3.50, $4, $5 and up to $10. Fine black worsted suits at $8, $10 and $12. See our attractive window display of handsome Easter neckwear and furnishings—the latest out—right in style and the "top-notch" novelties of the day. THE COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS, through its chairman, Dr. Burnham, recommended:

That the following changes be made in the salary schedule of the Public Schools:

For the purpose of this schedule the Inspector shall three times a year, in December, April and June, make to the Board an official report on each teacher's efficiency in discipline and teaching power.

In the report for June each teacher shall be placed in one or the other of the following grades:—1, Excellent; 2, Good; 3, Fair; and any teacher failing to qualify in any of these grades render themselves liable to be dropped from the staff.

The maximum and minimum salaries shall remain as at present, and all increases or reductions shall be determined by the grading of the teachers (headmaster or assistants) as follows:

Grade 1—Increase $25.00 annually.
" 2— " $12.50 "
" 3—No increase; if at maximum reduced $25 annually.

The whole grading to be subject to the approval of the Board in Committee of the Whole, and shall not take effect until July 1st, 1897.

Adopted.

THE FINANCE COMMITTEE

THE PROPERTY COMMITTEE,

through its chairman, Mr. J. J. McBain, reported,

That they considered James Russell's application for an increase of salary, and in view of the fact that we are likely in the near future to be compelled to open the other class room in the George street school, and as the grounds are prominently situated it is important that the corner and the property be kept neat and tidy, and this will require extra labour on the part of the janitor; we would therefore recommend that his salary be increased $50 a year to date, beginning May 1st, providing that he performs all his duties in a satisfactory manner.

As your Property Committee learned from your Inspector and Principals of the different Public Schools and Institute, as well as by personal observation, that all of the blackboards (with the exception of the slate) were out of order and required immediate attention, your Committee, after due consideration, arranged with Mr. Francisco to do the entire blackboards with three coat work, to make new boards complete in the vacant room at the George street school, for the sum of $100; this sum to include the cost of all material.

The entire work to be completed to the satisfaction of the chairman of the Property Committee, the inspector and the Principal of the Collegiate.

Mr. Francisco guarantees the work to remain satisfactory for three years from completion of same.

Mr. Francisco has done considerable work for the Board in the past, and the same has always proved as represented.

As the ventilation and air has been bad in some of the rooms in the South Ward school since the additions have been built, which is a serious matter and a detriment to the health of the pupils and teachers, your committee consulted Mr. Blackwell, and on his recommendation we have arranged to have a new cold air duct built and placed in from the furnace under the floor to the outside wall where there will be an opening and a window put in from which there can be a fresh supply of air obtained.

This, we believe, will overcome the difficulty and add greatly to the purity of the air and ventilation which is so much desired. The above mentioned work to be completed at a total cost of $35.

We would recommend that the usual grant of $5 be made to the West Ward school for flowers for the beds.

Adopted.

THE VISITING COMMITTEE,

through its chairman, Mr. W. B. Bamford, reported:

That on the 23rd and 26th of March last they visited the different schools of the town and found (with a few exceptions) everything in first-class order.

The buildings are kept neat and tidy and the ventilation and heating appeared to be satisfactory. The rooms, especially in the lower grade, were all well filled.

At the Central school the outlets from the down pipes are blocked and the water cannot get away readily. The gymnasium had an untidy appearance, the walls are dirty, ventilation bad, sweepings and rubbish piled at the back door. The mattresses and the leather covering of the swinging recess are worn out, the windows are boarded up and would look better if the boards were removed and wire screens put on.

The Collegiate Institute was in good order, with the exception of some water from the roof on the west basement floor, and the upper floors were very dusty with chalk dust.

The Monitor school was in first-class order.

The North Ward was also in first-class order, with the exception of the basement, where the children play at recess time. The dust from the floor rises thickly, and we are of the opinion that hardwood floors are more satisfactory and would be an improvement. This school has no gong.

The South Ward was in exceptionally good order, no water in the cellar and everything neat and clean. The doors in the building have shrunk and need fixing. The brickwork on the top of the chimneys is loose and needs repairing.

The South Central required some repairing to the ventilation in one or two rooms on the west side of the building—the air was not good; everything else first-class.

The painted blackboards in all the schools were more or less worn out.

On the whole the schools are in good condition and much better than when visited by the same committee last year.

Your committee was impressed with the good appearance and the quality of the fuel on hand.

Adopted.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

Dr. Caldwell reported for a Special Committee as follows:

Your committee appointed to disburse the three hundred and thirty dollars granted to the widow of the late Inspector, beg to report as follows:

The amount was placed to the joint credit of the committee in the Savings Bank and was paid over to her from time to time in such amounts as she desired as per the following statement:

On motion of Messrs. W. H. Hill and Robert Fair, the secretary was instructed to write to the Department of Education, asking that the Matriculation; Senior Leaving and Scholarship examinations be written in Peterborough this year under the same conditions as formerly.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

Mr. D. Walker, Inspector, submitted the following report:

It is satisfactory to note the increase in the total number of pupils on the roll, and in the average attendance, for the month of April. It is also a satisfaction to find the number of "late" has been about one-half that reported for any previous month this year. One school, George street, has had the good fortune of having no "lates" for the entire month.

The attendance is now severely taxing the accommodation provided, there being but three rooms with small classes and only twelve rooms containing "the cubic contents of 250 feet for each pupil in average attendance" for the month of April.

Since the last meeting of the Board I made my first official inspection of the schools and have prepared a report on the efficiency of each teacher, which report I beg to present beneath for the consideration of the proper committee.

In reporting on the school buildings I should grade the South Central and North Ward schools as good, the Central and George street schools as fair, and the West Ward school as poor.

The West Ward school is in as good a state of repair as perhaps it can well be placed, but it has little to commend it for school purposes. Its rooms are small, its ceilings low, its halls and stairways narrow. There are neither cloak rooms nor play rooms, and the system of heating and ventilating are hardly up to date.

Were it possible to permit it, the two rooms in the basement of the Central school should not be used for classrooms, but rather converted into play rooms for the smaller children, more especially during the winter months. In connection with the school it might not be out of place to suggest that the Board provide at an early date more convenient water closets than those used at present.

Of the work done in the class room by the teachers and pupils during my inspection it gives me pleasure to report favourably. It was impossible to examine all the subjects taught in any one grade or indeed in any one subject in all the grades. It will be necessary, therefore, for me to confine my remarks to writing, reading, arithmetic and drawing. The writing was most satisfactory. It was neat, clean and elegible and almost every teacher was able to show good writers. The reading ranks second to writing for for favourable mention. Most pupils read fluently and with good expression, but nearly all show a deficiency in clear distinct enunciation, on account of which it is quite difficult to understand a pupil even though he speak in a tone sufficiently loud. In arithmetic all teachers, those of primary grades more especially ought to give the closest attention to methods calculated to make their pupils accurate. It is a very rare thing indeed for a whole class to obtain the correct result of a purely mechanical problem of average difficulty. For all to obtain a wrong result is not so rare. The subject of drawing as generally taught is quite unsatisfactory and has very little educative value. True, very fine, neat, almost perfect work can be found in the drawing books, placed there by the pupil at the suggestion of the teacher and with the aid of measuring or testing papers. Such work is profitless, however, not being the product of the pupil's own mental activity, nor affording a proper training for either hand or eye.

The discipline throughout the schools is generally good and it is a pleasure to note the kindly relations existing between the teachers and their pupils. This cannot fail to have the effect of producing good manners, and creating courtesy—traits in the pupil's character as much to be desired as the progress in his studies.

Received.

The Board then adjourned.

Prominent Business Man of Peterborough Cured of Eczema.

Mr. Thos. Gladman, bookkeeper for Adam Hall, esq., stove and tinware dealer, Peterborough, writes the following facts:—"Have been troubled for nine years with Eczema on my leg, and at times the itching was something terrible; tried many eminent doctors and was pronounced incurable. I had given up hopes of ever being cured when I was recommended by Mr. Madill, druggist, to try a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I am happy to testify that after using two boxes I am completely cured.

MEETING OF THE ASHBURNHAM SCHOOL BOARD.

A Jubilee Tree to be Planted on Arbor Day—Truants to be Looked After.

The regular meeting of the Ashburnham school board was held last evening with Mr. F. Adams, the chairman, presiding, and the following members present: Messrs. Sheridan, Pollock, Manlece, Symonds and Agnew.

THE HEADMASTER'S REPORT was submitted as follows, on the attendance:—

	On Roll.	Ave.	%
Miss Dawson	48	40	84
" Erskine	40	32	77
" Fitzgerald	35	30	87
" Stevenson	43	35	84
Mr. Matchett	49	46	94
	223	189	85

The account of Wm. Campbell for shade trees, $2.50, was ordered to be paid.

The matter of the Jubilee celebration was brought up and it was decided that a Jubilee tree be planted on Arbor Day, or immediately thereafter.

The attendance since Easter has increased to a marked degree, and the board directed that the new truant officer appointed by the council be especially strict during the next few months.

Baby Eczema and Scald Head.

Infants and young children are peculiarly subject to this terrible disorder, and if not promptly arrested it will eventually become chronic. Dr. Chase made a special study of Eczema and disease of the skin, and we can confidently recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure all forms of Eczema. The first application soothes the irritation and puts the little sufferer to rest.

SICK NURSING.

MRS. W. S. SCOTT

Is open for engagements as Sick Nurse. Terms on application at her residence, No. 71 Westcott Street. 204fs

The physical existence of mankind is something like an account in a ledger. Health on one side—disease on the other. All the pure air, good food, rational exercise and sound sleep go on one side of the account. It sums up health and strength. On the other side, are bad air, poor food, overwork and worry. That foots up weakness and disease.

When your appetite or sleep is disturbed; when the stomach and liver are not working properly, or the bowels are not in regular condition; you are losing vitality and strength; figures are going down on the wrong side of the ledger. Unless this is stopped and the other side of the account is built up, you'll soon be a physical bankrupt.

The most profitable account a sick man can open in his Ledger of Life is with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a wonderful and scientific tonic which imparts a direct and healthy stimulus to the entire nutritive organism. It strengthens the digestive fluids and the liver, and enables the blood-making organs to produce pure, red, highly-vitalized blood.

It is not a mere temporary exhilarator. It feeds the constitution with genuine, permanent power. It writes big, round sums on the health side of the account, and wipes out the figures of weakness and disease. It animates the vital forces and builds up healthy flesh, muscular energy and nerve-force.

For nearly 30 years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. His formulas are everywhere recognized as the most effective remedies in the world. His "Pleasant Pellets" are the most perfect and scientific cure for constipation ever invented. They are not violent in their action, but perfectly sure, and at the same time comfortable. Their great reputation has called out a score of imitations, which druggists sometimes try to substitute, but there is nothing "just as good."

DR. SLACK PARDONED.

Sir Oliver Mowat Extends Clemency Because the Embezzler of Farnham is in Poor Health.

Montreal, Que., May 2.—Dr. Slack, the Conservative candidate in Missisquoi in the Dominion elections, who subsequently embezzled a large amount belonging to his sister's estate, and went to jail six months ago for a term of 24 months, has been pardoned by Sir Oliver Mowat on the plea of sickness. The Doctor went to his home in Farnham on Saturday.

Who Is This?

Buffalo, May 3.—The body of the man who was found a week ago last Saturday lying with a fractured skull beside the New York Central track at the foot of Hudson street, has not yet been claimed. It is that of a young man about 23 or 24 years old, with dark, closely cropped hair, blue eyes and fair skin, about 5 feet 7, weight about 140 pounds. On the back of the right hand, between the thumb and index finger, there is an anchor tatooed.

BUTCHERED OR BURNED?

We read with horror of the cruelty and butcheries of Gen. Weyler in the fair Isle of Cuba, but little reck we of the ravages of that more direful King of Grave Fillers, KIDNEY DISEASE, here in our midst.

People of high and low degree drop into graves on all sides of us daily from Kidney Trouble. We incur it ourselves. We encourage it. We do everything but cure it.

Yet there is a cure, pleasant as a May morning. Sure as fate. Infallible as heredity. Before this wonderful remedy, the agonizing tortures of Kidney Ills vanish like a snowflake in a fiery furnace.

This cure, of which we sound the praises, is DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS. Yet not alone we, but everyone who has tried them. One hundred per cent. of cures we record. Here are examples:

W. F. Smith, 16 Carrol Street, Toronto, says:—"I have taken eight boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills which have cured me of Heart Trouble, Pain in the Back and Dizziness, after other treatments had failed."

D. J. Kenney, Queen's Hotel, Mount Forest, says:—Have suffered greatly from Nervousness, but information as to the effects of Dodd's Kidney Pills in such cases led me to use them, with the result that I am cured."

Louis H. Bounsall, 573 King East, Toronto, says:—"Had been troubled for several months with pain in my Back and Kidneys which prevented my entering in bicycle events, but am in the ring once more after using three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. James Stokes, Deseronto, Ont., says: From the first box taken of Dodd's Kidney Pills I found relief, and hundreds here, knowing me for the past fifteen years, can vouch for my cure of long standing Kidney Trouble.

Transplanting Evergreens.

There is a saying among horticulturists that evergreens are better transplanted late in the spring than earlier. It is true that, as a rule, evergreens can be transplanted much later than deciduous trees; but it is not correct that they are more successful when planted late than when given an early chance. Indeed, most kinds of evergreens, especially of the family of the true pines, cannot be planted too early in the season. The larch is not a pine, although of the coniferous family, and this especially demands early planting.

Oscar Wilde Let Loose Again.

London, May 2.—Oscar Wilde was released from Portland Prison yesterday. He was in excellent health. He has been employed latterly in book binding in the mornings and garden work in the afternoon, and is quite recovered from the shaken condition of a year ago. It is understood that he will go to Italy.

"Not Exactly Right."

Thousands of people are in this condition. They are not sick and yet they are by no means well. A single bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla would do them a world of good. It would tone the stomach, create an appetite, purify and enrich the blood and give wonderful vigor and vitality. Now is the time to take it.

Hood's Pills cure nausea, sick headache, indigestion, biliousness. All druggists. 25c.

Nature's Medicine.

Natures medicine for constipation, liver complaint, sick headache, biliousness, jaundice and sallow complexion is Laxa Liver Pills. They are a perfect laxative, never griping or causing pain. One pill each night for 30 days will cure constipation.

That hacking cough can be quickly cured by Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. Price 25c.

VICTORIA HOLIDAY.

Some Opposition Developed Among the Senators

TO THE MAKING OF IT PERPETUAL

Hon. Messrs. Scott and Allan Favored the Idea, But Some of the French Members Raised Objections—Senator Almon Withdrew His Motion and the Bill Went.

Ottawa, May 3.—(Special.)—Senator McDonald's bill to make the Queen's Birthday a perpetual holiday, to be known as Victoria Day, was opposed to-day. The debate was begun by Mr. Almon of Halifax, who moved that the committee rise and report progress, when the adoption of the first clause was moved. He had no fault to find with the sentiment of loyalty in which the bill was conceived, but thought that a measure of this kind should originate in the lower House and should come from a member of the Government. It was a kind of left-handed compliment to pay the Queen for this Parliament to decree that her birthday should be observed as a holiday after her death; and, besides, there was some doubt as to the right of Parliament to legislate for posterity. In addition to all this he thought it unfair to allow the burden of this tax to fall upon the laboring classes, who in Canada already had more holidays than they wanted.

Senator Scott thought it would be extremely unfortunate at the present time to kill the bill in committee, after having affirmed its principles by allowing a second reading. He could see no impropriety in Parliament passing such a measure, and so far as the holiday being observed after the demise of the Queen was concerned, he pointed out that the national day of George III. was observed during the reign of William III. and George IV., and even during the first years of Victoria's reign. It was only in 1850 that the 24th of May was recognized as a public holiday in Canada. He pointed out the vast importance and significance of the glorious reign of Queen Victoria to Canada, and expressed the hope that Parliament would adopt this happy method of expressing the loyalty of the Canadian people to the person of Her Majesty in this her jubilee year.

Senator Allan spoke strongly in favor of the bill, after which Senator Loughreed, speaking against the bill, thought the question not so much one of loyalty as of expediency. The issue was whether it was best in the interests of Canada to enact such legislation. The admission that the bill could be repealed at any time by posterity was in itself an admission of inexpediency. It was a serious thing for Parliament to say that for all time the business of the country should be tied up for 24 hours every year. Then it must be borne in mind that this tax, and the inconvenience, would fall upon the laboring classes.

Senator Clemow was surprised that the bill should cause any discussion. He had hoped that it would pass without a dissenting voice. There was not a workingman in Canada who would not welcome such a holiday.

Senator Poirier said the question was a delicate one, more so for a French-Canadian than for those of English origin. There was no precedent in history for such legislation, and in passing the bill he was afraid Parliament was establishing a ridiculous precedent. Such legislation, if wise at all, should originate in England.

Senator Vidal could see no force in the objections urged against the bill. If the observance of the holiday was such a great inconvenience as alleged why was it observed now?

Senator Prowse said it was all very well for the Senate to talk about adding to the already long list of public holidays. It represented the wealthier classes in the country and could, without inconveniencing itself, make every day a holiday. The bill should have been introduced in the Commons, which more nearly represented the working classes, who would be most affected by the proposed legislation.

Senator Mills thought that instead of minimizing the functions of the Senate they ought to be enlarged. There was already an impression abroad that the Senate represented nobody. To still further reduce the scope of its powers might lead to an agitation for its abolition as a useless body. He pointed out that the object of such holidays was to develop a feeling and spirit of loyalty and patriotism. In view of all the good Canada had reaped from the beneficent reign of Queen Victoria, the observance of her birthday by posterity would tend to inculcate a respect and veneration for the principles of English Parliamentary Government, which had come to Canada during her reign. He was astonished at the anxiety of the Senators to protect posterity and, though he doubted not their loyalty, he was forced to confess that they had a strange way of showing it.

Senator Dever was opposed to the bill as an unjust tax on the laboring classes.

Senator Almon withdrew his motion, saying he feared his stand against the bill would be misinterpreted.

The bill then passed through the committee stages and received a third reading.

When fevers and other epidemics are around, safety lies in fortifying the system with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A person having thin and impure blood, is in the most favourable condition to "catch" whatever disease may be floating in the air. Be wise in time.

TURNING GRAY
AND THREATENED
WITH BALDNESS
The Danger is Averted by Using
AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. Hearing Ayer's Hair Vigor highly spoken of, I commenced using this preparation, and was so well satisfied with the result that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good, natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HAIGHT, Avoca, Neb.

PLANS TO COOL MILK.

HOW HOARD'S DAIRYMAN HELPS EVEN THE CITY RETAILER.

The Latter's Proposed Methods—Saving Effected by the Plans Outlined by Prof. F. H. King—A Subject of General Dairy Interest.

As the warm season is coming, Mr. O. B. Schier, of Baltimore, Md., questions Hoard's Dairyman somewhat about a cooling system which he is contemplating to put up for use during the next summer.

The milk from our farms, says Mr. Schier, which, previous to its shipment has been cooled by means of a Star Milk Cooler to about 54 to 55 degrees, reaches us, due to the gain of temperature to and over the railroad, with about 60 to 65 degrees, sometimes even as high as 70. All our business is done in quart and pint bottles and we find it absolutely necessary to get the milk in the bottles as cold as possible. As soon as it reaches us and has passed the filter, we cool all milk again by letting it run over a pipe cooler and would prefer to bring it down as low as 38 or 40 degrees.

During the past year we used to make ice water in a big barrel, placed on the roof of our dairy and well insulated against outside temperature. The water for this purpose was taken from the city supply and shows in the warm time a temperature as high as 70 to 80 degrees, which necessitates, in the first place, the use of a considerable amount of ice to reduce this temperature to the required one. The water being cooled, passed through the cooler by its natural fall, entering it at the bottom pipe and leaving it the top, to be carried away to the sewer.

Now this seems to me a great waste of cold storage, and I had an idea that we may do better by the plant. To put up a refrigerating machine is, for several reasons, (one of which is the first expense), not well possible at the present time, so I fell on the next best thing, in my opinion, still I don't know if I am right and to tell me whether I am or not is what I request from The Dairyman and its readers, some of whom may have some experience in this line, viz., a cold brine circulating system.

My intention is to build a well insulated wooden tank, having a double air space, lined with galvanized iron, 108 inches long, 16 inches wide and 36 inches deep containing 26 1-4 cubic feet, or 273.3-4 gallons.

Through the top of the tank I intend to pass 4 cans of galvanized iron, each 7x8 inches and 30 inches deep, displacing 12 1-2 cubic feet or 93 3-4 gallons, and capable of taking 760 pounds of ice, offering a cooling surface to the brine of 43 1-3 square feet. After the cans are placed in their proper position there would be room in the tank for 180 gallons of brine.

The amount of milk to be cooled in the morning is about 160 gallons; that of the evening about 140 gallons. The tank shall be connected by means of a brine pump with the cooler, so that the pump, taking away the brine from the tank near the bottom, forces the cold brine through the cooler and aerator and discharges it from there back into the tank on the other end about 2 feet above the bottom. To cause the brine to come in all its parts in connection with the cooling cans in its circulation through the tank as much as possible, the cans are fastened alternately to the one and the other long sides of the tank as shown in the cut, by means of dividing sheets.

Fig. 1b.—Transverse cross section through tank and can.

We used in the last year 106 tons of ice from April till November, at an expense of $450—the month of August, figuring at the highest with 19 1-2 tons. Part of this ice is used to make the ice water, and the rest was broken up in small pieces and put around the bottles during transportation.

As you see, my leading idea in using the brine circulating system is to save those cold units which remain in the fluid after passing through the cooler and which are now lost by running away with the waste water. Now I wish to know, first, if the saving is cold storage will justify us to go to an expense of about $120 to $130?

Second, I would be obliged for a correct answer how the cooling cans should be arranged; if they should have a drain pipe in connection with a water tank in order to carry the melted water from the ice away as produced, or if the melted water, which as I have been taught, has a temperature of 32 degrees as long as not all the ice is melted should be kept in the cans as a cooling agent for the brine, until the ice is all melted, in which case the drain pipe may be closed up by means of a ground stopper as used in wash-basins, etc.?

Third, if any ventilation of the box is necessary to let the warm air escape, and how this should be arranged? Shall there be some small openings in the tops of each can (cooling cans) or must those be closed up hermetically? Or shall there be some openings in that part of the top of the box that covers the brine? Or, finally, shall there be no openings at all?

Prof. F. H. King's Remarks.

Wishing to get the best possible criticism on the plans above proposed, Hoard's referred them to Prof. F. H. King, and gives his reply below:

In complying with your request to answer the queries of your correspondent, Mr. O. B. Schier, since the question must be one of general interest to your readers, permit me to deal with his problem from the standpoint of the underlying principles which he rightly proposes to utilize.

The idea of returning the water to the ice or cooling tank, represented in figure 1, as he describes, after the milk has been cooled with it to 38 degrees rather than allowing it to run to waste, means a saving of as many cooling units per pound of water used as the difference between the temperature of the water supply and 38 degrees, which in your correspondent's case is about 53—38—34, because if he cools his milk to 38 degrees with cold water or brine, the water must leave the milk at 38 degrees to be returned to the cooling chamber, or to run to waste as the case may be.

Now, to circulate the cold brine round and round through his milk cooler and ice tank, means to utilize the whole number of cooling units in the ice consumed, less the necessary loss which is incurred in the process of circulation.

Your correspondent proposes to cool about 1250 pounds of milk twice daily from 65 to 70 degrees down to 38 degrees, using ice. How much ice is necessary to do this work?

In round numbers, one pound of ice in melting yields 142 cooling units, and the melted pound of water at 32 degrees will yield six units more if the milk is allowed to bring its temperature up to 38 degrees. Under these conditions, then, each pound of ice will yield, where there is no loss, 142—6—148 cooling units. To cool one pound of milk from 70 degrees down to 38 degrees requires removal of 70—38—32 units of heat. One pound of ice therefore, has cooling units enough to cool nearly 148 divided by 32—4.63 pounds of milk from 70 to 38 degrees. Then to cool 1250 pounds of milk from 70 degrees to 38 degrees will require 1250 divided by 4.63—270 pounds of ice. The least amount of ice your correspondent can use daily, then, for 2500 pounds of milk will be 270 x 2—540. He states that he uses ice from April to November, or 214 days. In cooling 2500 pounds milk daily from 70 degrees to 38 degrees with ice during 214 days the least amount of ice which can be used to do the work will be 540 x 214—115,560 pounds, or about 58 tons.

Your correspondent states that he used 106 tons from April to November last year in cooling his milk and in packing about his bottles for transportation. If he can estimate what part of the 106 tons was actually used in cooling the milk he will then be able to see what his actual loss has been and how great a saving might be incurred provided there was no loss. At the rate he says his ice cost him $450 for 106 tons. The foregoing cost would be $346.22. The foregoing will, I think, enable your correspondent to judge for himself whether his proposed plan will be much improvement over the one he has been using.

Second question. His cooling cans should be made to retain all of the water melted until that water must be drawn off to make room for the next charge of ice, but it is important that the brine in his tank be kept a little higher than the water and ice in the ice cans, because the coldest part of his ice tanks is in their upper section. He should also draw his brine off to his milk cooler from the top.

Third question. The brine tank should be constructed as nearly air tight as possible and so good a non-conductor of heat as to waste through its walls the least number of cooling units. For the ice tanks I see no need of covers at all for them, if they are short enough to be covered by the single lid of the brine tank. It will be very important to construct the bottom of the brine tank and the lid also, as well as the ends and sides, on the refrigerator plan. Otherwise there would be a large waste of ice through both the top and bottom.

It seems to the writer that a modification of your correspondent's plan is likely to prove more effective, more economical and more durable. One phase of the modification which I have in mind is represented in figure 2. It consists of a refrigerator ice chest, 20 inches by 30 inches by 60 inches long, inside measure inside of which there is placed a brine coil made of two-inch galvanized iron pipe, in which the brine is made to circulate by means of a pump as your correspondent proposes. The refrigerator chest, lined of course with galvanized iron and water tight, would be filled with broken ice and water. Unless there is some other need of the cooling device than that of cooling the milk morning and night, the greatest economy would be reached in simply charging the cooler with the amount of ice needed to do the morning work with a surplus sufficient to keep the body of the cooler down to near 40 degrees.

The brine should enter the cooler at the bottom, where the water is warmest, and leave the coil after passing through the upper tier of pipes last, where the water is coldest. It must be understood that water at 32 degrees, as well as ice, is lighter than water at 40 degrees, and will remain at the top of the tank with the ice. Only enough water should be drawn out of the tank to make room for the new charge of ice, and usually this should not be withdrawn until the time for re-charging, just before the cooler is to be used.

A cooler constructed on this principle cannot give the cheapest possible arrangement for cooling milk by means of ice. The cheapest device, everything considered, where a permanent outfit is to be erected, would be one which utilized the cooling power of the ice without the labor and losses of rehandling the ice after it has been stored. In other words, where ice is available, there should be an ice-house or ice storage chamber so situated with reference to the cooling room that the bottom of this ice store house may be provided with a coil of galvanized iron pipe, upon which the ice of the whole storage chamber rests directly. Then as the cooling brine is circulated through this coil upon which the ice rests, it would withdraw from the ice so many cooling units as is needed to do the work with no other labor than simply pumping the brine through this refrigerating coil and the milk cooler. I represent in figure 3, a diagram illustrating this idea. It will be seen that such a plan would allow the ice to settle down upon the cooling coil as rapidly as it is melted and the water so melted should be drawn off and could be used for refrigerating purposes as well as the brine.

Delay Means Death.
One Dose Relieves—A Few Bottles Always Cure.

"For ten years I have suffered greatly from heart disease. Fluttering of the heart, palpitations and smothering spells have made my life miserable. When dropsy set in my physician said I must prepare my family for the worst. All this time I had seen Dr. Agnew's Heart Cure advertised. As a last resort I tried it and think of my joy when I received great relief from one dose. One bottle cured my dropsy, and brought me out of bed, and five bottles have completely cured my heart. If you are troubled with any heart affection, and are in despair, as I was, use this remedy, for I know it will cure you."—Mrs. MRS ADAMS Syracuse, N. Y. Sold by H. H. McDonald

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT!
The Mason & Risch Piano Co. L'td.
Beg to announce that they have assumed the Agency for Central and Western Ontario of the Pianos manufactured by Chickering & Sons, Boston.
It would be superfluous to make extended reference to the reputation of this famous house, or to the pianofortes manufactured by them. It is sufficient to say that for three quarters of a century they have occupied the position of absolute leaders in Musical Art manufacture, and their reputation was at no time greater than it is at present.
INTENDING PURCHASERS OF PIANO
Now have the choice in our warerooms of goods manufactured by the acknowledged leaders of the American and Canadian trade. The association of such instruments as Chickering & Sons and Mason & Risch Pianos beneath one roof forms a unique combination.
AS TO PRICES!
Pianos of high artistic merit must of necessity cost more than poorer instruments, but there is no question of the direction in which true economy lies. As an evidence of this it may be mentioned that the first Piano manufactured by Chickering & Sons 73 ago is still in an excellent state of preservation, and Pianos made by Mason & Risch over 20 years ago scarcely show any sign of wear. REV. C. B. KENRICK.

His Services in Port Hope are Appreciated.

At the Vestry meeting of St. Mark's church, Port Hope, the following resolution was moved by Mr. H. A. Ward, seconded by Mr. E. B. Andros, and carried unanimously, "That we, the members of the Vestry of St. Mark's church, desire to express our sincere appreciation of the great services rendered to the old church by the rector, Rev. C. B. Kenrick, during the two years of his incumbency. We are fully sensible that the great work accomplished has been almost entirely owing to his untiring and self-denying efforts and we cannot allow this opportunity to pass without tendering to him our congratulations upon the success attending his labours amongst us. We further desire to extend through Mr. Kenrick to his mother, our grateful acknowledgment of her most generous contribution to the restoration fund of the church. This munificent gift will remove a burden from the congregation which would have been felt for years to come, and we cannot too highly estimate the timely aid given by Mrs. Kenrick. That the Vestry clerk be instructed to send copies of this resolution to Rev. C. B. Kenrick and Mrs. Kenrick."

WARSAW QUARTERLY BOARD.

A Pastor's Services Heartily Appreciated.

The Quarterly Board of the Methodist church of Warsaw circuit in requesting their pastor to return for a second year, which request was unanimously carried, also carried the following resolution: Moved and seconded that this Quarterly Board desires to express to our pastor, Rev. Geo. Robinson, now at the close of his first year, a sense of our appreciation of the valuable service he has rendered on this charge since his arrival in our midst, for by an able and judicious management of all temporal matters in building up the charge he has proven a great success and by faithful pastoral visitation, as well as sound and eloquent pulpit ministration, he has contributed to our intellectual and spiritual welfare and largely increased congregations are the result of his labours. The motion was unanimously carried. Dr. Couch was elected delegate to the district meeting and conference.

SKIN HUMOR ON BABY

Head and Entire Body Covered. Itching Intense, Would Scratch Till Blood Came.

Had to Put Mittens on His Hands To Keep Him from Tearing His Skin.

One Application of CUTICURA Soothes Him to Sleep. Complete Cure.

When my little boy was about three months old his head broke out with a rash, which was very itchy and ran considerable watery fluid. We tried everything we could, but he got worse all the time till it spread to his arms, legs, and then to his entire body, and he got so bad that he came near dying. The rash would itch so that he would scratch till the blood ran, and a thin, yellowish stuff would be all over his pillow in the morning. I had to put mittens on his hands to keep him from tearing his skin around his wrists. He got so weak and run down that he took fainting spells like we would think him dying. He was almost a skeleton, and his little hands were thin like claws.

He was laid about eight months when we tried CUTICURA REMEDIES. I had not laid him down in his cradle in the day time for a long time. He had got so that he just slept in our arms all the time. I washed him with CUTICURA SOAP, and put on one application of CUTICURA, and he was so soothed that I put him in his cradle. You don't know how glad I felt he felt better. It took one box of CUTICURA, pretty near one cake of CUTICURA SOAP, and about half a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT to cure him. I think our little boy would have died only for CUTICURA REMEDIES, and I shall always remain a firm friend of them. MRS. M. O. MAITLAND, Jasper, Ont.

Among the pillows, chaste and white,
A fading form lay;
While round about in raptures wild
The fluttering angels stay.

Dear father, brothers, sisters, all,
Think not of her as dead;
But as a long imprisoned bird
Now with its playmates fled.

Behold the golden gates roll back,
And in triumph borne home;
The angel yields her cherished prize

A Voice from Virden.

GENTLEMEN,—I have used Hagyard's Yellow Oil for the past ten years, and find it a splendid remedy for colic, neuralgia, bronchitis, croup, pains in the back, ulcerated and sore throat, sprains, chilblains, etc., in fact we use it for almost every pain, and it always relieves quickly. I can safely say I know of no other remedy of the sort that can equal it. We always keep a good stock in the house.

OMEMEE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The roads and fields are in a very poor condition now, preventing farmers from furthering spring operations for a time. The fall wheat is all being ploughed up. Quite a quantity of sowing is done.

John Bannon, one of our old settlers, after a lingering illness, died on Saturday last. The funeral was largely attended on Monday. The deceased leaves a widow and five sons and two daughters to mourn his loss.

There have been continued attacks of la grippe up to the present, and children are suffering very much. Dr. Thompson is kept busy day and night.

Our new cheese factory received the first delivery of milk on Monday.

There are a few of our farmers grumbling about the new tariff arrangements—more particularly about American corn being allowed in free of duty. Others say

PARIS IN MOURNING.

The Charity Bazaar Calamity Was Terrible.

ONE HUNDRED AND ELEVEN DEAD

The Fatal List Shows That the Aristocratic People Made Up the Bulk of the Victims—Searching the Ruins for More—Some Awful Sights Witnessed.

Paris, May 5.—The terrible fire at the Grand Bazar de Charite has thrown the French capital into mourning. The conflagration is now believed to have caused the loss of over 200 lives. As this despatch is sent, early Wednesday morning, 111 charred corpses have been recovered, together with twelve portions of bodies whose identity may never be established.

Since 5 o'clock this morning crowds of people have been flocking to the Palais de l'Industrie, where many of the bodies and a large number of the injured were taken. At 6 o'clock a detachment of the Garde Republicaine relieved the detachment of infantry which had been on duty all night about the scene of the catastrophe.

The search for the dead continues in the ruins. Quantities of coins, watches, necklaces, rings and bracelets have been picked up in the charred mass of burned wood and mud forming the foundation of the debris.

At 8 o'clock there was a movement towards a corner of the ruins, and another body was slowly drawn from the black mass by which it had been covered. It was little more than a black trunk, headless and limbless, and little hope is entertained of discovering to whom it belonged.

As soon as the bodies are claimed by the anxious relatives and others who are searching for the missing, they are placed in carriages held in waiting and are taken away.

PARTIAL LIST OF THE DEAD.

Some of the Bodies Are So Disfigured That the Identification is Not Certain.

So far as known the following bodies have been recognized:

Mlle. Henrietta Hinihsdal.

Seriously Injured.

Among the seriously injured are the following:

The Duchesse de la Torre.
The Comtesse de Raincey.
The Comte de Montclair.
The Comte de Devisin.
Mme. Macede.
Mme. Recamier.
Mme. de Laume.
Mme. Hyster.
Mme. Edouard Andre.
Mme. de la Tour Dupin.
Mme. Maiesieux.
M. Lefebvre.

Among the articles picked up in the ruins are a ring inscribed "Ferdinand d'Orleans—Sophie de Baviere," the names of the Duc and Duchesse d'Alencon, doubtless the betrothal ring of Her Highness the Duchesse d' Alencon. A silver watch, attached to a gold brooch was also recognised as the property of the Duchess. The body of the Duchess, however, has not been found. The houses in the vicinity of the scene of the disaster are being carefully searched in the hope that the Duchess is only injured and is being tended at some private residence.

Up to daybreak, the Duc d'Alencon refused to quit the scene, and only went home after daybreak, because he was physically incapable of further exertion.

President Faure all yesterday evening was in constant communication with the Prefect of Police, who forwarded to him the names of the identified dead and those of the injured. The President also despatched orderly officers everywhere to inquire into the condition of the injured and, hearing that a number of the latter had been taken to the Hospital Beaujon, the President at 10 o'clock proceeded there to console them. In the court yard of the hospital President Faure met the surgeons who were attending the injured and thanked them for their devotion.

Mme. Flores, the wife of the Spanish Consul, expired just as President Faure reached her bedside.

An extraordinary Cabinet meeting will be held this evening as a result of the fire.

TALES OF DESPAIR.

M. Feulard Saved His Wife and Perished With His Daughter—Fatalful Incidents.

Many tales of despair are told. Mme. Feulard was saved by her husband, who, as soon as he had placed her in safety, dashed back to the burning building in order to save his daughter. He had clasped the girl in his arms and had nearly reached the door when they were caught in the flames and father and daughter perished before the eyes of the agonized mother.

The Baron de Mackau had a similar experience. Seven times he penetrated the flaming ruins in search of his sister, each time to save another and only to see his sister, later, fall before his eyes when he no longer had strength to lift her.

The Marquise de l'Aigle was rescued by a fireman at the moment she had given herself up as lost. All her friends had fallen around her and she was on her knees, awaiting death in prayer, when a fireman caught her up and succeeded in extricating her alive, but frightfully burned.

Several Sisters of Charity are known to be among the dead and injured. The latter, it is now stated, also include the following:

The Vicomtesse de Lucay.
The Marquise de Lubersac.

Mme. Rafaelli, wife of the well-known painter, whose whole face is burned, but whose eyes have escaped uninjured.

Mlle. Rafaelli, daughter of the painter, whose arms are burned and whose body is covered with bruises.

The Marquise de Lubersac is in a critical condition.

Mme. Mathieyello had her whole body blistered.

Mme. Lamiolle was severely burned about her back and head.

The wounded are now known to number at least 180.

SCENES MOST HORRIBLE.

Bleeding Women Ran Through the Streets With Their Clothing on Fire.

Paris, May 5.—Eye-witnesses describe the scenes in terms the most horrible. Women, nearly naked and covered with blood from burns and bruises, escaped from the furnace of death, screaming in nameless terror. As these ran through the streets, the remnants of their clothing burning, others plucked at them, tearing off the burning garments, and strove to detain the sufferers long enough to administer relief.

"Two women who had just escaped from the flames," says one witness, "were lying writhing on the ground just beyond the margin of the fire. We started toward them, but, as we neared the place, pieces of burning debris fell in showers upon our heads and we were forced to abandon our efforts to save the victims, who burned to death before our eyes."

The Comtesse de Mun, whose name appears in the list of the dead, was the wife of the Comte Albert de Mun, leader of the Catholic party in France, one of the foremost orators in the Republic, a man of the most distinguished lineage, and one whose claims to scholarship were recognized by his election to the Academy a month ago, at which time, also, M. Hanotaux, the Premier, was made one of the "Immortals."

Duchesse d'Alencon is Dead.

Paris, May 5.—The body of the Duchesse d' Alencon has been identified among those of the victims of the fire.

One feature which is generally remarked of the victims taken to the Palais de l'Industrie is that the head is thrown back and the arms are uplifted with a peculiarly weird effect.

The scene on the Champs Elysee is like the scene on Popular fete days. The throngs are enormous and multitudes of carriages are driving about. From time to time a solemn hush falls upon the crowd, and every head is bared as a hearse passes by.

The police officials announced at 7 p. m. that 94 corpses had been positively identified. There are 19 bodies still unidentified.

To-night such theatres as are open are almost empty and the large cafes on the boulevards are practically deserted.

Nothing comparable in loss of life has ever occurred here, except the fire which destroyed the Opera Comique in 1887. Singularly enough the disaster happened in the same month of the year, and 80 were burned to death. In aristocratic circles the numberless dinner parties and other functions or a gaiety opening season have been abandoned. It is now estimated that there were about 1200 persons in the building, about one-half of whom escaped unhurt. Some estimates place the number of dead at 143, others at a still higher figure.

POWERS PRESSING MEDIATION.

Britain Takes the Initiative and France is Backing Her Up.

New York, May 5.—The London correspondent of The Sun cables to-day as follows:

England, as Mr. Curzon announced in the House of Commons to-day, is again pressing the question of intervention, this time with success. It is beginning to be recognized in St. Petersburg, Berlin and Vienna that the political friendship of England and France has become a genuine factor in the situation and its influence is already felt.

It is no secret that England is in favor of stopping the war immediately at any cost, and of restoring the status quo ante bellum in every respect. France practically endorses the policy of Lord Salisbury.

The impression grows stronger in all quarters that the submission of Greece to Turkey and the powers will soon be forthcoming. It is not expected to take the form of suing for peace or mediation, the latter least of all, for Greek feeling is more bitter against the concert of Europe than against Turkey. King George would prefer to negotiate directly with the Sultan rather than through the powers. Indeed, he declared recently that he would never, under any circumstances, seek the intervention of Europe.

It is not unlikely that the end of the hostilities will take the form of a brief armistice. This gained, nobody believes that fighting will ever be resumed.

Instead of hoping for Turkish success, official Europe is now earnestly desirous that the Greeks should gain some advantage in the field. The interests of European peace were considered best served by Turkish victories at the outset of the war. Now the situation is reversed. The Sultan is naturally convinced that he is invincible and daily becomes more defiant.

Reliable information from Constantinople is to the effect that he now refuses to listen to lesser terms than the return of Crete, the cession of the bulk of Thessaly and the transfer of half of the Greek navy.

The Emperor William and the others who incited him to try to beat the Greeks are likely to repent when they find the eastern problem rendered immensely more difficult, instead of being simplified by the war. A genuine Greek victory at the present moment would, therefore, be received with joy in the European chancelleries, because of its double effect of restoring Greek self-respect and checking Turkish obstinacy.

NEW TROUBLE FOR M'GOWAN.

His First Wife Begins Action to Set Aside the Divorce—All Was Peace Until Mrs. Barnes Appeared.

Trenton, N.J., May 5.—Mrs. McGowan, who declares she is the wife of former Mayor Frank A. McGowan, began yesterday the legal action that she has been threatening since her husband married Mrs. Barnes and took her child to the McGowan mansion in this city. She filed a bill in which she asks to have the decree of divorce granted by an Oklahoma court, which released her husband from his obligations to her, set aside on the ground that it was fraudulently obtained, and that he be compelled to make a statement of his financial condition so that some of his property may be saved for the support of his five children.

Mrs. McGowan states that she and the former Mayor lived happily from their marriage in 1877 until 1894, when, she declares, he became infatuated with Helen Edith Barnes. He was neglectful and abusive after that and used profane language to her and struck her.

The petition states that Mr. McGowan was never a resident of Oklahoma, and the residence he claimed was not such as is required by the statute conferring jurisdiction in divorce cases upon the court of that state.

Mrs. McGowan charges her husband with abandoning her without any justifiable cause, and refusing to provide for the support of herself and family. For a long time she has received but $50 from him, and she is entirely without means of supporting herself and children without the sale, at ruinous sacrifice, of her personal property. The house in which she lives was given to her by her husband. She is unable to mortgage it without his consent.

She says McGowan is possessed of large properties, which he is disposing of to raise money to support Mrs. Barnes and her child in lavish style. Within the past two years, she says, her husband has received in salaries alone an aggregate of $50,000.

President Isaac Lewis of Sabina, Ohio, is highly respected all through that section. He has lived in Clinton Co. 75 years, and has been president of the Sabina Bank 20 years. He gladly testifies to the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and what he says is worthy attention. All brain workers find Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiarly adapted to their needs. It makes pure, rich, red blood, and from this comes nerve, mental, bodily and digestive strength.

"I am glad to say that Hood's Sarsaparilla is a very good medicine, especially as a blood purifier. It has done me good many times. For several years I suffered greatly with pains of in one eye and about my temples, especially at night when I had been having a hard day of physical and mental labor. I took many remedies, but found help only in Hood's Sarsaparilla which cured me of rheumatism, neuralgia and headache. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved itself a true friend. I also take Hood's Pills to keep my bowels regular, and like the pills very much." ISAAC LEWIS, Sabina, Ohio.

TAKE CARE OF THE HEALTH.

Spring is an emblem and vivid and verdant expression of new life in all the operations of nature, but this season is often the harbinger of death and, if not in all cases, death, of disease. It is timely to call particular attention to precautions against sudden changes of temperature, such as are pretty sure to come in the spring season. An Ottawa exchange records two deaths traceable directly to carelessness in properly clothing to meet the exigencies of the changeable weather. In one case an overcoat left at home was the cause of the death of a hale, strong man and another an unwise retention of damp clothing after violent bicycle exercise was the mediate cause of death. Spring is the most dangerous season of the year and the strongest temptations are presented for premature change of clothing. In the fall if any change is made it is in favour of heavy clothing. It is better to suffer a good deal from heat than to run the risk of too early discarding of heavy clothing. One may escape a score of times without any serious results, and the next occasion may be a fatal exception. There are two pointed proverbs relating to the substitution of lighter clothing for heavy flannels. One is to "melt out of one's clothing," and the other, "stick to your flannels till your flannels stick to you." Health is too important a possession to be rashly imperilled, and though many seem to trifle with their health with impunity, every breach of the laws of proper living leaves its impress and sometimes a fatal penalty is exacted.

SUNDAY STREET CARS.

Toronto the Good is now in the throes of a plebescite on the Sunday street car question. The vote is not all on one side, or the arguments, either. Rather singular to relate, a member of the Toronto Presbytery of the Presbyterian church opposed a motion introduced by Rev. Dr. Cavan condemning Sunday street cars. He was in sympathy with the spirit of the resolution, but opposed it on the grounds of it being inopportune just on the verge of a popular vote upon the subject. There is a good deal to be said apart from the theological aspect of the question, against Sunday cars. In relation to a large number of workingmen it destroys the special function of the Sabbath day as a day of rest. There are about 800 employees of the Street Car Company, who will have to work on Sunday, and if their hours during the week are as long as the hours are in Peterborough, they certainly should have one day in seven to rest. On the other hand, it is claimed that the street cars on Sunday would be a great boon to the poorer classes of the city, who are shut up during the week in close sultry streets, breathing foul air, and they would be benefitted by opportunities to take a Sunday trip to the free, pure air of the numerous parks and pleasure resorts that girdle the city. If some arrangement could be made with the street car company, whereby a new staff of workmen, who are not employed during the week, could be used to operate Sunday cars, the objections, on the score of the employees' grievance, would be largely removed. At any rate, there will be a big fight in Toronto on the 24th of this month over the Sunday street car question.

A HINT TO DAIRYMEN.

Mr. J. J. Dickey, a Brockville cheese buyer, who has returned from a trip to England, is convinced that there is an enormous market for Canadian butter in England, but it must be of the best quality, and be sold as soon as made. There must be no holding it for a rise in the market. Dealers there complain of blue mould on the Canadian butter, which they attribute to green wood in the cases. Apropos of this complaint Canadian cheese and butter producers should bring themselves to a higher appreciation of the importance of putting up goods in first-class shape as well as producing a first rate article. No matter how good cheese or butter may be if it is put up in slovenly and shabby boxes and packages or in a manner to injure its quality before it reaches the ultimate market, a most injurious prejudice will be created and therefore the market will be destroyed or very greatly injured. A little extra care and expense in putting up dairy goods in neat, tidy packages will repay the expenditure of both a hundred fold. We are told that the British market is hard to get and hard to hold. First-class goods in first-class condition are required. We can and do produce first-class goods, but we have hardly arrived at the point of giving due attention to the preparation of our dairy goods for the market. Dairymen should cultivate neatness—there's money in it and money's what the dairyman is after.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Messrs. A. Patullo, M.P.P., and A. W. Campbell, good road commissioner, gave addresses at Ottawa, Tuesday night under auspices of the Board of Trade. The enthusiasm for good roads is spreading. Money within reasonable limits, cannot be spent better than in the production of good roads. They benefit the farmer, assisting him in his business intercourse with his neighbours, and benefit the merchant, whose customers are enabled to reach town oftener, to better advantage and in better humour, which is an important matter, as affecting a customer's disposition to buy.

It seems the beach does not always protect the judge. A St. Thomas insurance man named Moore has sued County Judge Hughes, Elgin, for $30,000 damages for libel. The libel is alleged to consist in derogatory statements made by Judge Hughes in reference to Mr. Moore in a document sent to the Ontario Government protesting against the dismissal of a bailiff for irregular practices. If a judge, forgetful of the exalted dignity of the bench, descends to dabbling in the muddy pool of party politics, he must not complain if he gets into trouble like ordinary mortals who, without judicial knowledge of the law and its bearing, make statements which they are afterwards surprised to learn are libellous.

President Kruger of the Transvaal Republic, is not above a little hedging. He sent in a little Jameson raid bill to England that would shame a Shylock, and his son at a banquet insulted the Queen. President Kruger diplomatically dismissed his son (and perhaps "hired him over again") and now he has thrown out another olive branch in the shape of a request to the Rand—that's the Krugeresque name for a parliament—to declare the Queen's diamond jubilee a holiday in the Republic. When the wily President saw he couldn't bluff "Fighting Joe" Chamberlain, he has had the good sense to take the other tack. The backing of the youthful Emperor of Germany, who failed to form a coalition of powers against England, evidently doesn't "eat much ice" with President Kruger.

"Senator Macdonald's bill making the 24th of May a perpetual holiday," has says the Ottawa Free Press, passed its third reading in the Upper House. The Senator's speech was one worthy the occasion. Senator Mills was equally happy in his remarks in seconding the bill. Hereafter, when the measure has passed the Commons, the Queen's birthday will be known as "Victoria Day," thus perpetuating for all time the name and memory of one of the wisest and most exemplary rulers the world has ever known. Her Majesty cannot fail of being deeply impressed with this fresh proof of the loyalty and affection of her Canadian subjects. Sir Henry Joly de Lotbiniere will take charge of the bill in the House of Commons. It could not be entrusted to better hands.

"The king is dead, long live the king," is likely to be realized in one sense when her present Majesty passes away. If the Prince of Wales does not, though he seems to do so, inherit our good Queen's kindness of heart and tender solicitude for the welfare of her subjects, his wife, the beautiful and gracious Princess of Wales—beautiful in person and character—will worthily take her place. She recently showed the tenderness of her solicitude by sending a letter to the Lord Mayor of London, inferentially insisting on the poor of the slums being recognized in the Jubilee demonstration. The princess did not confine her interest to the poor of the slums to mere sentiment, but concurrently sent $500 to assist in giving "these beggars and outcasts a dinner or some substantial meal during the week of the jubilee." We are certainly fortunate in the latter half of this century in our royal rulers.

SICK KIDNEYS
CURED KIDNEYS
HEAVY WORK.

When a man's Kidneys are deranged, he's not much good for work of any kind. In fact he does not feel like work. Sick Kidneys sap his strength and undermine his health by permitting the poisons to circulate in the system, that it is their duty to carry off.

Here was Mr. James Clark, of 190 York Street, Hamilton, Ont., a sufferer from Kidney disease. In consequence he was weak, had a poor appetite, and was only able to do the lightest kind of work. Since he has taken Ryckman's Kootenay Cure the pains have left him, his appetite has improved, and now he is employed at the grist mill of Mr. Robson, corner of York and Locke Streets, and his work is of a very heavy nature.

You see the wonderful change Kootenay can make in a man by setting his Kidneys right. The "new ingredient" does the work.

Attractive Women.

Why is one woman attractive and another not? The most admirable and attractive thing about an attractive woman is her womanliness. Everybody admires a womanly woman. She must have health, of course, because without it she would lose the brightness of her eyes, the fullness of her cheeks and her vivacity. Real health must mean that a woman is really a woman. That she is strong and perfect in a sexual way, as well as in every other. That she is capable of performing perfectly the duties of maternity. Some are born with what is called "constitutional weakness." Those who do not enjoy perfect health, need only take the proper precautions and the proper remedy to become perfectly well and strong. Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription will cure any derangement of the distinctly feminine organism.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Mr. Casey's Bicycle Baggage Bill Was the Feature

THAT ENGAGED MOST ATTENTION

A Motion by the Premier Indicates That Business Will be Pushed From This On—The Case of Bremner and His Furs Up Again—Other News Notes.

Ottawa, May 5.—(Special.)—Mr. Casey's bill to compel railways to carry bicycles as baggage aroused the most interesting discussion of to-day in the House.

Sir Henry Joly has taken hold of Senator Macdonald's Senate bill making May 24 a perpetual holiday in Canada. Sir A. P. Caron seconded the motion for the first reading.

Mr. Davin introduced a bill to amend the criminal code by providing that in cases of libel only one plea of justification could be entered. Another clause provided that a person entering suit for libel and failing to prove it he himself might be put on trial.

Mr. Robertson asked: Has the report of the commission of officers appointed to investigate the affairs of the Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto, been received by the Government? (2) If so, does the report recommend the reinstatement of Col. Hamilton? (3) Has any action been taken by the Government on the report?

Sir Richard Cartwright to the first question answered "Yes." (2) The general officer commanding reports that the court of enquiry had no power to make any such recommendation. All that they were empowered to do was to enquire into and report all the facts of the case. This they did. (3) No.

Mr. Sifton informed Mr. McInnes that three tenders had been received for dredging for gold in the bed of the Stewart River. They had not been opened yet.

Then a reminiscence of the rebellion of 1885 was brought up on motion of Mr. Davis for papers relating to the claim of the half-breed, Bremner, of Battleford, for compensation for furs taken from him during the rebellion.

Mr. Davis read a letter from an Indian official, Warden, who was not called as a witness in the Parliamentary enquiry, but who knew a good deal about the taking of the furs. Warden says that he was in the Mounted Police stores, where the furs had been put for safe keeping, when at 4 o'clock in the morning Mr. Hayter Reed and the late Mr. Bedson came and ordered Warden to deliver up the furs to them. They were packed in saddle boxes and carried away to the steamboat landing. Some of those furs eventually found their way to Ottawa. He (Mr. Davis) characterised this action on the part of the officials as stealing. Bremner was not a rebel; he was a loyal citizen, and it was the duty of the Government to see that he was compensated.

Mr. Lister believed Bremner had been most unjustly dealt with and would like to see the Government meet this claim.

Mr. Wilson called attention to the loss suffered by Mr. Finkle, contractor for carrying the mail from Newburg to Kingston, by the cancellation of his contract, although he was the lowest tendered.

Mr. Mulock said if it could be shown to him that Mr. Finkle had really suffered loss he would be prepared to recommend that fair compensation be made.

Mr. McCleary then brought up again the dismissal of Mr. Fairbrother, postmaster of Beamsville, and expressed the opinion that the Government in dealing with him had not afforded that gentleman the fair play which was promised last session. He read a statement from Mr. Fairbrother, in which that gentleman repelled the charges of political partisanship. There was great dissatisfaction among Beamsville Liberals at the action of the Government in appointing Mr. Allen to the postmastership. A correspondent in The Beamsville Express said that Mr. Allen was nearly blind, was hardly able to write and was 80 years of age. [Laughter.]

Sir Charles Tupper: That must have been the old postmaster. [Laughter.]

Mr. McCleary thought the treatment meted out to Mr. Fairbrother was of a most heartless character. He appealed to the Government to deal fairly with Mr. Fairbrother.

Mr. Gibson said that Mr. Allen was just the same age as Sir Charles Tupper and was just as active as he was. Mr. Fairbrother had been assured that he would not be interfered with so long as he behaved himself. But there were many cases of political partisanship on his part on election day and before. But he (Mr. Gibson) did not interfere in the matter. Mr. Fairbrother had a dispute with his assistant, and on the latter's complaint the whole thing was referred to Ottawa.

Mr. Craig said it seemed to him the Government had degraded themselves by dismissals of the kind. He was surprised that the Premier did not see to it that his pledge of last session was carried out, and that no dismissal of this kind should take place without giving the accused a chance to defend himself.

Mr. Lister said he thought the Government had acted with the greatest moderation in this case. The office-holders in this country must be taught to maintain a position of neutrality in elections.

Sir Charles Tupper said that there ought to be an explicit declaration from the Government as to the treatment which it intended to accord to the public officials of the country. Reference had been made to the case of a man who was dismissed for political partisanship when he (Sir Charles) was Minister of Railways. The case was a most justifiable one, as at a public meeting the man had resorted to physical violence.

Dr. Landerkin: Did he hurt any of your fellows? [Laughter.]

Sir Charles Tupper: No, we are generally able to take care of ourselves, whether it be a question of intellectual or physical force. [Laughter and cheers.]

Continuing, he wanted to know if the Government has adopted the principle of, to the victors belong the spoils. If these wholesale dismissals were to be continued the country ought to know it. As to this particular case, Mr. Gibson had wholly failed to justify the dismissal of Mr. Fairbrother. He said he would ask for a return of all the officials dismissed since the present Government came into power, and when that came down he believed it would show more dismissals than during the 18 years of Conservative rule.

The first duty of the successors of the present Government would be to dismiss every official appointed to take the place of a civil servant improperly dismissed. That course, said Sir Charles, would be forced upon them.

Mr. Wood (Hamilton) declared that when the Conservatives came to power in 1878 they swept every office clean as with a broom. For instance, all the inspectors appointed under the Weights and Measures Act of the Mackenzie Government were dismissed by the Conservatives when they came to power.

Mr. Logan (Cumberland, N.S.) thought the trouble with the Government was that they were too lenient with the officials. In his own county out of 500 or 600 Government officials only three had been dismissed.

Owing to the absence of their promoters, several private and public bills were passed over. Then the name of the member for West Elgin was called. There was a prompt response.

Mr. Casey, in moving the second reading of his bill to oblige railway companies to carry bicycles as personal baggage, said that the promotion of the bill had been entrusted to him by the Canadian Wheelmen's Association. He felt that in urging the passage of the bill he was speaking for a most influential portion of the community, and for the growth and progress of the country. And not only the youth, for very grave and sedate gentlemen were availing themselves of the bicycle. He might instance the Postmaster-General, who was making good progress with his wheel. Not only had the bicycle become an article of general use, but in the country the farmers, their sons and daughters, were taking to the wheel. So that the question was one which interested the members generally. Besides, he would remind members that the bicyclists were awful fellows at election times, Mr. Casey gave the names of numbers of railways, including the Government railways in Canada, which already treated bicycles as baggage. He showed there was no force in the argument that bicycles were too much a competitor to railway travel to justify a law compelling the railways to carry them free. The law already provided that guns and fishing tackle were the baggage of the sportsman, the easel the baggage of the artist, the tool the baggage of the artisan, and with equal force it was contended that the bicycle was the baggage of the wheelman.

Taking up the memorandum of the baggagemasters, as Mr. Casey called them, the "baggage smashers" association, which the Grand Trunk had adopted as embodying its reasons for opposing the bill, he showed that the bill which was drafted to oppose, was not similar to the present bill.

Mr. Casey assured the House that petitions signed by 14,000 wheelmen had been presented to the House. Others, including a petition signed by 1000 Ottawa wheelmen, were forthcoming, making over 16,000 in favor of the bill. He concluded by urging the Government to assist with its influence in the passage of the bill.

Mr. Penny (Montreal) and Mr. Ross Robertson spoke in favor of the second reading. The railway companies, said the member for East Toronto, were, in refusing bicycles free carriage as baggage, taking advantage by a strained interpretation of the word. But as inventions increased the means of comfort and convenience, the interpretation of what constitutes personal baggage will widen. In their definition of what constitute baggage, the railway people are not consistent. But consistency, he added, is not a jewel that sparkles in the shirtfronts of railway managers.

Mr. Lister, after observing that the measure would go down to posterity as "Casey's bill," pointed out that the law did not oblige railways to carry anybody's baggage free, and if this bill passed the railway companies might turn round and charge for all baggage. He urged that the bill be sent to the Railway Committee.

Dr. Sproule argued that that meant to kill the bill respectably.

Messrs. Craig and McMullen supported Mr. Lister, arguing that both sides should be heard before the Railway Committee.

Mr. Louat strongly supported the bill. A measure of this kind had been adopted in 11 states of the Union and had worked well. He did not see any necessity to send it to the Railway Committee, as every member of the House knew the purport of the measure.

Mr. Davin said the House ought to have the views of the Minister of Railways on this measure.

Mr. Blair said he had no objection to stating the views of the Government on this bill. The sense of the House was evidently in favor of the second reading of the bill. Without expressing his personal views on the measure, he had no objection to the second reading. But on the other hand he was decidedly of the opinion that the bill was a proper one to be referred to the Railway Committee. There were features of the measure, there were interests involved, which could only properly be discussed or heard before that committee. He would therefore propose to send the bill, after the second reading, to the Railway Committee, but in making such a proposal there was not the slightest disposition on his part to accord the bill anything but fair play. Personally, he was disposed to afford every facility for early consideration of the measure before that committee, and he regretted that Dr. Sproule should have assumed that if it went to the committee it would be strangled there.

The bill was read the second time.

Mr. Blair then moved to refer the bill to the Railway Committee.

Mr. Casey said he was sorry that the Minister had felt it necessary to make this motion. The bill consisted only of one clause, and there could be a full discussion in committee of the whole. However, in view of Mr. Blair's friendly assurances, he would assent to the motion. The motion was then adopted.

Mr. Davin resumed the debate on Dr. Reid's motion in favor of bonusing farmers who regularly supply high-class butter for export.

The debate was continued by Mr. McMillan, who opposed the resolution, and Mr. Broder, who made a practical speech in its favor. He said that Parliament voted two millions for the militia, and surely $10,000 might be voted for the farmers. Personally he thought a bonus of 3 cents a pound ought to be given.

Mr. Rogers opposed the motion.

The debate was adjourned on Mr. Laurier's motion. He said the Minister of Agriculture could give the Government's views when next it came up and the House adjourned at 11 p.m.

Business to be Rushed.

Ottawa, May 5.—(Special.)—Liberals and Conservatives alike will be gratified at a notice of motion which the Premier gives to-night. It is looked upon as the beginning of the end.

Everybody concedes that Parliament is now likely to get through its work by the middle of June, but to do this the Government reasonably asks time for its business—such business, however, not to include the franchise bill, which cannot possibly pass this session. Mr. Laurier proposes, therefore, to ask that the Government business have precedence immediately after questions on Wednesdays and Thursdays. This will leave Monday as private members' day.

RAILWAY NOTES.

Sparks From the Wheels—Cinders for the Eye.

A change of time has gone into effect on the C. P. R., as is usual at the beginning of the summer season. The morning train for the west at 4.42 arrives at the same time as formerly. The local formerly leaving here for Toronto at 7.20 a. m., will now leave at 7.10, and making 15 minutes faster time on the road will arrive in Toronto 25 minutes earlier, at 9.45 a. m. The trains running east at night are not affected, those leaving at 7.53 p.m. and 11.35 p.m., leaving at the same time, but the mail train from Toronto, instead of arriving at 11.23 a.m., will not do so now until 2.12, making a difference of 50 minutes. This 50 minutes will mean a good deal to those who are in the habit of getting their business correspondence from the west and their Toronto papers at 12 o'clock on their way to luncheon, and probably the matter will be brought before the Board of Trade, with a view of representing the inconvenience to the railway officials.

The local C. P. R. authorities are after the boys that are in the habit of banging on the freight trains, and an example is to be made in the police court.

The office of Assistant General Manager of the C. P. R. has been abolished. Mr. Thos. Tait, who occupied that position, has been appointed manager of all lines east of Fort William, and Mr. W. Whyte manager of all lines west of that point.

Freight traffic in some lines is very heavy over the Grand Trunk at the present time. There have been particularly heavy cattle shipments from Windsor, the Don, Belleville and Waterloo to Montreal for export.

—Negotiations are now in progress between Mr. H. LaBrun and Mr. Lem. Felcher of Toronto, which, if carried through to completion, will make the latter a partner in the Palace Restaurant. Mr. Felcher is one of the best known restaurateurs in in Canada, and his name is well known here.

—Vatican Park is improving apace. Two new residences are going up on the south side of Gilmour street—one at the west end belonging to Mr. Wm. Lundy, and Mr. Richard Sheehy is erecting a fine substantial brick residence next east of his present residence property, near the east end of the street.

Counterfeit Dollars.

A counterfeit of the Dominion Government $1 bill is in circulation in Toronto. One was caught over the counter of the Dominion Bank a few days ago and several merchants have been victimized. The fraud, however, is a clumsy one. The portrait of Lady Dufferin is very poor, and the signature, "T. D. Harrington," which is written on the counterfeit, is printed on steel plate on the original. The imprints, "for the Minister of Finance" and "for Receiver General," and also the imprint "British American Bank Note Company," are omitted altogether from the counterfeit.

DYNAMITE TO BE USED

To Raise the Body of Little Lizzie Murray, who was Drowned.

Every effort is being made by Mr. Michael Murray to discover the body of his little daughter who was drowned two weeks ago, but so far his efforts have been without result. He has secured a number of dynamite bombs which will be exploded in the hope of causing the body to raise. Commodore Calcutt states that he never remembers hearing of the body of anyone drowned in the Lake being carried below the locks.

DEATH OF ARTHUR JOLY.

He was Formerly Connected With the Y.M.C.A. Here.

A letter has been received by a Peterborough young lady from Mr. R. J. Colville, in which he speaks as follows concerning the death of Mr. Arthur Joly, who has just been buried in Galt:—

"Arthur was taken ill last Tuesday. On Wednesday his right side was paralyzed and he lost his speech. After a consultation by the doctors it was decided to take him to the hospital, when he went on Wednesday evening. I was with him on Wednesday and Thursday he was resigned and ready for whatever the Father had in store for him. He was resting on Romans viii., 28. Prof. Body and I had a talk with him on Thursday. He could hear us and would write his replies with his left hand. Poor boy, it was so sad. On Friday evening he lost consciousness and got rapidly worse. We went to the hospital Saturday morning and were with him until his spirit took flight at 3.30. He passed peacefully away, never regaining consciousness. His death was caused by a clot of blood on the brain. The doctor had hopes at first, but after a thorough examination found his heart was not good, and if he had lived and recovered he would always be paralysed on the right side and unable to speak. So God was merciful to him and took him home, his death caused a great sensation in Galt, here, and everywhere he was known. The friends in Galt were very anxious to have him buried there, and we are glad we did so. We had a service at his late house here at 1 p. m., which was largely attended by students and friends, and afterwards Mr. Pratt and I accompanied his body to Galt. We reached there at 6 p. m., the station platform being crowded with sorrowing friends and some 200 men marched from the station to the church, where a service was held, and thence to the cemetery. The whole town seemed to mourn him. In the evening a memorial service was held, where testimony was born to Arthur's worth as a Christian gentleman by the pastors and association workers. The place was crowded and many were unable to obtain admission. I have no doubt but God will own and bless our sorrow in bringing many to consecrate themselves, and many more to accept Christ whom Arthur loved.

We cabled his brother in London on Friday and got a reply which came about an hour before Arthur died, and we then cabled the sad news of his death. As you will say it will be a hard blow to his father and brothers, may the dear Lord sustain them and enable them and us to follow Arthur as he has followed Christ Jesus. I loved him, as a son he seemed to live out the "Beatitudes." I have never known a more perfect young man, but we do not sorrow as those who have no hope, for he has fallen asleep and will awake when Jesus comes and our prayer is "Even so come Lord Jesus."

SPORTING PASTIMES.

Wheeling and Other Items of Local and General Interest.

BASEBALL.

The Park Nine have received word from the Royal Oaks and Eurekas Baseball Clubs, of Toronto, which both want to come to Peterborough on the 24th, but in all probability the local club will play Havelock in Campbellford on that date.

The Park Nine will make arrangements for a good game on Jubilee day.

LACROSSE.

The local lacrosse club is making every effort to bring the Georgetown Lacrosse Club here for a game on the Queen's Birthday. The Georgetowns have won the C. L. A. Championship for two years in succession and a splendid match should result if the team can be persuaded to come to Peterborough. The Rosedales, a crack Toronto club, are willing to come, as are several other well know teams.

THE WHEEL.

J. P. Archer, secretary of the Campbellford bicycle club, has forwarded to E. Cochrane, M.P., the petition from Campbellford for the free transportation of bicycles. To the petition was affixed over 400 signatures.

The Ottawa Free Press makes the following comment concerning the bill now before Parliament, introduced in the interests of wheelmen by Mr. Casey, M.P., Liberal representative of West Elgin:—"The petitions presented to Parliament in favour of Mr. Casey's bicycle bill are pouring in, and the numerous signatures, bona fide ones, already mount up into the thousands, with five figures. We have already stated that in our opinion the railways, which have received so much at the hands of the public, should endeavour to accommodate them, even if they have to go to some trouble and expense to do so. The railways have issued a circular, written and printed in the United States, against the proposed change, and make out the best case they can, and having it all their own way, naturally make a good one from their own standpoint. But it is to be noticed that it is in the United States that strenuous efforts are now being made by leading railways to accommodate the wheelmen on the lines laid down in the request of the Canadian petitioners. The accommodation asked has to be given sooner or later, and the reform may as well be made at once as later on. The wheel may be now regarded as much an article of a traveller's domestic equipage as an umbrella or valise, or hat box, and it is useless to fight against the inevitable. What is now asked by the railways will also have to be granted by steamships. A correspondent of the Halifax Chronicle says, in a letter upon the subject, "first class steamship companies in other parts of the world carry the bicycles of tourists free of charge," and he protests vigorously against a charge being made by a leading line for carriage of a bike. He adds that "nowadays when throughout the world a bicycle is recognised as part of the personal equipment of tourists, it is surely an extraordinary thing that any steamship company professing to be enterprising and progressive should in the teeth of such professions undertake to make any freight charge against any tourist who takes with him or her an article for his or her personal use and enjoyment." This certainly reflects the spirit of the age, and it has to be bowed to. Railway corporations can no more check it than a donkey can stop one of their engines.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS COMPARED.

George Street Church Dropping Behind Belleville Bridge Street Church.

There is a friendly rival existing between the Sunday schools of the Bridge Street Methodist church, Belleville, and the George street Methodist, Peterborough, both endeavouring to outdo the other in being conceded the honour of having the largest membership amongst the Canadian Methodist Sunday schools. This year Belleville is slightly in the lead as shown by the appended tabulated statements:

BELLEVILLE.

Officers and teachers	67
Scholars in Primary Department	141
Scholars Intermediate Department	241
Scholars in Senior Department	466
Members of Home Department	178
Total	1,093

The increase for the year is 43; the additions to the membership were 227; number of scholars who have left the city, 205; visitors attended, 749.

The Treasurer had received $616; of this $209 was spent for lesson helps, illustrated papers and incidentals and $325 appropriated to charities and missions.

George street should wake up and organize a Boys' Brigade to bring in recruits and not allow somnolent Belleville to take the lead.

When fevers and other epidemics are around, safety lies in fortifying the system with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A person having thin and impure blood, is in the most favourable condition to "catch" whatever disease may be floating in the air. Be wise in time.

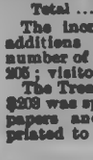
In the meantime if you want furniture call and inspect our stock.—CLUBB'S Furniture Warerooms, 425 and 427 George street.

Fathers or Mothers.



Treat your boys to a nobby new suit. Teach them taste and economy by fitting them out for the season at the City Clothing Store. You can have your pick from a heaping stock of dressy new suits at special Easter prices. Bright new outfits for boys and youths is what we take pride in selling. Juvenile suits that last longer, fit neater, and look better than the general run. Our special Easter prices for two-piece suits are $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50, and are well worth your quick investigation. For three-piece suits for youths, the prices are $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 and up to $7.00. We like mothers to visit our store and do their buying personally. Fair, square prices for reliable children's and youths' clothing can be counted on every time you buy here. We ask the men to see our large assortment of popular selections in spring tweed and clothe for ordered suits and spring overcoats. We turn out the finest and lowest-priced spring clothing for men that ever left the tailors' lap. You also find every good kind of ready-to-wear clothing in spring suits and overcoats. Stacks of them to select from that will please and fit you, made by men that knew how. Man's serge suits as low as $3, $4, $5 and up to $8. Tweed suits as low as $3.50, $4, $5 and up to $10. Fine black worsted suits at $8, $10 and $12. See our attractive window display of handsome Easter neckwear and furnishings—the latest out—right in style and the "top-notch" novelties of the day. Here's a snap—500 pairs of all-wool tweed pants, well made, strong working pants, for only $1.25 a pair—the best value we ever offered.—H. Lailawn & Co., City Clothing Store, George street. dw

SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD.

The Overcrowding of the Schools to be Considered on Friday Next.

At a meeting of the Separate School Board last evening there were present:—Messrs. Quinlan, chairman, and McGrath, Goselin, Kylie, Sheehy and Hickey.

Ven. Archdeacon Casey, local superintendent, was also in attendance.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

An account from A. H. Stratton & Co. for supplies, $24.66, was received and referred to the finance Committee.

COMMUNICATIONS

were received and referred as follows:

From the teachers in the Central school, asking for re-engagement after the summer vacation.—Received.

From the principal of the Central school asking for school supplies.—Received and referred to the Property Committee, with power to act.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The following was the school attendance for April:

	On Roll.	Average.
Lake street school	185	167
Central	237	203
Convent	219	196
	631	565

Moved by Mr. Sheehy, seconded by Mr. McGrath, that caretaker, Mr. Donohoe, be allowed $15 for the purpose of procuring supplies for the cleaning of the school.—Carried.

The committee to whom was referred the matter of overcrowding of the schools was asked to meet on Friday afternoon at Lake street school.

Moved by Mr. McGrath, seconded by Mr. Hickey, that Mr. O'Brien be appointed examiner at the Entrance Examinations—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

THE DIAMOND JUBILEE.

A Good Way For School Pupils to Celebrate the Day.

The Public School pupils in Kingston will observe the day in the following manner:

The pupils of the senior third, junior and senior fourth, and the commercial classes, as well as those of the several forms of the Collegiate Institute, will be offered prizes for essays, each from 1,000 to 1,500 words in length. The senior classes will be asked to write on the subject of "Canada Under Queen Victoria since Confederation," and the juniors will be required to give their ideas on "The Life and Times of the Queen."

The essays are to be completed and handed to the members of the committee for examination by June 15th, and if possible, they will be examined in time to be read at the exercises that are to take place on Friday afternoon, June 18th. The prizes awarded will be well worth competing for, and will be awarded according to the standing of the classes to which the winners belong, and on the merits of the work.

On Monday afternoon, June 21st, providing there be no civic celebration, the children will meet at the several schools and will march, under the leadership of their teachers, to the skating rink, where they will be massed by schools, and where patriotic choruses will be sung. The pupils will be accompanied by the band of the 14th Battalion, P.W.O.R., which will play in the rink at intervals during the afternoon. The prizes won will be distributed there also. Afterwards the pupils will be marched, headed by the band, to the park, where games will be carried out by the various schools and classes. The programme is to be elaborated during the interval between this date and the celebration.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY ANNUAL MEETING.

IT IS NOW IN SESSION IN TORONTO.

Large Attendance of Local Delegates—Encouraging Accounts of the the Auxiliary's Work—Advance Made in Every Department.

The eleventh annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to Missions, Diocese of Toronto, was opened in St. James' school house, Toronto, yesterday afternoon, at 12.30 o'clock. There were about 400 members present, and the chair was occupied the President, Mrs. Williamson.

The local delegates in attendance were:

Ashburnham—Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. Gaskins, Mrs. Baines, (Toronto).

Bailliesboro—Mrs. Boyd, Miss Fair, Mrs. Bones.

Campbellford—Mrs. Rowed, Mrs. Ingles.

Cavan—Mrs. Cameron.

Havelock—Miss Tomlinson.

Lakefield—Mrs. Lillicrap, Mrs. Lefevre.

Emily—Miss Lucy Harris.

Millbrook—Mrs. Allen, Miss Fair, Mrs. Pemberton.

Norwood — Mrs. John Gibson, Mrs. Cooper.

Omemee—Mrs. McCann, Miss Carry, Miss Stephenson, Miss Gilmour.

Otonabee—Mrs. Scollie, Miss Thorne, Miss Graystock, Miss M. Hobson.

Peterborough—St. John's—Mrs. Best, Mrs. G. A. Smith, Mrs. R. M. Dennistoun.

St. John's South Ward—Miss Chamberlen, Mrs. W. B. Bamford, Mrs. Reynolds.

When the convention assembled after luncheon, served in the school room, an address of welcome was made by the second vice-president, Mrs. Septimus Jones, to which Mrs. Adams, of Whitby, replied on behalf of the delegates. The reports of the diocesan officers was then taken up and read. They were in all instances highly satisfactory, and show that the work in all its branches is being carried on with vigour and success. The favour which it is meeting with, too, in the esteem of the general public as well as the church, is a most gratifying feature.

The address of the President contained an exhaustive review of what had been accomplished by the auxiliary and of the needs of the whole field in which the organization is privileged to labour. The internal workings of the auxiliary were stated to be most harmonious, and in many respects enthusiastic. She regretted to say that during the year five branches had been disbanded. She congratulated the members on the fact that the Blackfoot hospital pledge had been kept up, and now one of $250 for Temiscamingue was being regularly paid. The progress of the Dorcas work was cheering, and she suggested that together with the clothing in the bales be enclosed Bibles, prayer books and other religious literature.

The address of the President was received with much applause.

WORK OF THE YEAR.

The report of the Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Cummings, referred to the division of the Secretary's work and the election of Miss Mabel Cartwright as Recording Secretary, which it mentioned as a matter of sincere congratulation. The report then stated that the membership of the Dorcas Committee had been increased by resolution of the board in June last from six to eight members, while the Literature Committee was also augmented by the addition of five names. A publication for free distribution to every church family in every parish in the diocese entitled "The Diocesian Chronicle," and devoted exclusively to diocesan information, had been undertaken by the Executive. Gratitude was expressed at the widening of the auxiliary work and its consequent deepening interest in the mission field. That missionaries were going out from amongst the membership was especially a matter for congratulation. The departure for the mission field of Miss Tims, Miss Marion Kirby, Miss Shaw, Miss Alice Turner and Miss Isabel Turner was spoken of. The departure for the dark continent of John Nsipo, a native catechist, who also referred to with congratulation. The list of diocesan pledges had been carried out with consent of the Advisory Board by the inclusion of the following funds:—The salary of Miss Margaret Dartnell, share of the salary of Miss Phillips at Union Lake, and the salary of the nurse and matron at the Blackfoot Hospital. The fact that the sum required for the support of the nurse and matron at the Blackfoot Hospital, viz., $500 a year, was already definitely pledged by the branches and by individual members, chiefly by the use of the "cent-a-week" boxes, was a source of deep gratification. At the request of the board and with the consent of the Indian Department this hospital would in future bear the name of the Queen Victoria Jubilee Hospital, and the fund for the support of those at work would be called the "Jubilee Fund." Encouraging accounts of the work at Temiscamingue had been received. After recording the fact that the year's work had been most encouraging, the report states that there was in this diocese an army of women, 3,700, who as members were working for the advancement of the work.

THE TREASURER'S REPORT

showed that the cash receipts for the year amounted to $14,689.15, of which $5,406.75 were by P. M. collections, an increase of $903.85. The amount raised for diocesan missions was $5,035.67, of which $4,403.14 were contributed through the P. M. C. All the pledges of the Auxiliary had been made up, owing to the kindness of the branches.

The report of the recording secretary was very cheering. About twenty new branches were formed, while eight branches had been lost. Fifteen new life members had been gained.

The report of the Secretary-Treasurer of the Dorcas Society stated that during the year 234 bales had been sent, containing 12,758 garments, without counting 4,500 miscellaneous articles. This was 24 bales and 1,243 garments more than last year, or a greater value of $903 62, the value in material and freight of this year's bales being $4,135. The Treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $4,746.

The reports of the junior branches, the Girls' Auxiliary, the Literature Committee and the Ministering Children's League, were all gratifying. The report of the E. C. D. showed that there had been collected for this fund $469.40, a decrease from last year of $65.24.

The reports were adopted as read.

FOOT-LORE

By Dr. Shoeite.

Beloved Foot-kins!

THE difference between the average man and a "Chump" is that the latter never knows a good thing from a substitute, even when the Good Thing is stamped on the sole with the maker's name and price.

Any kind of shoes are good enough for a "Chump" provided they cost enough.

But "The Slater Shoe" is the thinker's shoe—made for folks who buy shoes intelligently, and who want to know just what they're made of—just what their actual value is.

And the shoe trade wasn't called a blind business for nothing.

Finish has to day reached a stage where it laughs at the eye, and steals from the pocket.

Even the dealer may conscientiously buy and sell shoes as good which prove by wear to be only good looking.

The materials put into the shoe—the grade of leather—quality of soles—class of workmanship—fillings, linings, stitching, and all the vital features of wear are sealed from sight, under external finish, and are known only to the manufacturers.

A shoe which costs $2.00 can be finished for 10 cents, to look as well as a shoe which cost $4.00.

It can also be sold for what it looks like, without breaking any law of the land.

They who have made shoes intelligently for 20 years should be able to tell much that shoe wearers might profitably know.

"The Slater Shoe" books are the free gift of people who know shoes, to people who wear shoes.

"Foot-Laws" tells how to care for feet, and contains 21 warnings against foot ruining customs of the age.

"Leather-Food" is a bright booklet telling how to care for shoes, and make them give double wear and comfort.

"The Sick Man of Leatherhouse" discloses some wonderful facts about feet, the mysterious connection between the nerves of the great toe and the brain, causes of foot ills, character as shown by feet, etc.

"The Craft of St. Crispin" is a 50 page book, superbly illustrated, entertainingly written, and well worth a dollar to any wearer of shoes who thoughtfully peruses it.

It tells the story of the shoe from the 3rd Century down—explains construction by the famous Goodyear Welt Process—defines the different kinds of leathers—and shows how to choose shoes according to the shape of the feet, and and according to the sort of wear the footwear is required to give.

Copy of any of these booklets free for the asking.

The Tag That Talks.

On Slater Shoes a tag folder tells the leather from which each particular pair is made—the wear it is adapted to—its effect on the feet—the dressings . . . which should be used on it, with the maker's guarantee, and the 4th page is a coupon "Good for five cents on the price of Slater Shoe Polish."

There is no lottery in the buying of Slater Shoes. You know what is under the finish and the maker's valuation is stamped on the soles.

That Stamp on the Sole, and Tag on the Shoes, make the Manufacturers clearly responsible. to Shoe—wearers for all that is thus explicitly claimed for them.

The statements are purposely committal, and no manufacturer who deals in this way direct with the public could afford to sell Shoes which would not stand the test of wear and foot-comfort.

Foot-fitting depends on the leather and workmanship, but more than all else upon the lasts.

Slater Shoe lasts are formed after moulds made from actual feet with the foot peculiarities of the age, the tender spots and weak spots carefully considered in the moulding.

They are made to fit real feet, not merely ideal feet, and the stretch is fully taken out of the leather by six days moulding on these foot-form lasts, so that the Shoes can neither shrink nor grow larger till worn out.

Beauty, without comfort, in Shoes is easily attainable; comfort, without appearance, is equally simple.

It is the unique combination of these which has made the Slater Shoe famous in two years.

THE "SLATER SHOE"

It is made from finest imported leathers, by the famous Goodyear Welt Process (Slater Method), which is exactly the same as hand made, but absolutely uniform in construction.

No cobbler could make, by hand, half so good a shoe for twice the price, as this Goodyear machinery, which never grows tired—draws the last stitch in the evening as firmly as the first stitch in the morning—waxes the thread for every stitch instead of for every dozen stitches, and cannot slight its work in the hidden parts of the shoe.

The Slater Shoe Factory is the only one in Canada which specializes—devoting all its efforts to the production of one single grade of men's shoes. Its machinery is adapted, and its operatives trained, solely to the production of this one kind and quality of work.

Money can't buy better leather, higher skill, or more careful supervision, and every pair must pass critical inspection before receiving the stamp on the sole.

A stitch dropped, a slip of the knife, or a flaw in the leather, debars a pair from ever being thus stamped—"The Slater Shoe."

Honestly made and honestly sold, by intelligent methods, with a small but sure profit for manufacturer and retailer, and the highest percentage of shoe value to the wearer which modern methods and price control by the makers can give.

Stamped on the soles by the makers, GEO. T. SLATER & SONS, Montreal.

$3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per pair.

TURNING GRAY
AND THREATENED
WITH BALDNESS
The Danger is Averted by Using
AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. Hearing Ayer's Hair Vigor highly spoken of, I commenced using this preparation, and was so well satisfied with the result that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good, natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HAIGHT, Avoca, Neb.

BIKES AS BAGGAGE.

Members of the Wheelmen's Association Press for the Passage of Mr. Casey's Bill.

Ottawa, May 4.—(Special.)—Representatives of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association were in town to-day and got in some good licks on behalf of Mr. Casey's bill. The delegation consisted of H B Donly, Simcoe, secretary-treasurer C.W.A.; H B Eyckman, Toronto, chairman Rights and Privileges Committee; Louis Rubinstein, Montreal; T A Beament, Ottawa. Their object was to secure the passage of Mr. Casey's bill declaring bicycles to be baggage under the terms of the Railway Act. They saw Hon. Messrs. Laurier and Blair to-night. They claim that the refusal of the railways to carry wheels on the same terms as trunks and other baggage is "class legislation" of the worst kind. There are at least 100,000 wheelmen now in Canada, and the number will grow in future by leaps and bounds as the price of wheels is reduced. The bicycle is rapidly becoming the poor man's horse and therefore a necessity as well as the rich man's luxury, and, used now by a large and influential class of our younger men, it will soon be almost universal.

The opposition of the railways is based on the extra trouble alleged to be given, and the extra risks of breakage when the wheels are not "crated." The C.W.A. allege that baggage cars can be fitted so as to carry bicycles without extra trouble for less than $3 each, and that the risk would disappear with these fittings. The Boston & Albany Railway is thus equipping all its baggage cars without compulsion.

In 11 States of the Union similar acts are in force, and about half the railways, even in other States, treat wheels as baggage. The Toronto Street Railway Company is fitting its cars for the free carriage of bicycles, though it suffers more from their competition than the steam railways. The Canadian Government railways and all others in the Maritime Provinces act as this bill requires.

Petitions signed by about 15,000 persons, of all classes, including the most influential, have already come in.

Mr. Blair made a somewhat important statement before the Railway Committee this morning in connection with Alberta Railway and Coal Company's Bill. He said the Government were not prepared to say that the bill interfered with the Crow's Nest Pass. It seemed, however, to him that this pass would be retained for the public so that Canada might have forever free railway facilities through it. The Minister of Railways also said in connection with this bill and one that followed, that of the Trans-Canadian Railway Company, that the Government intended looking into the standing of those asking for railway charters and also to see that every cent of the capital sum be expended on the road. He asked that these bills stand over until the Government's policy regarding the Crow's Nest was decided upon.

This has been another day of tariff deputations. The woolen men were here in force from all over the country to represent that by the proposed tariff changes their industry is receiving a very severe blow. Their claim is that especially the smaller woolen mills, turning out the cheaper classes of goods, will be wiped out by the changes which the Finance Minister has seen fit to make.

Hon. Lyman Jones of the Massey-Harris Company is here to-day in connection with the changes which have been made in farm implement duties in the new tariff.

Messrs. William Hendrie and J. S. Hendrie are here on behalf of bridge builders.

Another deputation is composed of several delegations, the personnel being: Messrs. C. H. Birge of the Canada Screw Company; C. I. Thurston, of Providence, R. I., representing cut screws; F. H. Whitton, of Hamilton, representing the Ontario Rack Company; A. W. Carscallen, of the Gurney Company; Cox and F. Roberts, of Peterboro, representing the lockmaking interests.

Mr. Ed. Currie, the Toronto necktie manufacturer, was also in town, and had an interview with Controller Paterson, in which he pointed out that while the duty on neckties had been decreased the duty on the raw material had been increased to 35 per cent. Mr. Currie made a very strong case, and is satisfied that the proposed injustice will be remedied.

Grand Trunk Ticket Office Robbed.

Colborne, May 4.—The G. T. R. station here was broken into last night. On May 1, the general manager, in his attempt to curtail expenses, removed the night operator, consequently the station is locked up against the travelling public during the night. The burglars broke into the ticket office. The ticket box was pried open and rifled. No money was obtained. The loss of tickets is unknown.

SUB-IRRIGATION.

A Method That Is Particularly Applicable to Gardens.

Sub-irrigation by means of lines of tile is too expensive. I find the cheapest way to sub-irrigate is by using ditches filled with clean gravel with coarse stone on top of the gravel. These ditches are made with a mold ditcher constructed for the purpose. A double hopper is attached to the ditcher and kept full of gravel and sand, which fills the ditches as the machine advances. The ditches should have about three inches of fall to the 100 feet. At the upper end of the gravel ditch place a six-inch tile and keep it full of water during the dry time. Also place a line of tile at the lower end of the ditch to act as a drain during wet weather. Place the gravel ditches about six or twelve feet apart and about two feet deep. On a small scale for gardening this plan will work very well.—American Agriculturist.

A happy mother is the happiest being in this world. To hold in her arms the dear little life—a part of her very own life—nestling, trusting and dependent on her protecting love, is the sweetest, most sacred responsibility of a woman's existance.

But many a woman approaching the time of motherhood feels most deeply its duties and trials. She is burdened with a sense of anxiety and unreasonable foreboding. This state of mind is unfavorable both to the mother and the child.

A prospective mother may insure herself against the slightest fear of danger or excessive pain by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, during the period of expectancy. This "Prescription" makes the coming of baby absolutely safe and comparatively painless.

It gives elastic endurance to the organism specially concerned in motherhood, and healthy vitality to the nerve-centres. It makes the mother strong and cheerful. It gives her recuperative power. It promotes abundant nourishment and provides constitutional health and energy for the child.

It is the only positive specific for all diseases of the feminine organism, devised by an educated and skilled specialist in this particular field of practice. Its sale exceeds the combined sale of all other medicines for women.

"I am very thankful for what Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has done for me," writes Mrs Etta E. Smith, of Grenola, Elk Co., Kansas "About a month before I was confined I had such pains I could stand up only a little while at a time. I could not rest at night at all, nor at any other time. I could scarcely eat anything at all. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and after the second dose I felt better From then until I was sick, I carried nearly all the water that was used, up a long hill, and worked in the garden every day, besides my other work, and did not feel at all bad. When the baby was born the doctor and the women who were with me said I had an easier time than any one they ever saw for the first time. The baby is very healthy and growing right along. I have been up ever since she was five days old."

"These two cases led me to prescribe Tutti-Frutti Gum chewing in a number of cases of Atonic Dyspepsia that came under my care. I have not kept notes of these cases, but in nearly all a cure was effected, and in the few that did not progress to a complete recovery the benefit from the procedure was marked.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT!

The Mason & Risch Piano Co. L'td.

Beg to announce that they have assumed the Agency for Central and Western Ontario of the Pianos manufactured by

Chickering & Sons, Boston.

It would be superfluous to make extended reference to the reputation of this famous house, or to the pianofortes manufactured by them. It is sufficient to say that for three quarters of a century they have occupied the position of absolute leaders in Musical Art manufacture, and their reputation was at no time greater than it is at present.

INTENDING PURCHASERS OF PIANO

Now have the choice in our warerooms of goods manufactured by the acknowledged leaders of the American and Canadian trade. The association of such Instruments as Chickering & Sons and Mason & Risch Pianos beneath one roof forms a unique combination.

AS TO PRICES!

Pianos of high artistic merit must of necessity cost more than poorer instruments, but there is no question of the direction in which true economy lies. As an evidence of this it may be mentioned that the first Piano manufactured by Chickering & Sons 73 ago is still in an excellent state of preservation, and Pianos made by Mason & Risch over 20 years ago scarcely show any sign of wear. THE WORLD'S C. E. PRAYER CHAIN.

Subject for May—"For the cause of Temperance." Pray that the drink traffic everywhere may be destroyed, and that all Christians may labour together for this end.

GEORGE STREET SOCIETY

Monday evening was the regular consecration, and after the regular service there were quite a number of new members admitted. 24 from the associate to the active list, 31 new active members and 11 new associate. A social reception will be tendered to the new members next Monday evening. There was a large attendance present. the Sunday school being full. After the meeting the Executive met, and it was decided that the officers and committees of the past term should be re-elected for the coming term.

ST. PAUL'S SOCIETY

held their regular monthly business meeting last Monday night, and being also the last business meeting of the term. The reports for the past six months were presented, which showed fairly good work done by the committees. The officers and committees for the coming term were then elected and will be the same as last term. After the business was concluded the topic "Christian Enterprise," was opened by Mr. Counal, and a large number taking part made it interesting. There was also a fair attendance.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY

Held its regular meeting on Monday night, Miss Anderson presiding. The attendance was large. After the opening exercises, the topic, "Christian Enterprise," was presented by Mr. Anderson, who exhorted personal work amongst the members, showing that the weakest efforts will be blessed. Jonah thought he would be of no value at Ninevah, but God blessed him and made him a blessing there. The business part of the meeting was conducted by Mr. Gladman, and reports received showed good work done. There were two propositions for the active membership.

ZION.

Although having been organized for more than two months, no report has as yet appeared in your columns. On the 26th of February some of the members of the Bethel E.L. of C.E. visited Zion with the intention of organizing a society. They succeeded in doing so and the society was started with twenty-eight members. The membership has almost been doubled and it is only a question of time till we eclipse in membership our parent society. The weekly meetings have been well attended, the last meeting, on Thursday, April 29th, being exceptionally so. The reading was taken by the president, Miss Duff, while Rev. W. L. Baynes Reid handled the topic —"What is true liberty, and how is it won?"—in an able and practical manner, after which Mr. Andrew Kent conducted a short prayer meeting and the usual monthly consecration service was held.

The Zion Epworth League of Christian Endeavour meets every Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, and a cordial invitation is extended to all who can possibly make it convenient to be present.

BETHEL—KEENE CIRCUIT.

On Wednesday the meeting was opened by the Vice-President. Mr. J. Humphries conducted the topic in a manner pleasing to all present, leaving this question with each one of us, "From what does and can God save us?" As the meeting this evening brings us to the close of another six months term we had good reports from the committees of the work done during the term, and as we look back over the past we can truly say that God has blessed us in our efforts for the advancement of His cause.

During the six months we have had seven new members, three active and four associate. Also six associates becoming active members. After the business for the term was talked over, we listened to a report from the delegates who attended the convention held in Peterborough on Easter Monday.

The following is a list of officers and convenors of committees, who begin work next Wednesday evening:

President—Mr. Morley Nelson.
Vice-President—Mr. Herbert Patterson.
Corresponding Secretary — Miss Edith Armstrong.
Recording Secretary — Miss Amanda Fife.
Treasurer—Miss Addie Pallin.
Organist—Miss Louisa Fife; assistant, Miss Edith Armstrong.
Reporter—Mr. Oliver Fife.

A Voice from Virden.

GENTLEMEN,—I have used Hagyard's Yellow Oil for the past ten years, and find it a splendid remedy for colic, neuralgia, bronchitis, croup, pains in the back, ulcerated and sore throat, sprains, chilblains, etc., in fact we use it for almost every pain, and it always relieves quickly. I can safely say I know of no other remedy of the sort that can equal it. We always keep a good stock in the house.

GREEKS VICTORIOUS.

They Slaughtered the Turks at Velestino.

THE CONFLICT WAS A BLOODY ONE

A General Engagement in Progress at Pharsalos—Greeks Said to Have the Best of It So Far—The Powers Said to be Pressing Mediation.

London, May 6.—The Athens correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

Ten thousand Turks attacked the Greek position at Velestino. The fire ceased at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and it is evident that the Greeks have met with a great success. There has been great slaughter at Pharsalos, where the battle is proceeding.

The Crown Prince Constantine telegraphs as to the engagement at Velestino: "With God's help our side has conquered."

5 p.m.—A private despatch received here from the front says that the battle between the Greeks and Turks began at Aivali, between Velestino and Pharsalos.

Turkish Tubs Venture Out.

Salonica, May 5.—It is officially announced that eight Turkish warships have left the Dardanelles and, after proceeding to the Cassandra Peninsula, sailed for the Island of Lemnos (Stalimni).

Mahmoud is a Tartar.

Larissa, May 5.—There was a striking feature in Friday's cavalry charge. Col. Mahmoud Bey was fired upon by a Greek officer, who sent four bullets from his revolver in the direction of the Turkish officer. Mahmoud Bey then galloped ahead of his men and with one fierce blow with his sword completely severed the Greek officer's head from his body.

Deluged With Blood.

London, May 5.—The Athens correspondent of The Times says: Simultaneously wit hthe attack at Velestino, the Turks attacked the Greek outposts at Tutar, near Pharsalos. It is said that both attacks have ben repulsed by the Greeks. Gen. Smolenski says: "The brigade at Velestino is deluged with blood."

Rejoicing at Athens.

London, May 6.—The Athens correspondent of The Standard, under date of Wednesday, says:

There is great rejoicing over the receipt of the official telegram from Pharsalos, saying that the Turks have been repulsed and that the Greeks hold their positions after a three hours' battle. The despatch says that the Crown Prince Constantine and Prince Nicholas fought courageously in the front rank, risking their lives a hundred times, and that they had an ovation from the whole army when teh fighting was over. The Government has forwarded to them its warmest congratulations.

The King and the Cabinet have also addressed a manifesto to the troops, congratulating them upon their courage and patriotic devotion.

The public is overjoyed and is already forgetting the earlier blunders of the campaign. A decisive battle is expected at Pharsalos to-morrow (Thursday).

A despatch to The Daily News from Velestino, dated Wednesday, says: The Turks to-day were repulsed after five hours' fighting, with a heavy loss. Simultaneously Edhem Pasha's main force engaged the Greek outposts at Pharsalos, and the fighting lasted from 2 p.m. until 7.3 p.m., both armies remaining their original positions.

THE WAY WE ARE KNOWN!

A lady writes from a distant point of the country, asking for samples of our Dress Materials, and requesting a date to be fixed when she can best have the attention of our Milliner and Jacket Maker.

We send dresses and House Furnishing goods all over the county of Peterborough, and are sending Hats by rail and stage quite frequently.

Do you think the orders come our way for any other reason than to Save Money on Reliable Goods and Fashionable Novelties? These are actual facts.

No Wonder We Are Busy.

Our Millinery possesses such winning attractiveness in style and quality, and is so moderately priced that the ladies have favoured us with an unusual amount of their patronage. Our modes, shapes, patterns, trimming effects, and pleasing novelties have carried the day, coupled with such surprisingly low prices.

—Trimmed Hats, from $1.50, up to $12.
—Trimmed Sailors 25c, 35c, 50c, and up to $1.25.
—Children's Tams 40c and 50c.
—Flowers, Ribbons and Ornaments, all special.

Take Care of the Cents

And the dollars will take care of themselves. Ladies are keeping up their interest in our Dress Goods because the new novelties are ticketed at prices that cannot be equalled in any store in town.

—Fine Silk and Wool Novelties at 25c.
—Neat fancy Designs in Checks at 30c.
—Silk and wool Tartans at 35c.

GREEKS RETREATED.

The Battle of Pharsalois Was Very Stubborn.

NO DECISIVE RESULT ACHIEVED.

Retirement of the Greeks Was Made in Good Order and They Are Now in a Strong Position at Domokos—The Turks Greatly Outnumbered Them.

Larissa, May 6.—A despatch from Pharsalos, dated 11 a.m., to-day, describes the battle there which began yesterday:

"A Turkish corps first appeared on the summit of Mount Tekke yesterday morning. From formidable entrenched positions on the hillside it attacked the fourth regiment of Evzones about midday. The latter made a strong resistance, but were finally compelled to fall slowly back.

"The Turks then cannonaded and destroyed the village of Ordskoni, which is about two hours' march north of Pharsalos. The Crown Prince having ordered the entire army to draw up in line of battle, the Greeks advanced about 2 p.m. The Turks, numbering 30,000, immediately descended the slopes of Mount Tekke and planted batteries, which began to bombard the Greek regiments. Owing to the superiority of weight the Turkish cannon inflicted heavy losses upon the Greeks, especially near the station.

"The Turks continued to advance until they came into close quarters and then the Crown Prince decided to retire to more commanding positions.

"All the ammunition and supplies have been transported to Domokos, on the heights of which the Greek batteries are prepared for action.

"The Turks have burned the village of Tatari, and they have massacred a priest and an entire family in the village of Dioskani."

Artillery Began the Battle.

London, May 7.—The Daily Mail's correspondent with the Turkish forces at Pharsalos, telegraphing yesterday morning, says: "Yesterday's (Wednesday) battle was most sublime as a spectacle and the most decisive of the entire war. It was not intended at the beginning that the fight should be a regular pitched engagement, but on the arrival of Edhem Pasha at the outposts, a furious firing began.

"The weather was cool and the sky somewhat cloudy after a thunderstorm. The village of Pharsalos could be seen huddled as it were, under a line of low-peaked hills. Higher and round about were black hills, rising behind the others; while between us and the village ran the small stream known to the ancients as the Halpens, crossed by a bridge at the railway. Between the stream and the village were the Greeks in an excellent position, well defended by earth works. Their advance line consisted of two brigades and their reserve of two half brigades, altogether about 20,000 men. As against these were 50,000 Turks.

"The artillery began the engagement, the Greek practice being much better than usual; but, after about two hours, they began to retire across the river. This was a great mistake, as they were thus enclosed between the river and the mountains, with no room to deploy. The sight was superb. In many cases the Greeks fought with the courage of despair. The great black masses, forming the rear guard to hold the bridge, covered the whole rich green plain. And the endurance and dash of the Turks were magnificent, too. I reached the battlefield with a regiment, whose men immediately began to run forward, dancing under fire and shouting like children when they saw the enemy. The Greeks repulsed them vigorously and followed up the repulse.

"The Turks had formed in a semi-circle of thundering batteries and crackling battalions. The division on the extreme right tried to cut off the retreat to Domokos, while the remainder of the force flung itself upon Pharsalos. The battle was but little like the battles described in books. There was no firing of volleys, no bayonet assault, no rush, no cheering; but only a steady, leisurely advance into the open in perfect order. There was some individual firing, and the soldiers shouted "Allah, Allah!" till the constant repetition swelled into one heavy monotonous shout like the "Hear, hear" of the House of Commons. I saw some men suddenly fling up their hands and fall face downwards, but the Greek fire in the main was ineffective.

"Before 5 o'clock the last village, north of the river had been taken. Then the village of Vasili and the entrenchments near the river were stormed with considerable loss to the Turks, and the battle ceased at nightfall, the flanking division having established itself behind the Greeks and cut off the best line of retreat to Athens."

The Dreibund Renewed.

London, May 7.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Rome says that the pact of the powers constituting the triple alliance was renewed yesterday (Thursday) for a period of six years. The right to withdraw under the terms of the original agreement expired on May 6, and Germany has succeeded in persuading Italy not to exercise the right of withdrawal.

Joined in Proposing Mediation.

Athens, May 6.—Austria and Germany have joined the other powers in proposing mediation between Greece and Turkey. A collective note will be handed to the Greek and Turkish Governments this (Thursday) evening or to-morrow, calling upon them to cease hostilities on the distinct assurance that the powers will undertake the final solution of pending difficulties.

TO END THE BLOODSHED.

Will Be the Aim of the British Government, Says Lord Salisbury.

London, May 6.—At the annual meeting of the Primrose League to-day the Marquis of Salisbury, discussing the Graeco-Turkish question, said:

"The main object of the European concert was to prevent a European war, adding that the belief prevailed that all danger of such a war was finally dissipated and the peace of Europe, apart from the local conflict, had been placed on a better basis, and he had better hope in its future than ever before. Her Majesty's Government, the Premier also said, would do its best to end the bloodshed.

In his concluding reference to the war, the Marquis of Salisbury said: "The opening of the Eastern question was greatly dreaded, but it has now come like a nightmare. There has been great terror that any outbreak in the southeast of Europe might lead to a general blaze, but it is to be hoped that the danger is past and that we may look calmly on the larger interests involved. It may be that Turkey has exhibited proofs of strength which few suspected, and perhaps a better future is open to the dominions of the Sultan. Their Government may improve, or may be the empire will collapse, as many have feared. In either case we are justified in believing that all changes will be conducted under the sanction of peaceful deliberations."

Powers Intervening.

Athens, May 6, 2 p.m.—Gen Smolenski's brigade of Greek troops is also about to retreat from Velestino. Smolenski will fall back on Volo and will try to hold that place with the protection of the Greek fleet, or he may retreat on Almyro, with the view of possibly effecting a junction later with the bulk of the Greek army.

The report that the powers are intervening is confirmed. The Ministers of Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy have been instructed to propose mediation between Greece and Turkey and similar instructions to the German and Austrian Ministers are expected every moment.

Where the U. S. Comes In.

New York, May 6.—A Washington special to The Sun says: For the first time since hostilities between the Turks and Greeks the United States is directly represented at the scene of action. A cablegram today received from Admiral Selfridge by Secretary Long states that his flagship, the San Francisco, is now anchored at the Piraeus, the port of Athens, seven miles distant from that city.

The admiral has evidently become convinced that breaks may come. It may become necessary for him to protect Minister Alexander, or see that the attaches of the legation in Athens suffer no indignity. Beyond this no American interests are involved.

If a revolution should occur in Athens with the overthrow of the reigning dynasty, the flag of Admiral Selfridge would become the haven of refugees seeking the right of asylum. This also might create complications and it is possible that the admiral will be given an opinion on the subject.

From Turkish Headquarters.

With the Turkish headquarters, before Pharsalos, 7 p.m., May 5.—The Turks made a great attack upon the Greek positions today. The Turkish forces were successful all along the line and continued their victorious advance until nightfall and the Greeks retired in good order. The Greeks, however, at this hour, still hold Pharsalos, but all their positions on the north side of the river were captured and railway communication with Volo has been completely cut off by the Turks.

Another Turkish division will arrive here to-morrow and the attack will be continued if the Greeks do not retreat in the meantime.

Discretion Was It, or Defeat?

With the Turkish headquarters, before Pharsalos, Morning, May 6.—It was ascertained at daybreak that the Greeks had evacuated Pharsalos during the night time. The majority of the Greek forces are retreating on Domokos. The baggage and artillery took the main road and the infantry crossed the hills.

Cretans Want to Fight.

Athens, May 6.—A despatch from the island of Cerigo says that 5000 Cretans are ready to land in Greece for active service against the Turks, and asks for means of transportation.

DAVITT IS HAPPY.

The Irish Home of England is Glad at the Defeat of the Arbitration Treaty by the United States Senate.

Washington, D.C., May 6.—One of the happiest man over the defeat of the arbitration treaty is Michael Davitt, Home Rule leader in the British Parliament.

Before going to New York to-day, preparatory to sailing for home, Mr. Davitt said that a ratification of the treaty, no matter how much it had been modified, would have created the impression throughout continental Europe that this republic, with its Irish, German, French and other races, had morally endorsed England's anti-Christian foreign policy.

While rejoicing that England has been balked in her efforts, Mr. Davitt sees no reason why there should not be a universal arbitration, with all the great Christian nations being taken into the agreement, and therefore argues that the general cause has not been put back by the rejection of what he regards as John Bull's selfish attempt to worry an alliance with Uncle Sam and exclude the big nations of Europe.

A Disgrace to the Republic.

Buffalo, N.Y., May 6.—Referring editorially to the defeat of the arbitration treaty in the Senate, The Commercial to-day says: "The rejection of the arbitration treaty by the United States Senate yesterday closes an episode that does the republic no credit, and that lends additional weight to the prevailing belief in the degeneracy of the Senate. This treaty was framed at the instance, chiefly, of the United States. Congress almost unanimously approved the scheme when it was brought forward a few years ago, and it was pressed upon the present British Ministry. President McKinley urged its consummation as earnestly as his predecessor. The intelligence and good citizenship of the country welcomed it with enthusiasm. Public opinion was almost solidly behind it. And yet, a minority in the Senate, openly or secretly hostile, by delaying action and appealing to prejudice and other motives, has succeeded, after radically amending the treaty, in rejecting it altogther by four votes. It is a mortifying as well as an impotent conclusion of a movement that promised to glorify the last years of the nineteenth century."

KRUGER GIVES WAY

But, of Course, Not on Mr. Chamberlain's Demand.

THE IMMIGRATION LAW REPEALED

Which Has Caused So Much Trouble Between Great Britain and the Boer Government—Mr. Chamberlain's Instructions to Lord Rosemead in the Matter.

Pretoria, May 6.—The Volksraad held a protracted secret session yesterday to discuss the answer to be made to the despatches of Mr. Chamberlain, British Secretary of State for the Colonies, which demanded a repeal of the Transvaal immigration law.

To-day the Volksraad repealed the law, not because it was a breach of the London Convention, but because it was distasteful to neighboring states.

Mr. Coster, the Transvaal State Attorney, has tendered his resignation in disapproval of the repeal.

The position taken by Mr. Chamberlain on the subject of the Transvaal Alien Immigration law, No. 30, of 1896, was stated in his despatch to Lord Rosemead, the British High Commissioner at the Cape, under date of Dec. 15, 1896. He said to Lord Rosemead:

"Inform the Government of the South African Republic that Her Majesty's Government can not, in view of article 14 of the London Convention, admit that the Government of the South African Republic has a right of expelling or restricting foreigners who are not shown to have failed to conform to the laws of the republic, and that Her Majesty's Government reserves the right of objecting to proceedings under the act which may amount to a breach of the convention.

"Inform the Government of the South African Republic that Her Majesty's Government is advised that the Alien Immigration law infringes article 14 of the London Convention, inasmuch as by it new and burdensome conditions, in most cases probably impossible to fulfil, are imposed on persons who, under the convention, are at full liberty to enter and reside in the South African republic on condition of conforming to its laws.

"You will state that Her Majesty's Government appreciates the repeated assurances of President Kruger that the Government of the South African Republic has no intention of departing from the terms of the London convention, and, therefore, feels confident that it will not attempt to enforce the law."

In a letter to Lord Rosemead, explaining the reasons for the despatch, Mr. Chamberlain said the British Government could not accept the Alien Immigrants Law as an ordinary police law within the terms of article 14 of the London convention, which declares that all persons other than natives conforming themselves to the laws of the South African Republic shall have full liberty to enter, travel or reside in any part of the Republic. The Alien Immigrants Law provided that such persons should not be at liberty to enter or reside in the Republic unless they could show affirmatively that they had the means or ability to support themselves. Mr. Chamberlain argued that as the only condition imposed by the convention is that they should conform to the laws of the Republic, the new laws would be ultra vires and moreover, would impose a "further condition of a burdensome nature, which it might be difficult for many of the poor, though perfectly respectable, immigrants to satisfy."

THE BUTCHERY OF SEALS.

Mr. Allison Proposes an Amendment Which He Thinks Will Stop It.

Washington, D.C., May 6.—In the Senate to-day a Behring Sea debate occurred, when Mr. Allison offered an amendment appropriating $25,000 for continuing the investigation of the fur seal fisheries.

Mr. Pettigrew proposed a substitute providing a commission to negotiate with Great Britain, Russia and Japan relative to the protection of the seals, and in the event of no agreement, then of killing all the seals. The Senator said this action would bring speedy action by the British Government, and would put an end to the barbarous butchery of the seals. The Pettigrew substitute went out on a point of order.

MILKSOP AMERICANS.

They Throw Down Arbitration One Day and Talk in Favor of It the Day Following.

Washington, May 6.—As a sequel to the defeat of the Anglo-American treaty of arbitration, Mr. Bacon of Georgia introduced in the Senate to-day the following joint resolution deprecating war and announcing the policy of the Government favorable to arbitration:

"Resolved, That the United States of America deprecate war and desire the maintenance of peace and friendship with all the world, and that this desire is not limited to their relations with any one nation, but extends to their relations with all the nations of the earth, whether the same be great or small, strong or weak.

"That to the end that these relations of peace and amity, now happily existing between them and all nations, may be perpetually preserved, and that wars may be discouraged, and as far as practicable made impossible. The United States favor the principle and practice of international arbitration for the settlement of questions in difference between them and any other nation which they may fail to adjust by treaty or diplomatic negotiation.

"That the United States do hereby aver as their future policy and intention, whenever there shall arise any question in difference between them and any other nation which they may fail to adjust by treaty or diplomatic negotiation, that they shall and will, so far as they can, consistently with the national honor, the integrity of their territory and their foreign and domestic policies, submit such question in difference to the arbitrament and final decision of an international court of arbitration. Such court of arbitration shall, in the future as in the past, be constituted by agreement between the parties consenting thereto, with special reference and adaptation to the particular question in difference, and to the conditions then existing.

"That the United States hereby invite all civilized nations to make a corresponding and reciprocal declaration, to the end that wars between nations may cease.

Daily Examiner.

FRIDAY, MAY 7, 1897.

SPLENETIC SPLUTTER.

The New York Sun, the champion Anglophobe journalistic crank of the United States, vents its spite upon the "silly rhodomontade and spurious sentimentality" in connexion with and the Queen' sDiamond Jubilee, adds that she is not worthy of such special attention any more than the long reign monarchs, Henry III, Edward VI, Elizabeth or George III—"Nobody ever thought of celebrating the latter's diamond or golden jubilee." As a matter of fact, of which the Sun is ignorant, the golden jubilee of George III was celebrated, and only a few days ago the EXAMINER reprinted from a journal of the period—1810, the programme of the celebration festivities. The Sun has spots on its jaundiced face; its hatred of England inspires its ill-natured growls at the Victorian jubilee. It cuts the journal to the heart to see how spontaneously and enthusiastically the citizens of the empire in every region of the globe unite in celebrating the longest as well as the best reign of the world's history. When the martyred president of the United States, Abraham Lincoln lay dead, his body, previous to being laid at rest, was peddled through the chief cities of the United States and made a solemn public show. While the good taste of such a proceeding might be questioned, all could heartily sympathize with the desire to show respect to the remains of a great man who was so abundantly worthy of respect. And no Canadian journal, decent or otherwise, was found to cavil at the "spurious sentimentality" of the demonstration of respect to President Lincoln. The Sun may scoff but it cannot scorch. We Canadians, and the subjects of her Majesty, the world over, feel a genuine respect, reverence and love for our great queen, and we shall not be deterred from giving it formal expression, by the jaundiced growls of such low class journalistic censure—God Save the Queen.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IT is difficult to see why railways that tolerate feminine band boxes as personal baggage can consistently object to giving bicycles a similar "show."

THE Globe says:—"The great advantage of the United States method of fiscal legislation is the scope given for predictions of disaster. During the debate which has completely changed the new tariff measure disaster has been predicted for almost every industry in the nation, either on account of or for want of a suggested change. In Canada the new measure takes effect at once, and as there is no disaster the scope for the prophets of evil is limited.

THE contention that the failure to put an export duty of $2.00 per cord on pulp wood will close Canadian pulp works seems to be seriously affected by the fact that the shareholders of the Laurentide Pulp Company, of Montreal, are considering the advisability of increasing the capital stock of the company from $300,000 to $600,000. Trebling the working capacity of the company's mills on the St. Maurice, near Three Rivers, does not look like being frozen out of the business.

IT is announced that the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railways have decided to resume dollar trips between Chatham and Detroit. Couldn't our Board of Trade impress upon the two great railways, that have absorbed so large an amount of the public funds, that they would be acting more honestly and consistently by giving market rates to stimulate trade in Canadian towns than by facilitating the trade of Canadians with a foreign country. Cheap rates from Chatham to Detroit means taking good Canadian money to the United States; whereas, special market rates from surrounding villages to Peterborough would mean advantage to the people of these places and profit to Peterborough merchants.

A paragraph in the Ottawa correspondence to the Mail and Empire refers in rather a tone of depreciation to the leniency shown by the Government to the criminal classes. It appears from a return brought down in the House that in sixty-five cases prisoners have been released from the penitentiaries since July last by commutations or pardons. Four persons sentenced to capital punishment have escaped the gallows by having their sentences commuted to imprisonment for life. Most of the commutations of time sentences were on the recommendations of the trial judges, and several on account of the ill-health of the prisoners. It does not seem inconsistent with the spirit of the Jubilee year that royal or at least vice-royal clemency should be extended to "prisoners and captives."

"WHOM the gods would destroy they first make mad." The Sultan of Turkey is an example. He has had repeated warning of the danger of being brought up with a round turn, yet he does not hesitate to provoke the great powers to enter the process of dismemberment. Turkey never learns. It has for years mistaken the failure of the powers to agree upon the terms of its partition, for a recognition of the greatness of the moribund state. Now the Sultan is putting his illustrious foot into it again. Because he has achieved a temporary military success on Greece, he is becoming so arrogant that the powers are "calling him down," and he is thereby provoking the stimulation of the process of decadence that has been rapidly going on for the past century. Gladstone may yet live to see the "Unspeakable Turk" get his deserts, and that is his extinction as a natical entity.

A Mr. Hulin, of North Chatham, objects to the new tariff on cement, which prevents the importation of American cement, which he considers better than the Canadian. This gentleman is unpatriotic or is at sea in his facts. The truth is that the Canadian cements are not surpassed by any on the continent. The specifications in Trent Valley Canal contracts demand the best cement, and it is considered by the superintending engineer that the Rathbun cement, made at Napanee or Deseronto, fills the bill. It is claimed that the "Star" brand of the Rathbun Company is superior to any on the continent, and is equal to the best foreign. An immense amount of cement is used on the canal in the construction of locks, and as the best only is allowed to be used, and as the Rathbun cement is used, it is evident that the Chatham man's contention is off colour.

Peterborough People Talk About the New Conqueror of Kidney Trouble.

Mr. Jas. Sloan, well-know employee of the Canadian General Electric Company, who resides at 451 Stewart street, Peterborough, Ont., says:—"I have been seriously afflicted for the last three years with severe pains in my back, caused undoubtedly by wrong action of the kidneys. Headaches, sleeplessness, dizziness and kindred kidney troubles also had their share in adding to my misery.

All the remedies I took did me no good until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Lynch's Drug Store. To put it in a few words I can say without hesitation that it only took two boxes to make a complete cure.

I am very grateful to this remedy for rescuing me from the painful and distressing afflictions which had troubled me for such a long time.

The specific and direct action of Doan's Kidney Pills on the kidneys always restores them to healthy natural action, thus curing all diseases arising from disorder of the kidneys, bladder or urinary organs.

Backache, weak back, diabetes, Bright's disease, gravel, etc., all yield readily to Doan's Pills. Full directions with each box. Price 50c per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all druggists.

SIR HENRI JOLY.

He Refuses to Lend his Name to "Fake" Mining Enterprises—A Minister Above the Influences of Corruption.

(Montreal Witness.)

Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere has, in the spirit of high chivalry which always guides him, taken boldly by the horns one of the great evils of our day by forwarding for publication one of those letters which men of prominence receive, offering them a consideration for the use of their names as guarantees for some speculative enterprise. It is well-known that ninety nine per cent. of those who buy small shares in speculative enterprises do so in dependence on the honourable names they see in connection with them. It is therefore inexcusable for persons whose names are so valued to give them as warrant without sharing the risk. The guarantee in such cases is spurious, and when given for a pecuniary consideration, is corrupt. Although fully appreciating the enormous value of the precious metals in British Columbia, we have from the beginning of the mining boom earnestly warned our readers against investing in what they did not understand. The man who has money to invest should get the advice of an independent engineer in whom he has absolute confidence. He who cannot do this should regard the visions of wealth, dangled before his eyes by persons anxious to give that wealth to him, as illusions. Of course there are always the names on the prospectuses to fall back upon, but episodes like this exposed by Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere suggest that well-known names are not always to be trusted.

[The organizer of a mining company wrote to Sir Henri Joly, offering him stock in return for the use of his name as director. The honest knight declined the offer, adding that if he were inclined to take stock in the company, such an offer would decide him against such a course —ED. EXAMINER.

THE MILITARY STAFF

Which Mr. Laurier Will Have In London.

LEADING CANADIAN OFFICERS

Will Accompany the Premier to the Jubilee Demonstration—Party Lines Not Observed in the Invitations Sent Out—Expenses Will Be Paid by Government.

Ottawa, May 6.—(Special.)—When the Premier goes to England next month he will be accompanied by a staff of officers selected from the various corps throughout the Dominion. These will constitute his personal staff, and will be separate altogether from those connected with the jubilee contingent.

It will be noticed that Mr. Laurier, in making his selections, has endeavored to secure a representative body of officers, and his generous recognition of three leading members of the Opposition will doubtless be heartily appreciated in the country.

The following are included in the list to whom invitations have been sent: Col. the Hon. M. Aylmer, Adjutant-General; Col. Hon. J. M. Gibson, Hamilton; Col. Hon. D. Tisdale, M.P.; Col. Hon. E. G. Prior, M.P.; Col. Tucker, M.P.; Col. Domville, M.P.; Col. Tyrwhitt, M.P.; Col. Mason, Royal Grenadiers; Col. O'Brien, ex-M.P.; Col. Burland, 6th, Montreal; Col. Munro, 22nd Oxford Battalion; Col. Longworth, 4th P.E.I. Regiment; Col. White, 8th R.R., Quebec; Surgeon-Major C. W. Wilson, Montreal; Major Herbert, 65th, Montreal; Captain Henry Bate, G.G.F.G.; Lieut. Borden and Lieut. Courtney, Royal Military College graduates.

Following is the form of invitation sent to these officers: I have the honor, by direction of the General Officer Commanding, to inform you that your name has been proposed as that of an officer to be selected to represent Canada with the contingent sent to Her Majesty's Jubilee. I am to inquire whether you are disposed to accept the nomination under the following conditions:

1. The contingent will embark on the R.M.S. Vancouver from Montreal, June 5th, or at Quebec same date. It is understood that the Jubilee celebration will end on June 23 and that the contingent will then return, sailing from Liverpool on July 1, in the S.S. Scotsman.

2. The pay offered will be that of an officer's rank. It will commence two days before embarkation in Canada, and end one day after disembarkation on return.

3. All officers accompanying the contingent will be, for all purposes, under the command of the officer selected to command the contingent, and will be subject to military law.

4. It is understood that the British military authorities will provide quarters and lodgings for all officers with the contingent.

5. Return transportation from headquarters of the corps to which you belong to the port of embarkation in Canada will be provided free, as well as passage to and from England, and while in England, to and from all jubilee celebrations at which you are officially present.

6. The following uniform must be taken: (1) full dress; (2) undress, including great coat; (3) in the case of mounted officers, uniform for mounted duties. Horses will be provided in England. It is understood that saddlery will also be provided, but, if not, notification to that effect will be sent you as soon as possible.

7. The following other clothing is also desirable: (1) mess dress; (2) plain clothes, frock or black morning coat and silk hat.

8. No pay or allowance of any sort other than those mentioned in the foregoing paragraphs will be given.

Should you be prepared to accept nomination upon the conditions given above, be so good as to so state.

CROW'S NEST RAILWAY.

The Matter Came Before the Railway Committee Yesterday — Other Ottawa News.

Ottawa, May 6.—(Special.)—The Crow's Nest Pass Railway matter was up again at the Railway Committee to-day.

Judge Clark, for the Canadian Pacific Railway, appeared on behalf of the bills. They were respecting the Trail Creek and Columbia Railway Company and respecting the Columbia and Kootenay Railway and Navigation Company. He spoke of the Columbia and Kootenay Railway and said that it was purely in the hands of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Col. Domville opposed the charters on the ground that the privileges asked in them might block other railway building in connection with the Crow's Nest Pass.

Mr. Louat asked that Mr. Blair be heard from on the matter. Mr. Blair said that there was a good deal of truth in what Col. Domville said. It would be very much better if the Canadian Pacific came to Parliament in its own name and asked such legislation rather than in the name of other companies. If no particular urgency was shown for the bill he would suggest that it should stand over until the Government's policy as to the Crow's Nest Pass was announced.

Sir Charles Tupper asked when this policy would be announced.

Mr. Blair replied that the Government was busy with other important matters, and had to let this subject stand over, but as soon as a decision was reached he would announce the same to the committee. There were many people who wanted the Government to build this Crow's Nest Pass Road. That was a matter which had to be considered.

Mr. Clark said the C.P.R. had not yet declared its intention to build through the Crow's Nest Pass.

Mr. Blair: It is in your annual statement.

Mr. Clark: No.

Mr. Blair: Even if it is not there, I have had the personal assurance of the president and vice-president of the Canadian Pacific that the company does intend to build through the Crow's Nest Pass.

The bill was allowed to stand over.

The Railway Committee to-day passed bills to confirm an agreement between the C.P.R. and Hull Electric Railway respecting the Canada Atlantic Railway, respecting Niagara Grand Island Bridge Company, respecting the River St. Clair Railway Bridge and Tunnel Company, respecting the Atikokan Iron Range Railway Company.

The Private Bills Committee to-day passed bills respecting the Welland Power and Supply Canal Company and to confer certain powers on the Management Board of the Presbyterian Temporalities Fund.

It is stated in official circles that the Government has about decided to station a detachment of mounted police at the head of Lynn Canal, which is the landing point for the commencement of the overland route to the waters of the Yukon River, whence navigation commences for the gold regions. These police will combine a custom service with their ordinary duties, and will doubtless collect on American goods entering the country more than will pay for their maintenance.

The Speaker of the House of Commons gave a luncheon to-day in honor of Mgr. Mery Del Val, to which the following were invited: Mgr. Mery Del Val, Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, Chief Justice Sir Henry Strong, Archbishop Duhamel, Bishop Hamilton, the Speaker of the Senate, Sir Charles Tupper, Archdeacon Lauder, M. L'Abbe Temperer, private secretary to Mgr. Mery Del Val; Sheriff Sweetland, Mr. O'Gara, Q.C., Premier Greenway of Manitoba, Hon. G. W. Ross, Sir Oliver Mowat, Hon. R. W. Scott, Sir Adolph Caron, Hon. W. S. Fielding, Hon. L. H. Davies, Hon. J. I. Tarte, Mr. Bourinot, Mr. Beaugart, M.P., Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Edwards, Hon. George A. Cox, Sir James Grant, Dr. H. P. Wright, Mr. O'Keefe, M.L.A., Mr. D. Erskine, A.D.C., and Mr. Charles Magee.

Sir Oliver Mowat has been confined to his house the last couple of days, but is reported to be much improved to-day, so that there is a prospect of his taking his seat again either this afternoon or to-morrow.

A gold mining company recently wrote to Sir Henri Joly asking for permission to use his name as one of the promoters. They offered him as a gift in return 20,000 shares, valued at 10 cents each. The gallant old knight replied: "If I had the least intention of taking shares in your company, your offer would be sufficient to dissuade."

This was Arbor Day at the Normal and Model Schools. Two trees were planted, one by Lady Aberdeen, called the jubilee tree, and the other by Hon. G. W. Ross, to be known as the Ontario tree.

Ex-President Grover Cleveland will arrive in Ottawa early next month to wet a line in the far-famed Thirty-one Mile Lake, up the Gatineau.

Lieut.-Col. White, Deputy Postmaster-General, has gone to Washington as a representative of Canada to the International Postal Congress.

The Senate will probably adjourn from to-morrow till Wednesday of next week.

A delegation of Canadian plate glass manufacturers are here to-day seeking more protection. Messrs. Gooderham and Beattie of Toronto are here to urge a change in the excise duty on spirits.

The Government has been notified that the C.P.R. steamer Empress of China and the first-class passengers have been liberated, the period of innoculation having elapsed.

The House Proceedings.

Ottawa, May 6.—(Special.)—The time of the House was taken up to-day in a discussion of the steamer Diana, which has been chartered to convey the Hudson's Bay expedition, and the matter of dismissals for offensive partisanship. No definite result was reached in either case, and the House adjourned at midnight.

TALMAGE'S MISSION OF MERCY.

The Divine Has Returned From a Tour in the Interests of the Indian Famine Stricken.

Washington, D. C., May 6.—Rev. Dr. De Witt Talmage of the First Presbyterian Church in this city, who has just returned from a tour in the West, made with the object of raising contributions for the relief of the famine sufferers in India, called at the Navy Department to-day, to report progress to Secretary Long, who is charged by law with the procurement of suitable vessels for transportation of food supplies. The doctor reported that he had been thoroughly successful in obtaining contributions, and wished to arrange for sending the goods as early as possible. Secretary Long said that he desired to afford all assistance in his power.

The Wonder of the Age.

DEAR SIRS,—I must honestly say that I have tried your valuable medicine B.B.B. for the disease called prairie itch, and have found this remedy to be the wonder of the age. I took only three bottles and to my great satisfaction was completly cured. I can highly recommend it to all who suffer from any skin disease or impurity of the blood.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Graham of Mara Township Lived Over 100 Years, 75 of Which They Spent Together.

Beaverton, Ont., May 6.—With this week closes the remarkable longevity of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Graham of the township of Mara. The former breathed his last on Monday night, and on Wednesday night, only two days later, his partner in life followed him, the former having completed the century mark—100 years, the latter 102 years, and having lived together for upwards of 75 years. Three sons and one daughter survive them: Mrs. D. Graham, Belleville; Mrs. Charles McLean, Thorah, and Messrs. James and John Graham of Mara. It is doubtful if there is a parallel in the province. But few can claim birth in the eighteenth century, and a life extending over a period of such remarkable advances as have taken place during the past century, from the steady plodding of the ox team to the swiftly moving electrical vehicles. To the Graham couple this did not appear, having spent the greater part of their lives in the peaceful retirement of the farm. Coming to Canada from Scotland in 1863, they settled in the township of Mara, where with the sturdy pluck which characterized the early Scotch settlers they energetically commenced the struggle for independence and obtained it as a reward for duty nobly performed. Mara always honors her pioneers, and attended the last rites in large numbers, showing their respect for the deceased. Mrs. John McCuaig, sister of Mr. Graham, was interred last week at the age of 98.

When fevers and other epidemics are around, safety lies in fortifying the system with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A person having thin and impure blood, is in the most favourable condition to "catch" whatever disease may be floating in the air. Be wise in time.

Proof from the People.

Mr. Geo. Buskin, Missionary for the International Mission in Algoma and North-West. He writes:—"I wish to say that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been to me a wonderful, soothing, speedy and effectual remedy. It has been my companion for several years during the labours and exposures of my missionary work in Algoma. Well it is for the old and young to have it in store against the time of need, which so often comes without warning.

MASON & RISCH PIANOS

Are the Instruments of the Cultured

For over twenty years they have been without an equal in the favour of those best qualified to judge of the musical merit of an instrument. There are other points beyond musical excellence, however, which have combined to give the Mason & Risch Pianos their peculiar pre-eminence.

They are Durable Beyond All Comparison.

That is what secured for them the preference in all colleges and schools. Mount Allison Ladies' College has just purchased its 25th Mason & Risch Piano. This is but one instance among many.

They are Moderate in Price.

While but few people of taste or judgment would care to purchase any of the very low priced Pianos now on the market, still fewer can afford the very high figures (plus duties) which are asked for the highest grade American Pianos. Mason & Risch supply a first-class Piano at a moderate price.

Their Terms Are Easy.

One of the great advantages which capital enables our company to afford its customers is easy terms of payment. Write us on this point. Also please write us for our new Illustrated Catalogue. Mailed free.

Huckleberries.

Those who have been over the ground and rocks where the huckleberry grows, say that present indications point to a large crop this year. The bushes are now putting forth blossom in abundance and the only thing to prevent a productive yield is the frost that comes when the berry is beginning to form. The earliest of the crop begin to ripen about the middle of next month, and there is usually a large quantity picked by the 1st of July.

It extends to nearly five pages, and affords a comprehensive view of what appears to have been the best meeting of this highly successful society held in the twenty-one years of its existence. The Canadian Presbyterian is a well-conducted journal, and merits the large circulation it enjoys. In its pages will be found contributions on many interesting topics from the foremost ministers and laymen of the denomination. ARRANGEMENTS FOR A JUBILEE CELEBRATION.

THE COUNCIL WAS ASKED FOR A GRANT LAST NIGHT.

The Official Observance of the Day to Take Place in the Morning—The Afternoon to be Left Open to Allow the Citizens to Enjoy Themselves as They Deem Best.

A conference was held last evening between representatives from the Citizens Jubilee Demonstration Committee, and from the town council, for the purpose of finally deciding upon the best method of celebrating the day.

Amongst those present were the Mayor, who occupied the chair, and Councillors Dawson, Deane, Cobb, McWilliams, White, Graham, Davis and Maldrum, and from the committee, Messrs. D. W. Dumble, W. H. Moore, A. McCallum, Wm. Taylor, Lt.-Col. Bell, James Stevenson, Thos. Cahill and Dr. Rose.

In explaining the object of the committee in seeking the conference with the council, Mr. Dumble thought it was desirable that an invitation should be issued through the council to the military and various societies in town to turn out in full regalia and make as imposing a procession as possible in the morning. It was desirable also that the town be decorated with flags and bunting and that at night the private residences be illuminated. The invitation to the military and the societies should come through the proper authorities—the official head of the town.

AFTER THE PROCESSION

it was thought that an oration might be given in the Central Park before those marching had dispersed. They could then disband and the citizens could be allowed to amuse themselves in any way they saw fit during the rest of the day.

Mr. W. H. Moore's remarks were along the same line as those of Mr. Dumble. He thought it might be arranged to have some music in the parks at night. When the matter of the oration had been spoken of at the last meeting of the committee, Mr. Dumble had been the choice for the post of orator.

Mr. Dumble declined the invitation to speak, suggesting the name of Rev. Mr. Symonds. Mr. J. B. McWilliams mentioned Rev. W. R. Young, and Mr. Stevenson advocated Rev. J. G. Potter. It was eventually decided that an invitation be extended to Rev. H. Symonds to deliver the oration on the occasion mentioned.

The proposed plan of celebrating the day, Mr. Dumble thought, would prove most inexpensive. The principal business streets could be decorated by men at the expense of the town, and the citizens would also, doubtless, use a liberal supply of bunting on their private residences. The only other expense which he foresaw would be the providing of the music. This, he thought, would prove a dignified and proper observance of the day. The committee could not undertake to get up a programme of sports for the afternoon, and he would not advise that anything of the kind be attempted.

Mr. Moore stated that at first the committee had thought of holding an entertainment of some nature in the afternoon and raising a sufficient sum through charging an admission to erect a substantial memorial of the day, but when a vote was taken on the subject it was decided that if a programme of sports was held that there should be no charge of admission. This, of course, knocked on the head any scheme of devoting the funds raised to any special purpose, as there could be no funds. Without fee the sports would have been an expensive item to handle, as a grant for the purposes of prizes would have had to be given by the council. It had been decided on these grounds that this part of the programme had better be dropped.

Mr. Wm. Taylor asked the council when the grant was made to the committee to make provision for erecting a platform on the Central Park in order that a May-pole might be set up and the little ones have an opportunity of dancing around it.

Messrs. Dumble and Moore moved that the programme as proposed be the one adopted for the celebration of the Jubilee. The motion carried.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn introduced the question of inviting the county troops to participate in the procession. If the invitation was accepted, however, a larger grant would have to be made, as about one hundred horsemen would turn out, and as many of them would have to come quite a distance, their horses would have to be stabled and the man looked after.

Mr. Dumble thought that if the troopers were not loyal enough to turn out and pay their own expenses that they would have to try and get along without them.

Lt.-Col. Bell stated that the infantry could be depended upon to be in line.

On motion of Messrs. Dumble and Moore it was decided that the Mayor send notices, as the official head of the town, to the military and the different societies inviting them to turn out and form a morning procession in full regalia.

It was decided that the regalia would not include the society banners, etc., or bands other than those provided by the committee.

Councillors Dawson and Maldrum moved that the citizens be requested by proclamation to decorate their premises for the occasion, and also illuminate in the evening.

The motion was carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

Baby Eczema and Scald Head.

Infants and young children are peculiarly subject to this terrible disorder, and if not promptly arrested it will eventually become chronic. Dr. Chase made a special study of Eczema and disease of the skin, and we can confidently recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure all forms of Eczema. The first application soothes the irritation and puts the little sufferer to rest.

ODDFELLOWS AT HOME TO THEIR FRIENDS.

PETERBOROUGH LODGE ENTERTAINS RIGHT ROYALLY.

The Handsome Apartments of the Order Beautifully Decorated for the Occasion—Presentation to Mr. Jos. Kidd—Other Particulars.

Peterborough Lodge, No. 111, Independent Order of Oddfellows, held their annual "At Home" and reception last evening in the handsome and well appointed apartments of the Order last evening. The success attending the affair was such as to draw from the numerous guests the warmest congratulations for the members.

To the committee in charge much praise praise is due, as they worked indefatigably to provide for the comfort of their guests. It was composed of Messrs. T. C. Elliott, chairman; W. J. Green, Secretary; A. McFarlane, W. H. Hill, A. McIntosh, R. Scott, J. M. White, J. H. Smith, G. M. Bennett, Geo. Gilbert, S. Clegg, Wm. Cowle, T. McFadden and A. J. Johnston.

Mr. T. C. Elliott occupied the chair, and made a few remarks in opening, after which a brief but was rendered. The vocalists contributing were Miss Hurley and Mr. J. J. Turner, who acquitted themselves in a manner most acceptable to the audience. Miss Mary Grant and Miss May McFarlane's dashing instrumental duet was well received, and an instrumental by Mr. Miller and the Staples family was fully appreciated.

During the evening Mr. Jos. Kidd who is leaving to take up his residence in the Northwest was called to the platform, when Mr. R. F. Morrow read

THE FOLLOWING ADDRESS:

PETERBOROUGH, May 6th, 1897.

Mr. Joseph Kidd:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Part of our duty in this happy gathering to-night is not altogether of a pleasant nature.

We learned with regret a short time ago of your intended removal from our midst, and we realised that by your departure we would lose one who has endeared himself to all of us who have had the pleasure of his acquaintance and one who has worked with untiring zeal to advance the best interests of our lodge ever since you united with us.

We are pleased, however, that you will still be able to visit us and we hope that your visits will be frequent. We shall always hail your coming with delight.

And now we ask you to accept this Past Grand's jewel and this cane as slight tokens of the high esteem in which you are held amongst us, and we trust they will remind you of many pleasant hours spent with the members of Peterborough Lodge No. 111.

Signed on behalf of the lodge,
GEO. W. BENNETT, N.G.,
A. MCFARLANE, R.S.

Mr. Angus McIntosh made the presentation.

Mr. Kidd made a suitable acknowledgment of the handsome gifts, and warmly thanked his brother Oddfellows for their kind remembrance of him.

At the conclusion of the programme the guests amused themselves in card playing, dancing, etc., for several hours.

The music was provided by the Misses Hurley and the dancing hall never looked prettier, the decorations being positively superb. Bunting, flags and pennants were draped on the walls and ceiling with a lavish hand, and the effect was most pleasing.

The refreshments were all that could possibly be desired, the lodge outdoing itself in this department particularly, carte blanche, having evidently been given the caterers.

THE TOWER FLOOR GIVES WAY.

And a Quantity of Brick Breaks Through Into the Market Hall.

The market building is in need of repairs, as the ceiling has given away in a spot just under the tower.

It appears that during the storms of successive winters, snow accumulated in the tower, which is only enclosed with slat shutters, and melting in the spring has gradually rotted the flooring.

A quantity of loose brick and mortar had been left behind by the workmen when building and the weight of this broke through the other day. The chairman of the Property Committee, Councillor Graham, has directed a carpenter to look after the necessary repairs. The damage is slight, but is in an awkward place to get at.

NEWS NUGGETS.

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—Water street is now being graded just this side of the old Blyth Mills.

If Rudyard Kipling could only see
How the leaves—how the green grass grows,
He'd a better title have speedily found
Than "Our Lady of the Snows."

—About 25 pupils of the Lindsay Collegiate Institute were locked out for being late the other morning. If twenty-five pupils turned up late at the local Collegiate—well!

—Through a typographical error it was made to appear in last evening's issue that the noon train from the west would not arrive in town until 2.12 p. m. The item should have read 12.12 p. m.

—A well-known young druggist and a dental student of vulcanizer explosion fame fell into one another's arms off their wheels on Hunter street, yesterday making quite a mix up. No damage.

—As a resident on Sheridan street was digging in his garden yesterday he upturned a copper coin, which on being cleaned proved to be a one double piece of Guernsey, Channel Islands, of an early date.

—A paragraph that appeared in yesterday's issue on the authority of Mr. Calcutt to the effect that the bodies of persons drowned in Little Lake do not find their way out, was incorrect, or at least there is one notable exception. An unfortunate woman committed suicide by jumping into the water near the site of the C. P. R. bridge and the body was found afterwards, it is said far down the river.

Dr. Perry Goldsmith's Paper.

The physicians of the Quinte district have formed an association. At the organization meeting in Belleville Dr. Perry Goldsmith read a very interesting paper—"The Preventative Treatment for Diphtheria." In it he gave his observations on the use of anti-toxine as a preventative of this disease, as used in the case of children under sixteen years of age. He was for a time house surgeon of the Sick Children's Hospital, in Toronto, and during that time several cases were treated by him. He described the methods of isolation and disinfection used and gave very complete data regarding the temperature and pulse of the patients and observations as to the effect of the anti-toxine. Several present discussed the paper and many interesting and valuable facts were brought out. A resolution of thanks was tendered to Dr. Goldsmith.

DID WELL IN THEIR EXAMS.

Peterborough Boys Reflect Credit on the Town of Their Nativity.

The result of the examinations at the School of Practical Science, Toronto, shows that the Peterborough boys in attendance have done more than well, two of them taking honours in their respective years.

Mr. W. M. VanEvery, son of Mr. Wm. VanEvery, took first year honours in the department of Mechanical and Electrical Engineering.

Mr. A. H. Robinson, son of Mrs. A. Robinson, Smith street, carried off third year honours in the department of Mining Engineering.

Mr. W. P. Roper, son of Mr. J. H. Roper, stood high in the pass list amongst the first year men in the department of Mechanical and Electrical Engineering.

Mr. Charlie Collins, son of Mr. J. D. Collins, successfully pulled off his supplemental in surveying.

The classes are all large and the percentage of those passing small, arguing very stiff papers. The local boys are therefore deserving of all the more credit for having done so well.

CAVAN.

A Serious Case of Lock-jaw.

On Easter Monday, Mamie, eldest daughter of Wm. MacKnight, of Cavan, accidentally punctured her foot with a sliver in the flooring of the verandah. About a week afterwards lock-jaw set in, and now for over ten days the patient has suffered excruciatingly. Doctor Turner is in attendance and is making a heroic fight. The muscles affected are those of the back and lumbar region. The suffering is agonizing, and though the poor girl, who is about 15 years of age, was strong and hale at the time of the attack, she is now very weak and much reduced in flesh.

THE BICYCLISTS DEFAULT.

There Were None of Them Present to Address the Council Last Night.

The town wheelmen, through their non-appearance at the meeting of the council in Committee of the Whole last night, effectually killed any chance which they might have stood of having the "bicycle bylaw" repealed.

Although there were quite a few wheelmen connected with the Citizens Celebration Committee present, yet they had not a word to say in advocacy of allowing bicycles to be ridden on the sidewalks and and not a word was said in favour of the bylaw being repealed.

The mayor, knowing that Councillor Meldrum was a wheelman, called upon him to make some remarks on the matter. Mr. Meldrum stated that there now so many wheelmen in town that the idea of allowing any was impractible. He had heard a suggestion from Councillor McWilliams which, however, would seem to meet the requirements. The scheme was to lay a cinder path between the street railway rails. The line would soon be extended and the wheelmen would be able to get around almost anywhere in wet weather.

Councillor McWilliams said he had thought this would suit everybody. The wheelmen could hold a meeting and decide what they were willing to be taxed per capita and the town might put up two dollars to their one and a cinder path be constructed as far as the money would take it.

Councillor Davis didn't think the wheelmen should be called upon to pay any more taxes than they already paid. The wheel had come to stay and the sooner this was recognised the better. Pedestrians were furnished with sidewalks and owners of horses with roads, therefore, he thought the wheelmen, who paid as much in taxes as the two former classes, should be recognised and their wants be attended to. Very little outlay would be required to fix up such a cinder path as was mentioned.

The question was then dropped, but not before Councillor Denne had inquired whether it would not be possible to impress on the necessity of turning out to the right when they meet a horse. When out driving the other evening he was met by a whole bevy of young ladies on wheels and they had scattered in every direction as he came up and in order to avoid running any of them down he had been forced to drive his horse up on the sidewalk.

Dr. Rose thought it would be a good idea if the council had a thousand or so copies of Mr. Stratton's bill struck off and distributed.

Councillor Dawson suggested that the citizens take the road and allow the wheelmen to have the sidewalk to themselves. This he thought would effectually remedy the difficulty.

Councillor Cobb did not think this sufficiently provided for the safety of wheelmen at night. In order to protect them he thought that all vehicles be compelled to carry lanterns and pedestrians as well. The latter class might carry a small bulls-eye bound to their foreheads.

The committee adjourned on the understanding that a report on the matter of the cinder path would be submitted to the council through the Street and Bridge Committee.

TIP OVER NUMBER TWO.

A Warning to Too-Aventurous Canoeists.

The second upset of the season occurred on the Otonabee yesterday afternoon, when Percy Clark and Harry Cragg went for a paddle up the Otonabee. They took the west side of the river for it, and everything went smoothly until the spar line bridge near Hunter street was reached, but here the rushing waters and eddies were too much for the youthful canoeists, and over went the canoe resulting though in nothing more serious then a good wetting for the occupants. This is the second warning for canoeists not to attempt to go up near the bridge unless they thoroughly understand the management of a canoe in an eddy. This is a very dangerous part of the river, especially at this time of the year, when the high water creates dangerous eddies. It was at about this part of the river that the late George Rogers was upset from a punt, and though one of the best swimmers in the town, he lost his life. If an expert like him came to disaster in such water, there is nothing but a similar fate in view for inexperienced youths in a tipsy craft like a canoe. Before boys venture into these waters in a canoe, they should provide themselves with cork jackets or as connect themselves with their mothers' apron strings. Foolhardiness should not be mistaken for courage.

LACROSSE.

Tweed is anxious to play the Juniors here on the Queen's Birthday, but as the Seniors are making arrangements for a game, the Eastern club will have to wait for a match until June.

The Georgetown club writes that it will be impossible to play here on the 24th of May, as they have already made arrangements for a game in their own town. But doubtless the two clubs will come together before the season is over.

It will please the old lacrosse players to know that the Peterboroughs are in communication with the Metropolitan Lacrosse Club of Ottawa, that town having written asking for a game on the 24th of May. The Mets. came to Peterborough in the old days, and their defeat is a feather in the cap of the veterans yet. If at all possible the team will be brought here, when a rattling game may be expected.

CRICKET.

The Sporting Editor of the EXAMINER is in receipt of an invitation from Lindsay to the local club to go to that town for a game on the Queen's Birthday.

The Peterborough cricketers have not organized this year as yet, but in view of the many clubs which are being organized in the district a meeeting should be called at once for this purpose.

THE WHEEL.

The Czar of Russia is something of a trick rider since he has cultivated the art of markmanship when mounted on his bicycle. The weapon he uses is a small, light rifle, something after the pattern of a rock rifle, but possessing a far greater carrying power. He is able to raise this to his shoulder with one hand while steering and shoot with great proficiency.

"If the lower side of the bicycle chain sags," says the expert, "and the upper part is taut, it shows that the front sprocket and the cranks are pulling the wheel, and the latter therefore must run harder than the former. If the upper part of chain sags and the lower part is taut, the reverse is the case, and shows the trouble to be in the crank bearings, which should be examined for bad cones, cups, balls or a bad adjustment. Frequently it happens that the chain used is not running evenly; that is, it does not run on a level. If the chain is in good working order it should be perfectly level at any point between the two sprockets."

A Boston paper prints signed letters from the directors of three different gymnasiums, one physician and two clergymen in reply to the question, "Does bicycling produce physical ills?" One of the gymnasium directors and one of the clergymen are women. The general drift of all the replies is that the effects of cycling on both sexes are good, provided it is indulged in in moderation and under certain restrictions as to physical condition. All the letters condemn scorching and the strain of long-distance runs. Usually the scorcher rides with the back convexed, the muscles tense and the respiratory and other vital organs cramped. In time such a rider will become flat-chested and round-shouldered, and his muscles will be unequally developed. Persons with organic disease or recovering from an acute malady, especially typhoid fever, are warned not to take up cycling without first consulting a physician. But the temperate use of a wheel by those whose health is good is approved without dissent.

The lady who represents one of the gymnasiums speaks for her sex in relation to cycling. They should enjoy it without bringing on excessive fatigue, avoiding long runs and hill climbing. A well-fitting saddle and freedom of dress are essential. Under proper restraints a wheel is a boon to women increasing their strength and endurance and widening their opportunities for the enjoyment of life. Similar views are expressed by the lady who fills a pulpit. She assures young people that the greatest good and the greatest pleasure spring from a reasonable, moderate indulgence of innocent amusements and recreation. To her eye a rider for a prize is a painful spectacle, unlovely and ungraceful, and an example of the abuse of human flesh. On the other hand, the sensible rider for healthful exercise, with erect posture and easy movement, is a pleasing sight.

As far as the medical opinion in these letters extends, it is not greatly concerned about the bicycle stoop or the bicycle face. Neither is found among riders who use the wheel with unvarying moderation. One physician says that as long as a cyclist can breathe with his mouth shut he is safe, as far as heart strain is concerned. But long-sustained effort and racing involve risk. The London Lancet, recently recorded the sudden death of a man of 46 after riding 53 miles, and it adds that people past 40 should not attempt feats of endurance or speed without careful preparation. It is not easy to understand why they should venture upon them at all. Even a young athlete must train up to his work. If the ardent temperament of the average Canadian can be held down to these suggestions the benefits derived from cycling will be as freely admitted as its pleasures.

A "SCANDAL"-OUS PERFORMANCE

PRESENTED AT THE OPERA HOUSE LAST NIGHT.

Great Success of the Amateur Production of a Society Play—Marion Chadwick's Comedy, "Scandal," Splendidly Put On—An Excellent Musical Programme—A Large and Appreciative Audience.

A decidedly pretty musical and dramatic entertainment was presented in the opera house last night, and the large and fashionable audience in attendance was delighted. The programme, of an amateur character, was a most happily mixed one, consisting of two acts of a charming comedy, sandwiched in between the two parts of a splendid, but brief, musical programme, which was opened with a well-performed pianoforte duet by the Misses Hurley. Mr. F. A. Lount sang in fine style Balfe's evergreen solo "The Heart Bowed Down." Miss Sherwood's sweet singing of the song, "Why Must we say Good-bye?" was so well performed that in response to a most insistent recall she sang in captivally playful style a dainty little bit of musical humour. Mr. Lount in his "Rory Darlin'," scored his best success. He sang this song with a suitable sympathy and invested it with the tender pathos its character requires. He was rewarded with a recall to which he responded. Miss Vair, a cultured vocalist, of whom Peterborough may well be proud, appeared in two numbers. Her first selection was "Titania," by Torry, a song which lent itself charmingly to the capacity of her voice. The music is delightfully melodious, and when to this is added Miss Vair's brilliant yet easy execution and her intuitive completeness of expression, it is no surprise that she charmed her audience and was most enthusiastically recalled. She responded with an exquisite singing of "Robin Adair." Her second number, Cowan's "Swallows," was a sweet bit of minstrelsy, selected with happy appropriateness to the season, and delightfully sung. It is to be regretted that the public have not an oftener opportunity of hearing Miss Vair, whose always tuneful and well-cultured voice and artistic methods, coupled with an unassuming ease of style, never fail to charm. Mrs. Wood supplied Miss Vair's accompaniments and Mrs. E. A. Peck those of the other vocalists. Both displayed an excellent sympathy with their principals.

"SCANDAL."

While the musical section of the programme was heartily appreciated, the piece de resistance of the evening was the chic society play, "Scandal," the clever production of Miss Marion Chadwick, of Toronto, who has succeeded in putting into fine dramatic effectiveness a pleasing little plot, and the manner in which it was presented last night, brought out the best of its many good points, and would doubtless have delighted the clever authoress if she had had the good fortune to be present.

The plot is simple, but natural, and is a peg upon which is hung a deal of charming comedy. Lord Willowsby (Mr. W. D. Parker) and Bertie, Lady Willowsby (Miss Boucher), fair, young and innocent, are in the waning days of the honeymoon, and are beginning to unconsciously chafe under the rosy chains. The honey of matrimonial bliss seems to have cloyed first upon Lord Willowsby's palate and a spirit of longing for a nibble at the forbidden fruit of the unrestrained Bohemianism of bachelor days siezed him. Though he had promised to take his wife to the Derby, in response to a wire from some friends of his celibate days, he decides to make one of a "stag" party to the races, and making an excuse of "business," leaves Lady Willowsby at home and departs upon his "business" that cannot be delayed. Lady Willowsby left at home disconsolate, prettily bewails her loneliness and the detested "business" that has deprived her of a holiday with her husband. She finds the telegram that Lord Willowsby has carelessly left behind, and then there is an explosion that brings an aftermath of petulant tears. At this point a mutual friend, Captain Audley (Mr. A. T. Lefevre), calls to ask Lady Willowsby to compose a love letter for a play he is writing and incidentally learns of the base desertion of the husband, and, like a true knight, comes to the rescue of the lady in distress and proposes to take her to the races, which offer, in the pique of the moment, Lady Willowsby accepts. Capt. Audley retires to call again for the letter which Lady Willowsby writes, on her own initialed notepaper and addresses to the Captain, in a gushing strain wherein the mythical heroine begs her lover to help her break the galling chains of her wifehood. At this point Mrs. Gadabout Gadsby (Miss Archer), a concrete and spiteful embodiment of Mrs. Grundy, accompanied by Louisa, her "d'ah" daughter (Miss Rackham), whose failure to land Lord Willowsby in the meshes of the matrimonial net is gall and wormwood and aloes also to both mother and daughter. Captain Audley calls for his letter and while Lady Willowsby is conferring apart with him the eye of Mrs. Gadsby, assisted by a toasting-fork eye-glass, is upon them and her observations are laid up for future use. Captain Audley in retiring drops the love letter on the floor and Mrs. Gadsby pounces upon it. Presently Lord Willowsby returns home from the races where he has seen his wife and Captain Audley, and this innocent event is converted into a scandal by his receiving the "love letter" to Captain Audley, accompanied by a spiteful explanatory note of the sender. Then, of course, there is trouble—recriminations, tears and reproaches are mingled by husband and and wife, and very pretty opportunities are afforded for the exhibition of those cross-current displays that vary the monotony of married life. Willowsby and his friend quarrel bitterly over the matter too, but the expected explanation is forthcoming—husband and wife are reconciled and friendship is restored. Mrs. Gadsby and her daughter calling at the time are taxed with sending the meddling letter, and are of course covered with confusion. Villiany is defeated, sunshine follows cloud, and the inference is that the reunited wife and husband make a new start, and, as the nursery legends would say "lived happily ever after."

This is a bare outline of the story that was very prettily presented last night. Mr. Parker, as Lord Willowsby, took his character capitally, and though, in the burst of passion over the discovery of his wife's supposed perfidy, he did some unlordly things, yet we must accept the explanation of Dennis (Mr. Frank Rogers) and put the blame of any inconsistency of conduct upon "thim arrestocarsy." Miss Boucher sustained the role of Bertie, Lady Willowsby, with pleasant success acting the part of the innocent young wife in a lady-like and natural manner. Miss Archer as Mrs. Gadabout Gadsby did splendidly well. Her make-up was excellent and she acted the character to the life. Miss Rackham personated the much repressed daughter well. Captain Audley found a very capable exponent of the butterfly aspect of the "millingtery" in Mr. A. T. Lefevre. The names of Dennis, the footman, Mr. Frank Rogers, and Katie, a parlour maid, Miss Edith Barlee, should be bracketed together in giving credit, as they were associated in the play. Both took their parts splendidly. Dennis, with his hair and whiskers like an Indian summer sunset, was the character to the life. He had the steadiness and coolness of a veteran in acting love-making or valet-ing. Mr. Fred Sawers, as Jehosophat Buttons, though he hadn't much to do, did it well, and looked every inch the character he simulated. The costumes and make-up of all were just apropos.

Altogether the play was a very pleasing performance, quite above the average of amateur productions. There were no tedious waits, and no gasping appeals to the prompter. The stage management was really first-class, and Mr. F. A. Lount, who looked after that department, deserves especial credit. The stage settings was exceedingly tasteful and effective.

It is not often that "Scandal" gives so much delight as that disseminated last night. It is suggested that, in view of last night's great success, the play be repeated in, say, Lakefield. Though there were about a dozen Lakefield people down last night, it is very probable that "Scandal" would secure a good house in the village. Those who were here last night could carry back nothing but good reports.

PERSONAL.

The lion-hunter needs steady nerves. If he misses the lion's eye, his life is surely lost. The lion-hunter is not the only man who needs steady nerves. The business man nowadays needs them. He must have them if he would bear the strain of business competition and be successful. A man with shaky nerves stands a mighty poor show in the business world of to-day, where he must hit the bull's-eye of fierce competition many times in a day. Steady nerves are dependent upon pure blood, and to have pure blood one must have a perfect digestion.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery goes to the seat of the trouble. It is not a sedative. It makes the nerves steady by furnishing them with proper nutriment. It corrects all disorders of the digestion. It invigorates the liver. It makes the blood rich and pure in nutriment. The nerves receive their proper nourishment from the blood and soon become strong and steady. Business men recognize the value of the "Golden Medical Discovery" and thousands have testified to its virtues. Druggists sell it.

'Having suffered for several years with indigestion," writes: Samuel Walker, Esq., of Parkesburg, Chester Co., Pa., "I concluded to try your valuable 'Golden Medical Discovery.' After taking five bottles I was entirely cured. I also suffered from bladder trouble, which was also cured by the 'Discovery.' I feel like a new man."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is a book of 1,008 pages and over three hundred illustrations, some of them colored, all fully explained. This book is free. It has been selling for $1.50. Now you may have it in all its usefulness, and in strong paper covers, for 21 one-cent stamps, which pays the cost of customs and mailing only, or in cloth binding for 50 stamps. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

HOLD YOUR TONGUE.

Don't start your tongue a-goin' in a careless sort of way
And thoughtlessly forget it till it runs a half a day.
The pleasant art of talking is a happy gift, indeed.
But, oh! the art of keeping still is what the people need.
Don't think that you can multiply our meagre stock of joys
By jamming every quiet space chock full of talk and noise.
If you've a big two-bushel thought, why, sift it to a cup
Of plain, terse words, but otherwise shut up! shut up!! shut up!!!

The men who have thir words engraved on monuments to-day
Are not the ones who always tried to have the most to say.
Ah no! they thought for years to get one sentence new and bright
For us to put in copy books and have our children write.
And so if you would render glad the ones who have to hear,
Why, find some real good quiet place and think about a year,
And get a thought so deep and broad and true and great and wise
That it will hit this dull old world right square between the eyes.

A child was cured of croup by a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A neighbor's child died of the same dread disease, while the father was getting ready to call the doctor. This shows the necessity of having Ayer's Cherry Pectoral always at hand.

Making Berry Crates and Stands.

My crates and stands are somewhat different from those in general use, says B. A. Wood of Michigan, in American Agriculturist. I have "counted the cost" as to buying berry crates and boxes ready-made or making them myself, and I have concluded that I can make them the cheapest, providing I do the work during the winter season, when time is less valuable than later on. My crates are made from lath for the sides and bottoms, and one-half-inch lumber for the ends. It takes 4 1-2 laths, which, at 10c per bunch of 50, cost in exact figures 9-10c, but allowing for waste, say 1c. For the ends one-inch lumber, ten inches wide, ripped into 1-2-inch stuff, will cost about $16 per thousand. The end pieces are 9 1-2 x 10 inches square, so that a board 16 feet long will make 40 end pieces, with very little waste, which will make them cost about 1c per crate. So that the whole cost for a crate is not far from 2c; and as I cannot estimate my time as being worth much, I do not figure it in.

Some may think I am a little particular when I say that I smooth each strip of lath with a jack plane, but I am better satisfied with the looks of the crates; as it gives them a cleaner appearance, which is everything in selling fruit, as "cleanliness is profitableness" in this business. I have each crate stamped with my name and address, and when I sell my berries the understanding is, the crates are to be returned; of course were I to ship, I would do differently; but, so far, I have had "home consumption" enough to use all I produce.

A BERRY CRATE. B PACKER'S STAND.

My picking stands are as light and strong as possible. I make a frame 8 1-2 inches square, of 5-8x1 1-2-inch strips, with 4 strips of laths for the bottom; for handles, I procure bales from old pails, or else make them them from No. 9 wire; these I fasten rigidly to opposite sides of stands. These will hold four boxes or quarts, and are as handy and light as any I have ever seen. So far I have purchased the material for my boxes and manufactured them myself, using a magnetic tack hammer to handle and drive the tacks. These boxes are not as strong as those made by a stapling machine, but are the "next best thing." As soon as my business warrants it, I shall purchase one of these machines for my own use

THE OLD STORY.

Farmer Banshaff Was Anxious to Get Something for Nothing and He Got Nothing for Something.

Dunnville, Ont., May 4.—An old German retired farmer named Banshaff was victimized to the extent of five hundred dollars by a couple of strangers here this afternoon. It is the old story of buying a big pile of bills that "could be used here all right" for a few hundred dollars of Canadian bank notes. Mr. Banshaff withdrew his money from the bank and went for a drive into the country with one stranger, and was met with the stuff by the partner, when the old man, after seeing the strange money packed in a tin box, made the fatal exchange. The box, for greater security, was taken to the buggy by the stranger and wrapped in a small robe, and was then carried back to town. When opened by the Chief of Police it was found to contain the conventional two pieces of wood and a stone.

ARBITRATION TREATY KILLED.

Tall Twisters in the Senate at Washington Have Knocked Out Conciliatory Proposals.

Washington, D.C., May 5.—The Senate today by the vote of 43 to 26 refused to ratify the general arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain negotiated by Secretary Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefote. The rules of the Senate require a majority of two-thirds for the ratification of treaties. Hence four more affirmative votes would have been required to secure a favorable result.

A total of 69 votes was cast, leaving 18 Senators who did not respond.

Of all its beauty and its bliss.

It cannot be that all the years
Of toil and care and grief we live
Shall find no recompense but tears,
No sweet return that earth can give;
That all that leads us to aspire,
And struggle onward to achieve,
With every unattained desire,
Was given only to deceive.

It cannot be that after all
The mighty conquests of the mind,
Our thoughts shall pass beyond recall
And leave no record here behind,
That all our dreams of love and fame,
And hopes that time has swept away,
All that enthralled this mortal frame,
Shall not return some other day.

It cannot be that all the ties

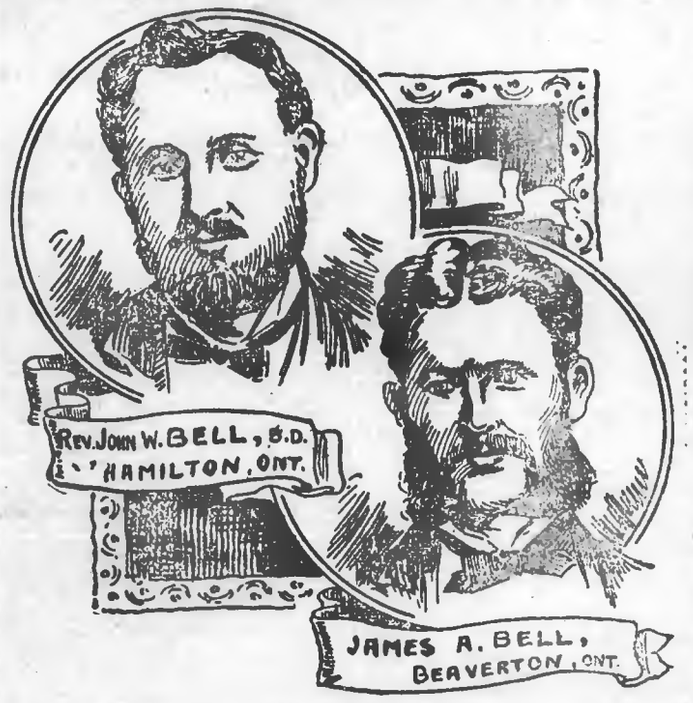
BUILT UP THE SYSTEM IN A WONDERFUL MANNER.



James A. Bell, of Beaverton, Ont., brother of the Rev. John Wesley Bell, B.D., prostrated by nervous headaches A victim of the trouble for several years.

South American Nervine effected a complete cure.

In their own particular field few men are beter known than the Rev. John Wesley Bell, B.D., and his brother Mr. James A. Bell. The former will be recognized by his thousands of friends all over the country as the popular and able missionary superintendent of the Royal Templars of Temperance. Among the 20,000 members of this order in Ontario his counsel is sought on all sorts of occasions. On the public platform he is one of the strong men of the day, battling against the evils of intemperance. Equally well known is Mr. Bell in other provinces of the Dominion, having been for years a member of the Manitoba Methodist Conference and part of this time was stationed in Winnipeg. His brother, Mr. James A. Bell, is a highly respected resident of Beaverton, where his influence, though perhaps more circumscribed than that of his eminent brother, is none the less effective and productive of good. Of recent years, however, the working ability of Mr. James A. Bell has been sadly marred by severe attacks of nervous headache, accompanied by indigestion. Who can do fit work when this trouble takes hold of them and especially when it becomes chronic, as was, seemingly, the case with Mr. Bell? The trouble reached such intensity that last June he was completely prostrated. In this condition a friend recommended South American Nervine. Ready to try anything and everything, though he thought he had covered the list of proprietary medicines, he secured a bottle of this great discovery. A second bottle of the medicine was taken and the work was done. Employing his own language: "Two bottles of South American Nervine immediately relieved my headaches and have built up my system in a wonderful manner." Let us not deprecate the good our clergymen and social reformers are doing in the world, but how ill-fitted they would be for their work were it not the relief that South American Nervine brings to them when physical ills overtake them, and when the system, as a result of hard, earnest and continuous work, breaks down. Nervine treats the system as the wise reformer treats the evils he is battling against. It strikes at the root of the trouble. All disease comes from disorganization of the nerve centers. This is a scientific fact. Nervine at once works on these nerve centers; gives to them health and vigor; and then there courses through the system strong, healthy, life-maintaining blood, and nervous troubles of every variety are things of the past.

CANCER CURED
—AND A—
LIFE SAVED
By the Persistent Use of
Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"I was troubled for years with a sore on my knee, which several physicians, who treated me, called a cancer, assuring me that nothing could be done to save my life. As a last resort, I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after taking a number of bottles, the sore began to disappear and my general health improve. I persisted in this treatment, until the sore was entirely healed. Since then, I use Ayer's Sarsaparilla occasionally as a tonic and blood-purifier, and, indeed, it seems as though I could not keep house without it."—Mrs. S. A. Fields, Bloomfield, Ia.

FROM THE CLOUDS.

There was a little old-fashioned safe in the depot at Dumphy's Glen, but everybody knew that it never contained anything of special value. It served well enough to hold the books and papers of the office and a little loose change; there was practically no business done at Dumphy's. If it had been otherwise the station would never have been left in charge of a mere girl like Lena Stearns.

Fifteen years ago it was quite another story. At that time Dumphy's Glen was in the midst of its boom as a prospective summer resort; and when Lena's father bought the barren little plot of gravel and bare granite upon which he had erected his store, he had paid for it at the rate of $40 a front foot, and had trouble in getting it at that. But he had died long since, broken in fortune and in spirit. The big, dismantled "Sanatorium" on the hill was utterly abandoned. Half the glass in its dark, dirty windows was broken; squirrels scurried over the sagging verandas; the warping shingles blew down from the roof in every storm; the eaves were a hive for wasps and hornets. The streets that had been so hopefully laid out led nowhere. "Park avenue" started well, but soon lost itself among brambles and bushes; its pretentious name hung askew from its rotten post, held by one rusty nail.

The store, however, was still kept up, for there was still a little country trade. Mrs. Stearns lived with her daughter in the upper story, and managed to sell, or barter, across the dingy counter, cotton thread, nails, molasses, and patent medicine enough to pay the interest on the mortgage and live. Lena, who was now 18, had to do something, of course; and as she was unmistakably a bright girl, and had mastered bookkeeping and telegraphy, she easily obtained the unimportant position of station agent at Dumphy's, where she sold half a dozen tickets a week, flagged a train when there was a passenger, and boarded at home.

Lena was not only bright and efficient, but decidedly pretty. This fact had been discovered by John Sturgin, the station agent at Pine Ridge, ten miles above; it was a source of regret to him that he was not the only discoverer. As it was he perversely turned his back on the well stocked stores at the ridge and did a suspicious amount of trading at the Glen. He also did more telegraphing at times than business seemed to require. The wires must have felt a queer thrill as some of those messages pulsed through them—though the words were as trivial and as remote from the sentiments they voiced as in any other rustic courtship.

Though scarcely any money ever found lodgment at Dumphy's Glen, a good deal passed through it. About 20 miles below were the great saw mills at Sabine Falls, and every week a heavy cash box was expressed thither from the city to pay the men. The train which conveyed it, however, scarcely ever stopped at the little flag station; but there was one notable exception.

It was about the middle of March, and heavy rains had stripped the hills of their white winter cloaks. "They're just like folks who lay off their wraps too soon," thought Lena, drawing her fleecy "fascinator" more closely about her neck and shoulders—for the sky had cleared and the air was growing frosty—"They look as if they were catching their death of cold."

She was standing on the platform, watching the belated express as it rounded the curve. To her surprise, it slowed and came to a stop, though she had not flagged it. The door of the baggage car slid open, and the agent jumped out, dragging the cash box after him.

"Shall have to leave this here to-night," he explained. "Bad washout at Tamarack creek, three miles down, and we can't get through to Sabine possibly; orders are to run back at once. Have wired to the mills to send men round by the road, and they'll be here soon. It'll be all right; nobody else will know the stuff's here. Come, we'll put it in the safe for you."

So Lena opened the safe while the agent with the help of a brakeman brought in the box. It was a snug fit, though she pulled out all the books to make room for it. Then the men boarded the train, which slowly backed up the line until it was out of sight.

The girl re-entered the depot, locked the door, threw a fresh supply of coal on the fire, and waited alone for the messenger from the mills. An hour passed, and another, and another; at last the hand of the clock stood at 11, and still they had not come.

John Sturgin was sitting alone in the ticket office at Pine Ridge. Thoughts of Lena were uppermost in his mind—a thing not unprecedented—but to-night his head was full of fancies. He knew about the cash box, for he had spoken with the express agent as the train backed through.

"I'm afraid the little girl was worrie about that money," he mused. "She isn't used to that sort of thing. Put it can't have been in her hands more than half an hour."

The telegraph at his elbow was clicking in an uneasy, irregular fashion, but he had scarcely noticed it. All at once the signal sounded loudly. This was followed by an unintelligible rattle; even his practiced ear could make nothing of it. Then, after a moment's silence, came words—broken and fluttering—but to his quick apprehension they sounded like an articulate cry.

"O—O—O—Help!" Then a confusion of clicks—and again the instrument seemed to cry out: "O—O—Save—L—"

He sprang to the key and tried to telegraph a question; but he could get no response. The wires seemed badly out of order. He was much alarmed. Something was wrong—horribly wrong—at Dumphy's Glen. It would not do to waste time.

He ran out of the depot. "Look after things, Mac," he called to the baggage man.

His bicyce was leaning against the building; he had brought it out that day for the first time since winter set in. With a quick push and a leap he was in the saddle, bounding along the dim, frozen road.

Dim—yet for mere starlight the night seemed wonderfully luminous. But the light was fitful; there were moments when all seemed buried in darkness. Then the landscape brightened and glimmered as if the moon had emerged from behind a cloud. But there was no moon; he knew that the moon would not rise until morning was near.

The railway circled the foot of the hill, but the road ran straight over the summit. By strenuous effort he had already reached the crest, and the hard driven wheel leaped forward with a fresh burst of speed as it felt the downward slope.

Suddenly the air seemed full of rosy light, as if tinged with the glow of dawn. Though he was now running at a breakneck pace, he glanced upward. The sky was aflame with the flickering pennants of the aurora borealis. Near the horizon lay a bank of dusky haze, through which the stars gleamed faintly. Above it wavered a pale phosphorescent curtain, which shivered as if shaken by gusts of wind, from behind which ruddy streamers shot up to the very zenith, and flickered and waned and brightened. It was a magnificent display; but as the descent was becoming steeper every moment, he was obliged to keep his eyes fixed on the road.

He was now running down the rough track with a violence that almost defied control. The overstrained tubing gave under his weight to the very limit of its strength; the machine heaved and palpitated like a frightened horse, and shied wildly amid the ruts and stones that he could not avoid. At a sharp turn of the road he swung out so far that he felt the hind tire slipping on the icy edge and barely escaped plunging down the embankment; then the depot windows flashed into view.

After that the bicycle must have chosen its own course, for Sturgin was not conscious of guiding it. For the sash was raised, and against the yellow lamplight he saw the dark outline of a man crawling in through the opening; another followed.

The last figure had scarcely disappeared when his wheel came to a stop in the deep sand of the station yard. He dropped from the saddle, pulled a 44-calibre revolver from his hip pocket, and sprang to the window.

The depot consisted of a single room; the safe and the telegraphic apparatus were on the further side. In the middle of the floor stood Lena, defiant, with clenched hands and glowing cheeks, looking straight down the black muzzle of a pistol that a huge desperado was holding close to her face.

"You unlock that safe, right quick, and no nonsense," he was saying.

"I won't; I can't," cried Lena.

The other intruder, a seedy little fellow with thin lips and a hatchet face, was by the safe examining the lock. He turned toward the girl.

"Ye might as well save trouble," he said. "We know what's here, an' we're goin' to have it. This is biz, understand. We shan't hurt ye, if ye behave."

The girl glanced at him with angry contempt. Her blood was boiling.

"There ain't goin' to be nobody to help ye," the fellow continued. "The road bridge is down—swep' away by the freshet—and the fellers from the mills won't git here yet awhile. Yer ma's to far off, an' she ain't no good anyway. We've got to have that key, fur we ain't got no tools handy. Be lively now. We kin be rough if we have ter."

With a sudden motion Lena pulled the key from her apron pocket. The big ruffian beside her snatched at it, lowering his pistol as he did so; but with the quickness of a cat she flung the little piece of steel through the open door of the stove, where it slipped down among the glowing coals. The fellow caught up the poker and plunged it into the read-hot mass, but the key had disappeared. With a cry of rage he sprang toward the girl; but while his back was turned she had darted across the room and jerked open a drawer.

"Throw up your hands, you scoundrel."

The command came in a hoarse roar from the open window. The desperado wheeled, saw a fierce, livid face glaring in from the outer gloom, saw also a leveled weapon, and suspected more behind. He dropped his pistol and obeyed.

Laying his left hand on the sill, John Sturgin leaped through the window with one bound. There is no record-breaker like love and anger in things athletic. Meanwhile the lesser villain was struggling with the fastenings of the nearest window; but when he glanced over his shoulder and caught the glint of another revolver in the hands of Lena, as she stood by the open drawer, he desisted.

"Give it up," he said coo'ly. Ye got me, sure, little girl; though how them fellers got acrost so quick beats me. Now don't git narvous with that popper of yourn; I'll rest easy, an' I ain't got no gun anyway."

"Give me your pistol, Lena," said Sturgin, his voice still quaking with excitement. "Now you two brutes, stand here, face to the wall, hands up. Lena, please send a message through to Grandport for a train and a posse."

She sent the message as she was bidden; but the steadiness was gone from her hand and the color from her cheek. She felt faint; she threw open the door and gazed up the track. The night had grown very dark, though a filmy veil of auroral light still flitted now and then across the starry background. At length the rumble of an engine was heard—a welcome sound to Sturgin, whose arms were so palsied with weariness and nervous tension that he could hardly hold the pistols. It was just as well that his prisoners were so placed that they couldn't see him. Soon, however, they were in the hands of the deputy sheriff, and the strain was over.

Sturgin sat holding both Lena's hands in his. "I can't understand it," he said. "How did it happen, dear, that you telegraphed me for help so long before those villains reached the depot?"

"I telegraph!" she cried. "Why, I didn't; I couldn't, I hadn't the smallest chance—until after you came, just in the nick of time, and saved me, John."

"Ach!" exclaimed burly Mac, who was standing by. "It'll be them northern lights done it, likely. Ye know what a fiddle-faddle they'll make 'long th' the wires, an' set all the soun'ers clackn'. An' I'm thinking', Sturgin, somebody's whim-whams done the rest."

"It was a message straight from Heaven," murmured Lena.

And doubtless both she and Mac were right.

THE "UNSPEAKABLE TURK"

HAS THIS ADVANTAGE!

The style of his turban doesn't change every season. Every nationality has its own peculiarity in selection of head wear. But the Canadian can be the most fashionably attired man in the lot, if he selects his headwear with taste and discrimination. We have in stock the latest creations both in regard to Black and Colour. We not only wish to sell you a Hat but we wish to sell you a becoming up-to-date Hat, such as a Youman's, Stetson, Christy or Wilkinson can only make. TORONTO PETERBOROUGH

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

The Second Session Held Yesterday in Toronto.

The eleventh annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to Missions, Diocese of Toronto, was continued yesterday in Toronto, when two very interesting features marked the morning session. The address by the Bishop of New Westminster on the Chinese in British Columbia was immensely instructive and interesting and then shortly before luncheon, the large gathering of ladies that filled St. James's schoolhouse to the doors arose to their feet while Mrs. Sweetman, in a few apt words, presented a provincial life membership to Mrs. Williamson, the very efficient and able president. The presentation was made from the ladies of the auxiliary, over eleven hundred names having been placed on the testimonial. Mrs. Williamson was deeply touched by the kindly feeling thus expressed, and returned her thanks very charmingly, saying although she was supposed to be altogether cognisant of every detail of the work of the auxiliary, this had come as a complete surprise, and "quite took her breath away."

At one o'clock an excellent luncheon was served by the well known caterer Harry Webb, when over three hundred ladies were served. The tables were prettily arranged and decked with flowers, and everything passed off most successfully. At half-past two the afternoon proceedings commenced with the hymn "Lord, Her Watch Thy Church is Keeping," and during the afternoon "Our Auxiliary Duties," "Prayer and Guidance," were subjects of short addresses by the president, the latter subject being very strongly treated, with an earnest appeal for the necessity of prayer, pointing to its efficacy and to the marvellous results of earnest prayer. "System and order in work," was the subject treated by the secretaries. "Reading and Spreading Missionary Information," was taken up by the Literature Committee, with a very able address by the president, Mrs. Davidson. Children's work was discussed, and Mrs. Boddy spoke very clearly and practically of the work carried on by a boys' class, who made pretty boxes, shelves, etc., which were quickly sold, the proceeds going to the missions. Mrs. Boddy also impressed on the ladies the necessity of good example to boys, who are so quick to see weakness in their leader, and who are so ready to work as soldiers, manfully to fight under the banner of the King. The hymn, "The Day Thou Gavest Lord is Ended," closed the afternoon's proceedings, Miss Atkinson presiding at the organ. In the evening St. James' Cathedral held a grand gathering, when addresses were delivered by Bishop Sullivan, the Lord Bishop of Huron, and the Bishop of New Westminster.

Amongst the additional delegates reporting were Miss Gray, of Havelock, and Miss Adams, Onemee.

ONE HONEST MAN.

DEAR EDITOR,—Please inform your readers that if written to confidentially, I will mail, in a sealed letter, particulars of a genuine, honest home cure, by which I was permanently restored to health and manly vigour, after years of suffering from nervous debility, sexual weakness, night losses and weak shrunken parts. I was robbed and swindled by the quacks until I nearly lost faith in mankind, but thank heaven, I am now well, vigorous and strong, and wish to make this certain means of cure known to all sufferers. I have nothing to sell and want no money, but being a firm believer in the universal brotherhood of man, I am desirous of helping the unfortunate to regain their health and happiness. I promise you perfect secrecy.

A Voice from Virden.

GENTLEMEN,—I have used Hagyard's Yellow Oil for the past ten years, and find it a splendid remedy for colds, neuralgia, bronchitis, croup, pains in the back, ulcerated and sore throat, sprains, chilblains, etc., in fact we use it for almost every pain, and it always relieves quickly. I can safely say I know of no other remedy of the sort that can equal it. We always keep a good stock in the house.

YOUNG'S POINT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

We regret to chronicle the death of Mr. Thomas White, aged 17 years, who died at his home, Friday, April 30th, after a two weeks illness. The funeral took place Sunday last, and was largely attended,—to Ray's cemetery, Lakefield, for interment. The deceased leaves a mother and two stepbrothers and one stepsister to mourn his loss: Mr. Richard White of this village, Mr. George White, of Verulam, and Mrs. Dean, of Warsaw. The many friends of the family sympathize with them in their sad bereavement.

James Kendry, Esq., M.P., has informed some of the residents of this place that we are to have a daily mail service between Young's Point and Lakefield. This has been a long felt want which has caused the people here many great inconveniences. If the report is correct we have to thank our esteemed merchant, P. A. Kearney, for his untiring zeal and energy in getting so many signatures to the petition asking for a daily mail service. We therefore thank Mr. Kearney, as it is due to his efforts that we will be able to have the long needed mail service which will be a blessing to the village and vicinity. It is by his push and energy that we have gained our point, instead of being left as in the old time way with a tri-weekly mail.

Mr. Kearney, of Kearney Bros., wholesale grocers, Montreal, paid our village a visit last week.

SELWYN.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

For some time past the services of the Methodist church here have been disturbed by a number of young men. It went so far that patience ceased to be a virtue, and a number of them were summoned to appear before Magistrate Hull at Lakefield. Charges were laid against Henry Bell and Stewart Trenum for disturbances on March 23rd. They were each fined $1 and $2.95 costs. Herbert McConkey, John Morrison and Wm. Hatton were accused of making a disturbance on April 20th, and both were fined $1 and $2 80 costs. They were let off with a very low fine, but this should be a warning that religious services are not to be disturbed with impunity.

WARSAW.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Lots of mud.

Mr. Harry Clemens, who has been on the sick list for some time past, is recovering.

Mrs. J. H. Thompson, who has been spending a few days under the parental roof, left for her home in Port Elgin on Monday.

W. J. Doughty has just received a new lot of machinery, which he is rapidly distributing among the farmers.

Wm. Darling is on the sick list at present.

Mr. R. Tedford, who has been very sick for some time past, is on the mend.

Mr. Chas. Purcells, of Warsaw, has left for parts unknown.

Mr. Allan returned home from Colborne on Monday evening.

A colt belonging to Richard Kidd made a dash for liberty on Tuesday evening. No damage.

Is Your Pump in Working Order?

When a pump does not work steadily, smoothly, and without undue effort on the part of the operator, it is either poorly constructed or in urgent need of repair. We make a specialty of repairing and can usually tell you what the cost will be before the job is started, so you can decide whether it is most profitable to get the work done or invest in a new one. A unique feature of the kind we build is that the stroke can be adjusted so as to make the labour commensurate with the strength of the person using it. Pumps, however, are not the only things we make; for instance, another of our lines is washing machines. Our latest, the "Challenge," is, by all odds, the best on the market. They're cheap, too. A post card will bring you full particulars.—G. WALTER GREEN, P. O. box 361; Telephone, 92.

FORGERIES DETECTED.

The Work of a Clever Scoundrel Trying to Liberate His Friend From Prison.

About the coolest piece of cheek on record is instanced in connection with the following incident, which occurred a few days ago in Kingston: About three years ago two men, Wilson and Woods, were arrested for breaking into W. Dunlop's clothing house. Woods was dismissed by the magistrate when the case was up for trial and Wilson was sentenced to fourteen years imprisonment. Last December friends of the convicted man circulated a petition among citizens for signature. This was signed by the merchant whose place of business was broken into. The petition was forwarded to the Minister of Justice, accompanied by a letter purporting to be written by the merchant whose goods and chattels were removed from his place of business by the two men arrested for the theft. The petition bore the names of Col. Duff, police magistrate, and C. V. Price, county judge. The minister of justice recently forwarded the petition to Col. Duff for his opinion in the matter and for further particulars concerning the crime, Wilson's character, etc. The receipt of the petition was the first intimation the police magistrate had of its existence; his signature to it was a forgery. Judge Price was asked concerning his signature which the petition bore, and he condemned it as a forgery. The merchant was called in with reference to the petition and to his part in writing the letter which accompanied the petition to the minister of justice. He denied having written such a letter, and branded it as a forgery.

Just who the guilty person is is not fully known, though a certain young man is suspected. The police have the affair in hand and are hunting up evidence.

EVENING THOUGHTS.

This world is beautiful and fair,
But it must pass away;
And every earthly thing we love
Must perish and decay.
The seasons as they come and go
Proclaim that time is brief.
From the first flower that blooms in spring
To Autumn's changing leaf.

Our friends are falling, one by one,
And in the grave are laid;
This earth has mounds of every size
Where rest our cherished dead.
The aged with their faltering step,
And hair like drifted snow;
Their sands of life are nearly run,
They have not far to go.

They soon must pass thro' death's dark vale,
And slumber in the grave;
That lowly place, made hallowed once
By Him who died to save.
Soon all must cross o'er Jordan's wave,
Where death's dark billows roll—
May Jesus whisper, "Peace be still,"
And cheer each fainting soul.

The young, the bright, the promising,
That cheer life's weary hours,
They too are wanted over there,
Where bloom immortal flowers.
Oh, who hath not a lowly mound
'Neath which a fond one sleeps,
To where the mourner often comes
Awile to muse and weep?

But, if they sleep in Jesus, who
Beneath the green sod lie,
'Tis but the casket that is there—
The gem is safe on high.
Of such as they we well may say,
Our loss has been their gain,
They are at rest and ever free
From sorrow sin and pain.

For sometimes as we journey here
Darkness and cloud's prevail,
And oft for good requited with
The worst that can assail.
Words fail to tell the anguish
When friends do prove untrue,
This world its brightness seems to lose
And is changed to darkest hue.

But though life's sky seems overcast
And the morn dawn dark and drear,
Each cloud a silver lining hath
And the evening shall be clear.
Yes, life is short and time doth fly,
Here we as pilgrims roam,
We've no continuing city here—
Heaven is the Christian's home.

Where the river clear as crystal glides,
And the tree of life doth grow,
Where souls redeemed from sin and death
Before God's presence bow.
Could we but hear the rapturous strains,
Of that bright heavenly throng,
Who never ceasing sing the song
Of Moses and the Lamb.

But tongue is powerless to proclaim
The glory of that land;
It is too bright for mortal view
Or mind to understand.
But when life's work is ended,
When all wrong be redressed,
In those bright realms of glory,
The weary shall find rest.

CHEESE MARKETS.

BELLEVILLE.

May 4.—The Belleville cheese board met today and elected the following officers:—President, John Holgate; 1st Vice-President, J. Balderick; 2nd Vice-President, S. Wray; Treasurer, R. J. Graham; Secretary, D. J. Fairfield; Auditors, Messrs. F. Brenton and W. J. Magrath. Resolutions were passed, thanking the retiring President, Mr. Henry Bleeker, for his services. Ten factories boarded 359 boxes of white and 18 boxes of coloured cheese. The bidding was not very brisk and Hodgson Bros. were the only buyers. They purchased 65 boxes of white cheese at 9⅞c.

STYLISH SPRING HATS

Listen to us for a minute. A Hat ought to fit a man and his head—the price ought to fit the quality and the Hat. The name inside the Hat isn't worth much. Sometimes a man is willing to pay a good deal for a name, but that is the thing most men object to. At our store price represents actual Hat value, no charge for name, although our name in your Hat is worth something in this way, it shows that you pay cash for your Hats. We have the correct shapes and colours, and we tell you just what each Hat is, American, British or Canadian, Fur Felt or made of Wool, you take it for what it is.

Our Prices for Stylish Hats begin at 50 Cents Each.
Our Good Fur Felt Hats at $1.50 each, and special values at $2.00 and $2.25 Each.
Our $2.00 guaranteed Hats are the best value in Canada.

TURKS ARE ON TOP.

Slaughtered the Greeks Fearfully at Pharsalos.

THINGS WERE BADLY MANAGED

Greeks Left Their Stronghold in the Hills, and it Was While in Retreat Across the Plain That They Were Slaughtered by Turkish Artillery.

Headquarters of the Turkish Army in Thessaly, Pharsalos, May 6.—The Turkish army to-night is bivouacking in the 80 villages surrounding Pharsalos, captured from the Greeks. The battle began at 9 o'clock in the morning. After skirmishes between the advance posts of the opposing forces, the Greek artillery opened fire with great precision, but the Turks pushed forward, exposing themselves to the enemy's fire with the greatest sang froid. The Greeks then made a fatal error in leaving the commanding position which they occupied and retiring upon the plain, which was commanded on all points by our batteries, which were brought into action as soon as the Greeks left the hills. The scene which followed was both interesting and cruel. The Greeks, from all parts of the plain, were converging towards a stone bridge crossing the river, which was the only means of getting over. The mass of humanity at this point was constantly growing, when the roar of the Turkish artillery began. The Turks obtained the exact range of the enemy, and shell after shell fell and exploded in the midst of the fugitives. The havoc created by the shrapnel shots was terrible. Gradually however, through this decimating fire, a greater part of the Greeks traversed the river.

The Turks, who were then covering the plain like bees, met with a strong resistance while attacking Vasili, where the Greeks, from hidden positions, opened a furious fire, but the Turks advanced with marvelous temerity and captured the village, not by gunshots, but by purely the moral effect of the fear which their splendid insouciance in the advance inspired in the enemy.

Owing to the fact that it was not intended to commence the decisive engagement until to-morrow, the Turkish division intended to take the enemy in the flank only arrived half an hour before the close of the combat to-day, having marched 30 miles.

The artillery played a leading part in the fighting, although the Greek guns, while they opened well, ended badly, while ours were served even better than usual.

The Turkish attack upon Vasili was made without any previous plan. The men were ordered to capture the place, and they advanced quietly, shooting as though hunting. The Greeks maintained a withering fire.

I saw a Turk wounded in the leg advancing to the attack on all fours.

During the day the Turks captured a mountain battery and 18 mules, a great quantity of ammunition and provisions, and the personal effects of the Greek Princes, Crown Prince Constantine and his brother, Prince Nicholas.

BRITAIN'S POSITION.

Mr. Curzon Warmly Defends the Government Policy in the Eastern Question.

London, May 7.—In the House of Commons to-day, after several Liberal members had criticised the action of the Government in the Eastern crisis, the Parliamentary Secretary for the Foreign Office, Mr. George N. Curzon, warmly defended Great Britain for her part in the concert and blamed the provocation of the Greeks, saying that the attitude of the Christians in Crete was due to the presence of the Greek force. Mr. Curzon further said that the withdrawal of the Turkish troops in Crete would be the prelude to a massacre of the Mussulmans, compared with which the Armenian massacres would sink into insignificance.

Continuing, Mr. Curzon remarked that the day the Greeks withdrew would be the dawn of brighter prospects for Crete.

Regarding affairs on the mainland of Greece, Mr. Curzon said that there were few persons who did not know on which side the provocation rested; but, he added, the chastisement had been so terrible that he would not say more on the subject. The Turks, he suspected, had exercised considerable self-restraint before they accepted the challenge, and the powers had carried their conciliatory attitude towards the Greeks almost to the point of weakness. They now express their willingness to mediate with Turkey if Greece would express her willingness to accept mediation.

The motion to reduce the salary of the Marquis of Salisbury by £500 sterling, introduced in order to bring about a debate on the Eastern question, was then rejected by a vote of 169 to 63.

FLOUR FOR ALL THE WORLD.

Manitoba is Sending the Staff of Life to All Quarters of the Earth—Mgr. Del Val and the Voters.

Montreal, May 7.—(Special.)—"Manitoba is on the main line, and will never be side-tracked as a flour-producing Province." This is what a gentleman said to The World to-day, and then he took out his pencil and began to figure the shipments of one day last week of the Lake of the Woods and Ogilvie Milling Companies. "In one day," he says, "flour was shipped from Manitoba to India, Australia, Japan, Iceland, South Africa, China, Fiji Islands, Newfoundland, Great Britain and Eastern Canada."

Le Soleil, having published a despatch from Hon. C. A. P. Pelletier and Mr. Jules Tessier, Liberal candidate in Portneuf, stating that Mgr. Mery Del Val authorised him to say that His Excellency did not forbid the faithful from voting for one candidate more than another, the Papal delegate has sent out the following by his secretary :

"Ottawa, May 7, 1897.

"His Excellency, the apostolic delegate, instructs me to inform you, praying at the same time that you may publish this despatch, that he read the despatch in The Soleil of Thursday, and that he accepts in no way the responsibility of the declarations made in his name. When His Excellency has something to say on any question whatever he will express them himself. All His Excellency desires to say at present is that in an election where questions of purely administrative character are involved, each one is free to vote for the candidate he may prefer.

"S. Tempieri, secretary."

SHARP CROSS-FIRING.

Messrs. Foster and Tarte Had a Bit of a Set-To

AND MR. LISTER JOINED THE FRAY

It Was All Over the Dismissal of an Official—The Case of Mr. Balderson Also Came Up—Very Little Progress Made on the Estimates.

Ottawa, May 7.—(Special.)—The features of to-day in the House were a tilt between Messrs. Foster, Lister and Tarte over the dismissal of officials. Sir Charles Tupper, Mr. Blair and others also took part in the discussions. Mr. Bain moved the adoption of the second report of the Agriculture Committee, which calls for the printing of 40,000 copies of Prof. Robertson's evidence on cold storage. The House concurred and the information will be published without delay.

The Premier's motion to take Wednesdays and Thursdays for Government business was adopted, with the modification that public bills be taken up Wednesdays after 6 o'clock.

On motion to go into Committee of Supply, Mr. Foster asked for information concerning the dismissal of A. McCallum, lockmaster and foreman of works on the Lievre River.

Mr. Tarte said that McCallum's dismissal was because of a letter from Mr. H. Bourassa, M.P. This letter was to the effect that McCallum, instead of consulting one Angus McMillan as to whom he should employ on the works continued to employ Conservatives. Mr. Bourassa further asked the dismissal of McCallum's assistant, Simon Raymond. There was a charge of active partisanship in the last election against McCallum. His principle was to dismiss unfaithful employes without mercy.

Mr. Foster then proceeded to give the House the other side of the case. He read a letter dated Oct. 24, from Chief Engineer Coste of the department, written to E. D. Lafleur, resident engineer on the works, authorizing him to employ McCallum as foreman on his repairs, and that the latter should employ Duncan McMillan on the work, from whom he was to take instructions as to the men to be employed and from whom material was to be purchased. A letter dated Dec. 30 from Engineer Lafleur instructed McCallum not to make any changes in his staff, and to continue Raymond on the work. On Jan. 20, Mr. McCallum received a letter from the engineer in charge ordering him to apply to Angus McMillan, instead of Duncan, as to men and material. McCallum evidently obeyed, for on March 17 he wrote the department in reply that Angus McMillan refused to have anything to do with the work unless paid for his services. Then on March 20, McCallum got an urgent telegram from the department as follows:

"Push without delay repairs to slide; engage men and purchase materials required yourself."

This was signed by the engineer in charge.

Mr. Tarte admitted that Mr. Foster had correctly stated the facts, but it was by a mistake McCallum had been ordered to consult Duncan McMillan, a Conservative, instead of Angus McMillan, a Liberal, as to whom to employ and from whom to purchase material. He thought McCallum ought to have known something was wrong, but he went on hiring Tories and for that had been dismissed. He continued: "I am very sorry to have had to dismiss him, because I think in the past he was a good employe, but we might find good employes in the ranks of the Liberal party. If the Conservative employes who are with us to-day want to serve us faithfully I will not dismiss one of them, but if they do not I would ask my hon. friend if it would not be my duty to dismiss every one of those who will not be faithful?"

Mr. Foster: When the hon. gentleman says "us" does he mean the country's service or his personal service for the time being?

Mr. Tarte: For the time being we are here and have had imposed on us the duty of governing the country. The country has changed its masters.

Mr. Foster: I did not know that the country had a master.

Mr. Tarte: That is a pretty small distinction. It is too fine for me altogether.

Mr. Foster observed that this whole case showed the manner in which the Government was acting with public employes.

To this Mr. Tarte replied that the hon. gentleman had in his own hands to-day a correspondence which had been given him by "some of my employes."

Mr. Lister: Stolen.

Mr. Foster: I rise to a point of order. I will have no man in the House shake his finger in my face and say I have stolen correspondence.

Mr. Tarte: I did not say that.

Mr. Foster: No, but the hon. gentleman who sits behind you (Mr. Lister) did.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lambton must at once withdraw that expression.

Mr. Lister: I did not say that the hon. gentleman had stolen the correspondence. What I did say was that the correspondence had been stolen.

Mr. Foster: It was just as bad for me to have stolen correspondence in my hands and used it as if I had stolen it myself. Will the hon. gentleman make good his statement that it was stolen? Every letter and every line that I read went to Mr. McCallum from the department, and Mr. McCallum had a perfect right to use them in his own defence.

Mr. Lister: The hon. gentleman says that if those letters were stolen he is as guilty as the thief—that is the plain English of it. I reply that in law he does not occupy that position unless he has them, knowing them to be stolen—unless he received them knowing them to be stolen, and I make no such ruling.

Mr. Speaker observed that technically Mr. Lister was right when he said that letters might be stolen without any imputation being cast on the hon. gentleman who used them.

Mr. Foster: But he did not say that.

Mr. Speaker: He says so now and I am very glad to hear him say so, because the remark as thrown across the House was susceptible of a very different imputation, and I am glad he withdrew it.

Mr. Tarte, in defence of the presumption of theft, said the letter of the Chief Engineer to his assistant would not have found its way into Mr. McCallum's hands in the ordinary course. He con-

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE Government's increased tax on whiskey indicates that they are opposed to our infant industries being brought up on the bottle.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Licensed Victuallers Association from all parts of Canada will meet in Ottawa on May 12th, to talk over a plan of campaign on the coming plebiscite.

THE Prince of Wales opened the old Victoria bridge at Montreal in 1860 with great eclat, and very opportunely the new bridge will be built in his illustrious mother's diamond jubilee year.

THE Ontario Government has declined to take over the Industrial School at Mimico. They consider the institution to be a local one, and think they are doing sufficient in making an annual grant towards its support.

A MORMON temple has been set up in Toronto the Good, and a Mormon marriage was celebrated there the other day. Let Toronto add Sunday cars to Mormonism, and the city will be well on its way to Salt Lake City, or, rather, Salt Creek.

HON. G. W. ROSS, Ontario Minister of Education, in an address to the students and staff of the Normal and Model Schools at Ottawa, said that the Normal school term would in a short time be extended to at least ten months, so that the teachers might receive a proper and much-desired training.

EVEN the Dingley, U.S., tariff bill as reported, is subjected to sharp criticism. If a bill concocted in the native nest of protectionism, is not perfect how can Canadian high tariff advocates expect a Government elected on an anti-protection platform to make a taxing machine that will work without friction?

THAT arbitration treaty, says the Montreal Star, should have been submitted to a vote of army veterans. Men who know war, love peace. The Star is right. Your genuine jingo, as a rule, doesn't know gunpowder from gum drops, and in case of the war he clamours for, he will view hostilities from the safe vantage ground of a cellar.

THE Winnipeg Henley crew will sail for England on June 5th. Canadians generally will wish them success, and will be glad to welcome them back as victors. We should like to see the nose of the English crew's shell to the front against any other competitors, but in our sympathy with our British cousins we must draw the line at Canadians.

THE Tory tariff grumblers are accusing the Government of favouring Mr. Hobbs, M.P.P., London, who bought the penitentiary output of binder twine, by delaying the date upon which binder twine is to become free. But it is curious that this considerate Government has hit Mr. Mr. Hobbs' wire nail factory very hard. Why, if they were in the favouring business, did they forget this part of the affair?

PRESIDENT MILLS, of the Agricultural College, Guelph, speaking in Toronto, urged teachers to instruct the young morally as well as intellectually, and in that grace and politeness, which is lamentably missing in school children. Very little in the education of the present generation is worse needed. Fin de siecle children are sadly lacking in reverence and respect to their superiors. Reverence is at the bottom of religion.

A COOL proceeding is evidently that of the Canadian Government to plant a British flag on those portion of the Arctic regions, to assert sovereign rights, where no rights are now respected. Instructions have been given to those in command of the sealer Diana, which is shortly to be sent out to test the navagability of the entrance to Hudson Bay, to proceed to Cumberland Sound, where some Americans and persons of various nationalities have planted themselves, and there to proclaim in the most formal way the Canadian ownership of the territory. All the residents are to be called upon to respect our laws and to conduct themselves generally as loyal subjects of the Crown. It is not pretended that Baffin Land is particularly valuable or that the population is at all numerous, but the Government is taking a precaution to prevent complications in the future, which might be the outcome of a foreign population establishing itself on Canadian territory without notice of its obligations to our flag and institutions.

ONE of the most public-spirited acts, says the Montreal Witness, it has been our pleasure to note in connection with the Queen's jubilee rejoicing is the decision of the St. Jean Baptiste Society to merge their annual celebration into that of the jubilee, with the determination to devote that energy and taste for pageantry which have rendered their past celebrations so interesting, to the glorification of the national occasion. There are many, who cannot bring themselves to take an interest in a mere show, in whose eyes this circumstance will invest the celebration of the royal jubilee with the greatest interest. A generation has arisen in Canada—and the remark seems to apply to Canadians of every race—in whose hearts that which is nationally Canadian holds a higher place than that which is sectional, and all such will, as the result of this broadly patriotic act of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, look upon this culminating day of our Queen's reign as in some sense the inauguration day of Canadian nationality.

THOUGH the youngest of the Canadian provinces, Manitoba, says the Mail and Empire, is one of the best known to the people of the United Kingdom. Its wheat has made it famous, and has, in fact, become one of Canada's great leading lines for attracting immigrants. Many Englishmen, Scotchmen, and Irishmen, to whom the rest of Canada is, comparatively speaking, a blank, have had their thoughts turned more or less to the great yield and fine product of our prairie wheat fields. In this way the Northwest has become identified with all Canada, and its developed resources will undoubtedly play a tremendous part in the prosperity of all Canada. The seeding operations now going on there are consequently of great moment to the country as a whole. It is a cause of general gratification that the acreage under cultivation is to be much larger, that a great deal more of the land was ploughed in the fall, that the sowing season is a fortnight earlier, that the prospects are in favour of a good harvest. We hope the farmers of the Northwest will have an average crop of 40 bushels of No. 1 wheat to the acre, and the EXAMINER adds the hope that it will sell at $1 per bushel.

His Cheque Good

For Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars.

He Finds in Paine's Celery Compound a New Life.

In one of our large Canadian cities there resides one of Canada's merchant princes who can at any moment write his cheque for hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Some time ago this merchant prince was a very sick man. Liver troubles, headache and insomnia were fast pulling down a strong physical frame. Doctors bestowed great care and attention on their wealthy patient, but no cure came to cheer him; in fact no perceptible benefit was felt after months of treatment.

A voyage to the south of Europe was then undertaken, and weeks were spent at one of the most famous watering places, but no change for the better was experienced. Returning home, the merchant prince received a visit from his faithful pastor, who strongly urged the use of Paine's Celery Compound, a medicine that had for some years before cured a member of his family. The good advice of the ministerial friend was promptly taken; the great healing compound was used, with the result that in five weeks the sick man and his family were overjoyed with proofs of recovery and new health. Restful sleep was restored, digestion was improved, and a brighter look came into the eyes and face. After four months' careful use of Paine's Celery Compound and proper dieting, every deadly and treacherous symptom of disease had vanished, and the merchant prince was a new man.

What a wondrous and happy proof of the life-saving virtues of Paine's Celery Compound! Surely the statement is powerful enough to lift all poor and helpless sufferers from the dark pit of despair.

This story of a true cure was related by an intimate friend of the cured man, who gave permission to refer to it publicly without giving the name of the once-dying merchant.

BOY KILLED BY A TROLLEY.

A Toronto Lad Met Death in a Horrible Form Last Evening.

Toronto, May 8.

Harold Fetherstonhaugh, the 5-year-old son of Frederick B. Fetherstonhaugh, the patent solicitor, was killed by a belt line trolley car at Spadina-avenue and Harbord-street last night, at half-past 6. The hind wheels of the car passed over the little fellow's head and left arm, mangling them terribly.

No one seems to have witnessed the accident, excepting a lady who was looking through the window of 653½ Spadina-avenue, and she was so much upset by the horrible sight that she was unable to see The World man, but her account of it is that the little boy was playing on the street, and got behind one of the trolley poles on the devil-strip. As the car passed he put out his hand to touch the side of it, and then fell forward under the hind wheels.

MASON & RISCH PIANOS

Are the Instruments of the Cultured

For over twenty years they have been without an equal in the favour of those best qualified to judge of the musical merit of an instrument. There are other points beyond musical excellence, however, which have combined to give the Mason & Risch Pianos their peculiar pre-eminence.

They are Durable Beyond All Comparison.

That is what secured for them the preference in all colleges and schools. Mount Allison Ladies' College has just purchased its 25th Mason & Risch Piano. This is but one instance among many.

They are Moderate in Price.

While but few people of taste or judgment would care to purchase any of the very low priced Pianos now on the market, still fewer can afford the very high figures (plus duties) which are asked for the highest grade American Pianos. Mason & Risch supply a first-class Piano at a moderate price.

Their Terms Are Easy.

One of the great advantages which capital enables our company to afford its customers is easy terms of payment. Write us on this point. Also please write us for our new Illustrated Catalogue. Mailed free.

Heart Failure

Of course the heart fails to act when a man dies, but "Heart Failure," so called, nine times out of ten is caused by Uric Acid in the blood which the Kidneys fail to remove, and which corrodes the heart until it becomes unable to perform its functions.

Health Officers in many cities very properly refuse to accept "Heart Failure," as a cause of death. It is frequently a sign of ignorance in the physician, or may be given to cover up the real cause.

will remove the poisonous Uric Acid by putting the Kidneys in a healthy condition so that they will naturally eliminate it.

SPEED OF DUCKS.

The Exact Rate at Which a Flock Was Flying Determined.

The speed of a duck while flying has been the subject of considerable controversy and speculation. A number of statements giving the speed of flying ducks have been made, ranging from sixty up to as high as ninety miles an hour. Just how these rates of speed were determined has been a mystery. The cold fact was announced that a wild duck could fly so many miles an hour, unaccompanied by any explanation as to the measures taken to ascertain the truth of the statement. Anyone having any experience with wild ducks knows that they sometimes fly faster than at others. A duck that has had two or three double barrel shotguns discharged at it covers more space in a given time than one that is leisurely proceeding to its feeding ground, but when it is said a duck flies so many miles an hour it presumably means its ordinary traveling gait, says The Washington Post.

The exact rate of travel of one flock of ducks has been definitely and exactly determined. Upon the Neponset River, a few days ago, two men from the Blue Hill Observatory were measuring clouds by triangulation when a flock of ducks crossed the base line, which was about 8496 feet long. Both observers got a set of measurements on the apex of the flock and several subsequent observations, and from these the height and speed of the flock were ascertained. The height of the birds above the line was 958 feet and their velocity was 47.8 miles an hour.

It was not stated what kind of ducks they were, but they were wild ducks, and their rate of speed was accurately determined. They were not specially in a hurry, but were on a business trip, neither wasting time or making a record. The wind was blowing two miles an hour from the north, while the ducks were going southwest, so that the test was fair.

NON-SECTARIAN.

Divines all Meet on a Common Level and are of One Accord in Proclaiming the Healing Power of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder—It Relieves in Thirty Minutes.

"When I know anything is worthy of a recommendation I consider it my duty to tell it," Rev. Jas. Murdock, of Harrisburg Pa., says this of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, after having been cured of a very malignant form. He is not the only great divine on this continent who could, and who has preached little sermonettes on the wonderful cures effected by this famed remedy. What names are more familiar to Canadians than the Right Rev. A. Sweatman, Bishop of Toronto, and Dr. Langtry, of the Church of England; the Rev. Mungo Fraser, of Knox Presbyterian church, Hamilton; or the noted Methodist preacher-traveller, Dr. W. H. Withrow, of Toronto. All these men have proven what is claimed for Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, and have given their written testimony to it. Sold by H. S. Macdonald.

100 per cent Better.

Milburn's Heart and nerve Pills are curing heart and nerve troubles in every city, town and village in Canada. Mrs. F. Abbey, Toronto, says, "Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cured my husband who had for fifteen years suffered with weak nerves caused by heart trouble. He was subject to pains in his head, dizziness, fainting spells, sleeplessness, etc. He is now free from these troubles, and feels 100 per cent better than when he began using the pills."

tinued: "I have already dismissed some of my officers who I knew were dishonest men, and I am very much afraid I shall be obliged to do something of the kind again. [Liberal cheers.] We are not going to be duped. [More cheers.] Let the faithful employes know that they have nothing to fear from us, but let the traitors understand that they are going to be treated as they deserve. [Renewed Liberal cheers.] The Government is not going to be betrayed. When I was a newspaper man in this place," continued Mr. Tarte excitedly, "I happened to know a great many things that went out from the employes of the Government of the day. We are not going to submit to the same treatment; we are not going to be betrayed without finding out the guilty parties."

Mr. Foster observed that Mr. Tarte in all his general skirmish had missed the real point, namely, that after McCallum had been instructed by the department to carry out the work himself, he had been punished by dismissal for obeying orders.

Mr. Tarte replied that what Mr. McCallum had done was to ask Mr. McMillan to stay on the works all the time. "In other words he made it impossible for Mr. McMillan to be useful to us," said Mr. Tarte, adding that McCallum would probably learn that he who laughs last laughs best.

Mr. Davin wanted to know what the Government was doing that it was so afraid of being betrayed.

Mr. McNeill asked if any opportunity had been afforded Mr. McCallum of presenting his defence.

Mr. Tarte replied that he had not thought it necessary to put the country to the expense of an investigation.

This ended the incident.

The House then went into Committee of Supply on the estimates.

On the vote for the Inland Revenue Department, Mr. Foster expostulated with the Controller about increasing the status and salary of a temporary clerk with $600 a year at one bound to the position of a second-class clerk with a salary of $1100, while other clerks were denied even the $50 increase, no matter how deserving they might be.

Sir Henri Joly said it was because of Mr. Hughes' meritorious services; but if the Opposition were going to make a fuss about it he would move that the item be struck out. And, notwithstanding Mr. Foster's protest that he simply desired to draw attention to the anomaly, out the item went.

Mr. Cameron and Mr. McMullen complained of the Inland Revenue Department being the most expensive in the service. Mr. McMullen declared there were altogether too many employes.

Mr. Bennett remarked that Mr. McMullen, when asked to support a candidature for an inland revenue position at Orillia, wrote that he was unable to do so, as he had promised the job to a man from his own riding. [Laughter.]

Sir Henri laughingly replied that he had himself been confused by the multiplicity of gubernatorial positions to which the newspapers assigned him. One day he was going to Quebec, another to Ontario, and the next day to the Northwest. When the rest of the Ministers appeared in their uniforms one day recently he was asked where was his. His reply was: "I don't know what uniform I am to wear yet. I don't know whether I shall go to Quebec or Ontario or the Northwest, or to China, or whether I shall end as an inspector of cheese factories, or perhaps of ginger beer bottles." [Laughter.]

On the vote for the Railway Department, Mr. Haggart protested against the superannuation of Mr. Balderson, the secretary, a most efficient young officer, to whom, further, the Government had given a superannuation of but $630, instead of $1200, to which he was entitled.

Mr. Blair answered that the opinion of the Minister of Justice was that the addition of ten years to an officer's term of service was permissive, and not obligatory. Mr. Balderson's services had been dispensed with because they were not required.

After recess the following bills were read a third time:

Respecting the Canadian General Electric Company, Ltd.; respecting the Dominion Building and Loan Association; to confer certain powers on the Board of Management of the Temperalities Fund of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland; respecting the Welland Power and Supply Canal Company; to confirm an agreement made between the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and the Hull Electric Company; respecting the Canada Atlantic Railway Company; respecting the Niagara Grand Island Bridge Company; respecting the River St. Clair Bridge and Tunnel Company; respecting the Atikokan Iron Range Railway Company.

Several other private bills were advanced a stage and the Lawry divorce bill, from the Senate, was given a first reading.

Resuming, in supply, discussion of the superannuation of Secretary Balderson, Mr. McNeill argued that the addition of ten years to Mr. Balderson's service was obligatory, under the statute and not permissive. It was a moral as well as a legal claim that he had; it was not a plea for charity. "But," added Mr. McNeill, "the facile cynicism with which the honorable gentlemen set aside those moral claims by a resort to nice legal contentions bodes ill to Canada."

Mr. Blair contended that it was not as if Mr. Balderson was being retired from the service at a period of life when he would be unable to obtain a livelihood in other pursuits. He argued that the Government had option as to the addition of the ten years, in that the treasury board was unanimous.

Major Hughes paid a high tribute to the attainments of Mr. Balderson and his distinguished university career at Toronto.

Mr. McMullen endorsed these encomiums.

Sir Charles Tupper, who had for years occupied the responsible position of Minister of Railways and Canals, attested to the necessity for a secretary in that department.

He contended that the important duties of secretary of the department should not be left to the deputy's private secretary. Every previous Minister had recognized that there must be a responsible secretary for the department. Evidently Mr. Blair desired to find offices for hungry followers. But the day of reckoning would come and the Liberals would find they had cut the supports from under their feet.

Mr. Haggart argued that the Government could not justify its action in this case under the law. The reason given in Order-in-Council that economy would be effected was not correct. The whole case was a blow to the civil service and an injustice to Mr. Balderson.

Eventually at 11.30 the item passed, and then good progress was made with the appropriations for the Privy Council, Customs and Trade and Commerce.

The House adjourned at midnight.

PRIZE FIGHT PICTURES.

A Legal Contest Now on as to the Ownership of Patents.

New York, May 6.—In connection with the proposed exhibition of the prize fight pictures, interest has been excited over a contest going on as to the ownership of the vitascope, or phantoscope patents. An application for a "Broad patent" is now pending, and it is expected, will soon be granted. When this patent is issued, its owners will probably have a valuable monopoly as, it is claimed, all other photographic projecting machines will be infringements. Messrs. Raff and Gammon, owners of the Vitascope Company, and the Columbia Phonograph Company, both claim ownership of this patent. It is expected the result of the contest will be that the monopoly will be shared between Raff and Gammon and the Columbia Phonograph Company. The Columbia Phonograph Company entered upon a legal fight to determine their claim to the patent, but is now inclined not to further contest and expects under the

KIDNEY DECEIT.

How Many are Unintentionally Deceived in Treating Kidney Disorders—Can You Afford to Trifle With Your Own Existence?—If You Suspect There is any Kidney Trouble, Discard Pills, Powders and Cure-alls—South American Kidney Cure is a Time-Tried and Testified Kidney Specific.

A remedy which dissolves all obstructions, which heals and strengthens the affected parts, and which from its very nature eradicates all impurities from the system, is the only safe and sure remedy in cases of kidney disorder. Such a remedy is South American Kidney Cure. This is not hearsay. The formula has been put under the severest of tests, and it has been proclaimed by the greatest authorities in the world of medical science that liquids—and liquids only—will obtain the results sought for. A liquid remedy taken into the system goes directly into the circulation and attacks immediately the affected parts, while solids such as pills or powders cannot possibly attain these results. Kidney disorders cannot afford to be trifled with. The quickest way is the safest way to combat these insidious ailments. This great remedy never fails. It's a liquid kidney specific. It's a solvent. The other page bears the special rates for the Queen's Birthday. It is a souvenir well worth preserving.

FIRST OF JULY.

A Big Excursion From Toronto on That Date.

Messrs. T. Hilton, W. Rudman and S. Deans, representing the Toronto East End Civic Employees Association, a society formed for benevolent objects, were in town this morning endeavouring to make arrangements for an excursion to Peterborough on the first of July.

They ran across Councillor White early in the morning and he took them to see Inverlea and the Nicholls Park and later on in the day the delegates were received by the Mayor and Councillors White, McWilliams Meldrum and LePlante. They bore letters from Commissioner Jones and Ald. Lamb, acting mayor of Toronto, and asked the councillors what the town would offer in the way of inducements. The calculation, they stated, was that between 1,500 and 2,000 excursionists would take in the trip, and suitable grounds were desired for the holding of a programme of sports, including bicycle races, if the sanction of the C.W.A. could be obtained.

The committee asked the delegates to arrange their programme and send it down, when the council would meet and decide on a grant towards the purchase of prizes.

The Toronto men were anxious to arrange a game of lacrosse with the Peterboroughs, stating that a first-class team would be brought down from the city. The secretary of the local team was communicated with and arrangements made for a match with, probably, the Tecumsehs.

The Mayor and Councillor White then drove the delegates down to the Driving Park and to the Jackson and Dixon Parks and afterwards entertained them to luncheon.

MISS BACON'S DEPARTURE.

She Will Train for the Position of a Salvation Army Officer.

Miss Nellie Bacon, who has been employed in J. J. Turner & Son's establishment for the past six or seven years, and has during that time also been a member of the Salvation Army, leaves next week for Toronto, where she will enter the Training School to qualify as an Army officer.

This afternoon her fellow employees assembled in the office of the firm and made a presentation, accompanied by the following address:—

To Miss Nellie Bacon:

DEAR MISS BACON,—As you are about to leave Peterborough we cannot allow you to depart from amongst us, your fellow workers, without feeling sorry to leave you, as we have worked together for a number of years and which have been very pleasant years, and we hope when you leave us that your future will be bright and happy, and that with God's help you will succeed in the work you are about to undertake. We would ask you to accept this small present as a memento of the pleasant years spent together.

ROSE MEAGHER, HENRY GREENE,
MARTHA RABY, WM. FREDENBURGH,
PERCY GORDON, JOHN TURNER,
LOTTIE CHATTEN, REGINALD TURNER,
ACHILES TURNER.

Mr. J. J. Turner, sr., also presented Miss Bacon with a beautiful Bible, as during her engagement with the firm she has been a most conscientious worker.

Mud Lake Bridge.

The Mud Lake bridge is again in position, and to-day a great many of the Ennismore farmers, who have been cut off from the Peterborough markets, were in town. Caretaker Kelly deserves credit for the energy he has shown and getting the bridge fit for traffic again so soon.

Athletics.

At the annual field day of sports on St. Michael's College grounds, Toronto, on Thursday, two Peterborough students, Messrs T. J. Crowley and P. Kelly, came out on top in several events. Mr. Crowley won the 100 yards race, and the Mail and Empire states that his clever running was the best feature of the day's sports.

New G.T.R. Ticket Agent.

Mr. Wm. Bunton, of Hastings, has been appointed agent of the Grand Trunk Railway up-town office and has taken up his stand in the Street Railway office, George street. Mr. Buntin is well and favourably known in town as an active, energetic business man and announces his intention of concentrating his entire attention on the business of the company.

Baby Eczema and Scald Head.

Infants and young children are peculiarly subject to this terrible dirorder, and if not promptly arrested it will eventually become chronic. Dr. Chase made a special study of Eczema and disease of the skin, and we can confidently recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure all forms of Eczema. The first application soothes the irritation and puts the little sufferer to rest.

For the Temiscamingue District.

A large number of farmers from South Monaghan, Smith and Harvey left to-day by the C. P. R. on a tour of inspection in the Temiscamingue District with a view to locating farms for themselves or sons. A great rush is being made this year to the Temiscamingue District, as well as the Wabigoon and Rainy River parts of the Province. Those who took up land last season speak very highly of the climate and future prospects.

A Great Opportunity.

T. V. C. OPERATIONS ON THE NASSAU SECTION.

WORK BETWEEN THE LITTLE LAKE AND THAT POINT.

The Big Entrance Piers, Twelve Hundred Feet Long, will be Completed in Three Weeks, when Work will begin on the Lift Locks.

Visitors to Nassau will receive a genuine surprise to witness the manner in which the work in that particular locality is being pushed forward on the Trent Valley Canal.

On crossing the bridge and proceeding about a hundred yards a yawning chasm is found crossing the roadway. It is at this point that the canal enters the river for the first time above the Little Lake, and enormous entrance piers are being constructed on either side, twelve hundred feet in length. They will be constructed from the bottom of timber up to within about a foot of the low water mark, and the remaining seven feet is to be of concrete of crushed stone and cement. They will be about five feet in width. About seven hundred feet of the timber work is already completed, i.e., nearly all that portion north the highway bridge, which is to be built at this point.

THE EXCAVATIONS

for the remaining five hundred feet and also for the abutments of both the highway bridge and the G. T. R. bridge, (200 feet below) are finished, and yesterday afternoon a steam pump was placed in position in order to remove the water which had found its way in from the river.

The line of the Grand Trunk, which ran up along the river for a considerable distance, will be changed, and, as stated above, a bridge two hundred feet below the highway bridge, will carry it due east and across the site at present occupied by the Orange Hall. Once the railway bridge is erected the line can be put directly into use as the grading is already completed, with the exception of placing in position a foot and a half of ballast on top of the road-bed.

The big electric stone crusher has been moved from its former position to a point just beside the present scene of operations and the company's boarding house, blacksmith shop and stables have also been transferred thither.

Mr. Corrie, of the firm of Corrie & Laverdure, contractors for this section, states that he will have the entrance piers and also abutments for both bridges completed so in all probability a very large gang of men will soon be at work. At present there are over a hundred hands working in the near vicinity of Nassau.

IN THREE WEEKS,

Immediately on getting through with this particular portion of the work, the scene of operations will be again transferred to the southern end of the section, when work will begin on the big hydraulic lift locks, which promise to be an object of great interest, as it was to obtain the most modern views on them that Mr. R. B. Rogers, superintending engineer, went to Europe last fall. Mr. Spence and his staff of assistants are at present at work taking the levels for these locks, which are over the hill in almost a direct line east from Hunter street, across the river. At present it is too wet to attempt any work on them, but in three weeks the ground will have sufficiently dried up to allow operations to proceed.

There are about twenty men scattered out along the line of the canal between Nassau and Little Lake engaged in digging post holes for the fences, which are to be erected on either side.

A trip to Nassau and half an hour's walk in either direction, will well repay anyone who is at all interested in the progress of work on the Trent Valley Canal system.

BATTALION NOTES.

The following changes, referring to the 57th Battalion have been gazetted: Major Frederick H. Brennan is permitted to resign his commission and to retain the rank of Major. To be Paymaster, with the honourary rank of Captain, Captain Robert Maxwell Dennistoun, from the reserve of officers, vice Howard, retired. Captain K. G. Loch is permitted to resign his commission and to retain the rank of Captain. To be Lieutenant, Sergeant Garnet Sumner Clegg, vice Clegg, promoted.

Fruitless Fishing for Suckers.

This morning a tonsorial artist and a sewing machine merchant rose with the lark to go down to the locks to secure enough suckers for breakfast. The tonsorial partner of the enterprise proposed that they go down on their wheels, but, "No," says the machine man, "we can't carry back the fish—we'll drive down." Consequently a vehicle, horse, nets, baskets, bags and other impediments were provided and the two spent two mortal hours hoisting and dipping their nets, and the only result was a baby sucker about the size of a sardine, which, if it had wriggled the width of an eye-lash would have slipped through a half-inch mesh. Since hope of a big haul had run so high nothing had been laid in and the two disgusted fishers had a very light breakfast. They now realise the truth of the old proverb, slightly varied—"There's many a slip between the frying pan and the fish."

OBITUARY.

Demise of Mrs. Adam Rutherford Yesterday Afternoon.

The death of Isabella Buttery, widow of the late Adam Rutherford, of Zion, Otonabee, took place yesterday afternoon.

The deceased was sixty-two years of age and took ill a few days after the death of her husband, three months ago. She has not been able to leave her room since that time and gradually became weaker until her demise on Friday afternoon. Three children survive, viz: Mrs. John Mencrief, of North Monaghan, and Sidney and Bella, who reside at home.

The funeral will take place to-morrow at 2 o'clock from the family residence at Zion to the Little Lake Cemetery.

CAVAN.

Mamie Macknight's Attack of Lockjaw Ends Fatally.

It is stated with deep regret that Mamie Macknight, the daughter of Mr. Wm. Macknight, of Cavan, whose serious illness from lockjaw, attended with intense suffering, was referred to in yesterday's issue, died on Friday evening at 5 p.m. The family have the sympathy of all in their very sad bereavement. The funeral takes place on Sunday at 2 o'clock p.m.

THE PARSONAGE SOLD.

In Connection With the George Street Methodist Church.

Yesterday afternoon the trustees of the George street Methodist church sold the parsonage on McDonel street to Mr. T. C. Elliott, of the Port Hope Knitting Works, the purchase price being $2,000.

A committee was immediately appointed to make arrangements for the rental of a residence suitable for the requirements of the next pastor of the church, until such time as a new parsonage can be built on the rear of the church lot facing on Water street.

A Brown Squirrel.

Mr. Harry Faint has just had a fine squirrel mounted. It is probably a freak, as it is of enormous size and is a bluish brown or almost mouse-coloured. It was shot near Keene, and is thought to be a variety of the big fox squirrels, which are seen in the Western States.

Gus Takes a Tumble.

The other evening while Mr. Gus Sawers was riding down street on his bicycle in Lakefield, when opposite J. C. Sherin & Son's store, a man stepped out in front of him, and in trying to turn the wheel slipped and went off the sidewalk. A team of horses happened to be standing by the sidewalk, and the bicycle fell right in front of them, scaring the horses. One of them put its foot through the front wheel, breaking a number of spokes. The horses were quieted before any further damage was done, but Gus had a narrow escape from being seriously injured.

Prominent Business Man of Peterborough Cured of Eczema.

Mr. Thos. Gladman, bookkeeper for Adam Hall, esq., stove and tinware dealer, Peterborough, writes the following facts:—"Have been troubled for nine years with Eczema on my leg, and at times the itching was something terrible; tried many eminent doctors and was pronounced incurable. I had given up hopes of ever being cured when I was recommended by Mr. Madill, druggist, to try a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I am happy to testify that after using two boxes I am completely cured.

Changed Hands.

The Burleigh Falls hotel, which has been run by Mr. John Holmes for quite a number of years, has changed hands, a Toronto Company purchasing it. The deal was completed on Saturday last, and we understand the new owners take immediate possession. Mr. R. H. C. Brown, of Toronto, who represents the Company, has been in the village for the past few weeks trying to get a number of the cottagers to take shares in the Company and we understand he has met with considerable success. The new Company intend making a number of changes, which will be for the convenience of the public.—Lakefield News.

Work on Water Street.

Mr. J. H. Campbell, of Nassau, who is now in his 53rd year as pathmaster, and claims therefore to know what he is talking about, communicates to the EXAMINER his strong approval of the work that has been done on Water street north, in the vicinity of Hilliard's mill south ward, under Mr. G. W. Ranney's inspectorate. He has supplied the street with culverts and watercourses, with the result that where previously there were pools and puddles there is now a free flow for the water, with an immense consequent improvement to the street. Mr. Campbell speaks very highly of the thorough and effective nature of Mr. Ranney's work upon the street named, and thinks that he is the right man in the right place as street inspector.

A Growing Habit.

You have no doubt heard men say that they could regulate their drinking to a moderate amount, but this in ninety nine cases out of a hundred proves a dismal failure. The liquor habit grows and keeps growing. If you find it growing on you, now is the time to stop it. It can be done without interfering with your business. Anti-Boom is put up in pill form and can be taken in one's food or drink, as it dissolves quickly. It builds up the system and makes a healthy man of a broken-nerved drunkard. It has proved successful in far advanced cases. We will send a box in sealed plain wrapper on receipt of $1.00. Oriental Chemical Co., St. Alexis street, Montreal.

THE PETERBOROUGH COLTS.

A Brief History of Their Victorious Career.

In to-day's issue of the Toronto Globe appears a picture of two rinks of the Peterborough Curling Colts and the appended account of their victories:—

"The Midland Curling Colts' Association is a new organization in Ontario Curling circles, and is likely to become one of the most successful and valuable. This association was formed in Campbellford in 1894, with Mr. George J. Horkins, of Peterborough, President. Mr. W. H. Biggar, M.P.P., Belleville, was chosen Hon. President, and donated a silver trophy for competition, the club winning it three times in succession to retain it as their property. The purpose of the association was to develop the sport amongst the younger men, and that it has gained its end is not doubted. In 1894 three clubs entered—Belleville, Campbellford and Peterborough—when home and home games were played, and the Peterborough Colts were the victors. Kingston, Port Hope and Cobourg became members in 1895 and two groups were formed, Peterborough winning in No. 1, and Campbellford in No. 2, the final contest going to Peterborough. In 1896 Lindsay and Norwood Colts affiliated with the new association. Port Hope and Peterborough again won the group matches, and Peterborough captured the trophy for the third time, Port Hope defaulting. The Peterborough Colts retain the cup as their property, and as an evidence of their true sportsmanlike qualities it might be mentioned that they have presented the cup for competition between the Thistle and Granite clubs of Peterborough.

The Peterborough Colts are the fathers of the Association. The Colts first organized in 1894, with Mr. George J. Horkins, as president. In 1895 Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, B.A., was president; and the present presiding officer is Mr. C. N. Browne. The two rinks of Colts have never been defeated and stand at the top notch in the Midland district curling world. The Midland Colts Association has as its President this year Mr. Dickson Davidson of Peterborough. His predecessor was Mr. F. J. Smith, of Campbellford. Mr. T. W. R. McRae has been secretary of the association since its formation.

NEWS NUGGETS.

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—There was a heavy white frost this morning.

—$25 cash will buy a good second-hand bicycle in first-class condition. Can be seen at this office. dtf

—The corporation labourers are now engaged in picking out and cracking the hardheads on the streets.

—Peterborough curlers in Saturday Globe, for sale at the Peterborough Bookstore. A. H. STRATTON & Co.

—A projecting timber was struck by a passing locomotive on Thursday near Nassau, on the T. V. C. works and the train was nearly ditched as the result.

—The stench from a barn in close proximity to the P. A. A. grounds is becoming unbearable. The health officers should give the owners a call and have the nuisance remedied.

—A local physician has prescribed a wheel for a lady patient. He volunteers to apply his stethoscope to the tires to test the soundness of the lungs of the machine. Verily, "the world do move"

—R. H. Bickell preferred a charge of assault against John Armour, jr., but did not appear in the court this morning to press the charge. The case was dismissed and the plaintiff will have to pay the costs.

—In order to make choice of a puppy from among a number of others, it is best to leave the choice to the mother herself. In carrying them back to their bed the first the mother picks up will always be the best.

—A newsboy was assessed two cents this morning by the market authorities for selling papers on the market. He complained to the police department and was instructed to refuse payment the next time.

—There will be a meeting of the executive committee of the Veterans of 1866 Association in Mr. Poussette's law office next Wednesday night to consider the adoption of a distinctive badge and other business.

—Men who are now employed on the lakes and rivers "driving" the numerous logs southward, are receiving from $16 to $22 per month for their services. A large number from this locality have gone north and they will be engaged for three months.

—Mr. H. P. Kennedy, acting secretary of the Y.M.C.A., who has been conducting special services in the Grace church for the past week or so, addressed a large audience last night on the subject of "Jacob." He will continue the services the coming week.

—The Fontill correspondent to the Welland Tribune says that the peach trees are in blossom in that vicinity. The outlook for a fine fruit crop is exceptionally promising at present. The season is evidently much more advanced in the Niagara district than in the neighbourhood of Peterborough.

—Another evidence of the deadly effects of tobacco. Mrs. George Stephens, of Houghton township, Norfolk county, died recently at the age of 112 years. She used tobacco all her life and was married three times. One can easily understand a person thriving under the moderate use of a comfort like tobacco, but to be married three times and live to 112 years is more of a marvel.

SHOW THEM TO THE PUBLIC.

As the public—particularly the ladies—are so often swindled by profit-loving merchants and dealers, it is well that people should have an example of what is done in the sale of certain package dyes for home dyeing.

The makers of common and adulterated package dyes sell their crude colours to the retail merchants at a cost of four cents per packet, and the public who buy these deception dyes are made to pay ten cents for them. A handsome profit indeed for Mr. Storekeeper! No wonder he uses every endeavour to sell and substitute his poor dyes for the famous and reliable Diamond Dyes.

The Diamond Dyes, that all live and honourable dealers in Canada handle and sell, cost a good deal more money, yet the public get them for ten cents, which only allows the dealer a fair profit.

But mark the difference, ladies! The cheap dyes are really worthless, they are made for the profit of the manufacturer and dealer, while Diamond Dyes are made for the profit, pleasure and blessings of every home dyer.

LACROSSE.

Arrangements have been made by the Peterboroughs to bring the Rosedale Lacrosse Club, of Toronto, here for a game on the afternoon of the Queen's Birthday. A number of applications for games were received and it was finally decided to invite the Rosedales to come, as within the last few years they have made an enviable name for themselves and are in the C. L. A. this year with the avowed intention of landing the championship. The local team have turned out to practices regularly since the grounds have become fit for use and by the way the boys are handling their sticks they will evidently make their mark this year.

The P. A. A. A. Grounds have been well fitted up for the season, the ladies' stand being strengthened and the grand stand practically rebuilt. The dressing rooms have been refitted and every arrangement has been made to accommodate the big crowds which will patronize the game this year. The juniors are showing up well and this year there will be room for a couple more of them on the seniors. Amongst the players who have already shown up for practice are Dobbin, Lipsett, Rubidge, Borland, Glover, Lynch, Brown, Mein, Galley, Begley, Craig, L. Dobbin, Barrie, Thompson. Of the old team, Waller Phelan, Ernie Wasson and Tom McDonough have not yet put in an appearance, but Monday will doubtless find them amongst the others. Wilgar, Rickey, Logan, Crossley, Bellegham, Green, Adams, Rutherford, Lewis, Costello and half a score of others are also expected to show up at the next practice.

Berlin is going to have a swift team this year. Amongst the players from this section who go there are Jimmy McDonald and the three Kirks from Madoc. All four of these men have been given positions in the big Seagrave distillery. Tom Kirk will not play but will field captain the team. His brother Tim will not be in Berlin for a couple of weeks, as at present he is down at the Lehigh University coaching the team there and drawing a salary of twenty-five dollars a week and expenses. The absence of these four men will greatly cripple Madoc, which is to be regretted, as a swift article of lacrosse was always put up there against a visiting team.

CRICKET.

Local cricketers will meet to re-organize the cricket club at eight o'clock in the Oriental Hotel, on Monday evening next. A full attendance of all wishing to identify themselves with the club this year is requested.

THE WHEEL.

The Victoria Bicycle Club will meet at 7.30 o'clock on Monday evening in the Oriental Parlours. A full attendance of the members is requested as the proposed constitution will be presented for consideration, and the question of the selection of a suite of apartments will bettled. The road race matter will also come up for discussion. The fauggestion has been made that the club to be true to its name should turn out with the procession on Jubilee Day.

It is said that there are about 2,000 different forms of illness to which human flesh is heir, and that two-thirds of them can be cured by riding a bicycle.

"The muscles most used in riding are undoubtedly the muscles af the thigh, which reach a standard of fine development in many instances. The muscles of the calf are enlarged to a great extent, while the tendons in the ankle are strengthened. The continual drag on the handle-bars tends to strengthen the muscles of the shoulders and the arms. A little care will keep the chest expended so that it can be also benefitted.

The arguments offered by the railway companies in opposition to Mr. Casey's bill compelling railways to carry the bicycle of a passenger on the same terms as they now carry other personal baggage are by no means convincing, says the Globe. To say that a man might as well claim to have his horse and buggy or a farmer his self-binder carried free as the wheelman his bicycle is by no means to the point. The fact that a passenger is now allowed to have his trunk carried in the baggage car free has not led to demands that pianos, safes and kitchen ranges should receive like treatment.

Deer-hunters going north in the fall are allowed, we understand, to carry their dogs free. Has the railway company ever been asked, on the strength of this precedent, to carry horses or milch cows free? The fact is each case must treated by itself. The bicycle which the wheelman takes with is wholly a piece of personal baggage, neither weighing as much as a trunk nor as exacting on the employees who have to handle it.

In eleven States of the Union railways are not allowed to charge for carrying bicycles when the owner has purchased a ticket, and we ought not to be behind these States in Canada. Already on the Government roads bicycles are free, and this recognition of the principle by the powers that be ought to have a decisive influence on the fate of the bill now before Parliament.

ANTHRAXOLITE AT GOODERHAM

There May be Millions in It.

Mr. Robt. Bradshaw, the well-known prospector, has shown us a sample of anthraxolite coal taken from an outcropping ledge recently discovered by him in the vicinity of Gooderham while away on one of his frequent exploring trips in search of valuable minerals, of which he has located several very promising veins. The samples of coal taken from the surface of the ledge are somewhat "slatey" owing to long exposure to the elements, but those taken from a depth of three feet are of much better quality. Mr. Bradshaw states that while he and a companion were making excavations to trace the course of the deposit he uncovered a portion of a tree trunk that had been carbonized. The day after his return from the north Mr. Bradshaw took a quantity of the coal to Sinclair's blacksmith shop, and we understand the test resulted very satisfactorily, burning freely, though somewhat difficult to ignite, and producing an intense heat. The deposit is only a short distance from the railway, and if the more thorough tests soon to be made turn out well Mr. Bradshaw will speedily blossom into a millionaire, the back country will prosper as in the old lumbering days, and the smoke from hundreds of tall chimneys will float above the hustling city of Lindsay.—Lindsay Post.

THE AUBURN BRIDGE.

Work on it is Being Rapidly Pushed to Completion.

A gang of men from the Hamilton Bridge Works are engaged in erecting the superstructure of the G. T. R. railroad bridge at Auburn, the sub-structure, consisting of two abutments and three piers, having been built last fall.

The first steel span is already in position and the false works supporting it are being torn away preparatory to being used for the second span.

The western approach to the bridge has been completed and the rails laid to the abutment. At the eastern end the work is not so far advanced, the grading for the railway track not having yet been raised to the desired pitch. The entire work, however, will, it is estimated, be completed in five or six weeks.

No orders have been received by the foreman regarding the erection of a foot bridge in connection with the work, but the residents who would be benefitted thereby have not lost all hope yet, as although the necessary brackets for a foot bridge should be attached now, yet it can be done at any time at a little extra trouble and very little additional expense.

A childless marriage cannot be a happy one.

A healthy baby is the real jewel for which the wedding ring is only the setting. There is no place in Nature's economy for a childless marriage. Wedded couples that are childless are never truly married. A baby is the tie that binds. The baby is the pledge that makes husband and wife one in nature and in fact, and that teaches mutual self-sacrifice and sympathy. Thousands of couples are childless because of the wife's neglect of her health as a woman. Too few women fully appreciate the importance of keeping healthy and vigorous the organs upon which motherhood is dependent. As a consequence, they are weak where they should be strong, and motherhood is either an impossibility or a torturesome and dangerous ordeal. This is easily remedied.

The most wonderful medicine for women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It acts directly and only on those delicate organs upon which the perpetuation of the race depends. It allays inflammation, soothes pain and makes those organs healthy and vigorous. It prepares for motherhood. It makes the expectant period comfortable. It makes baby's coming easy, and almost painless and insures health in both mother and child. Druggists sell it.

"I take pleasure in expressing my faith in your 'Favorite Prescription,'" writes Miss Edith Cain, of Clinton, Allegheny Co., Pa. "After two years of suffering I began taking Dr. Pierce's medicine and now I am entirely cured. I had been troubled with displacement of internal organs for some time and also with ulcerative weakness, but now I am well and happy. I will cheerfully recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to all invalid ladies."

The profit side of life is health. The balance is written in the rich, red, pure blood of health. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation and make the blood rich and pure. They never gripe. By druggists.

THE VILLAGE LAD AT PLAY.

What mater that his trousers bear
A patch on either knee,
Since roses in his round cheeks glow,
While sparkling glance and light laugh show
A spirit blithe and free?

With grimy hand he knuckles down
To let a marble fly,
Intently scans the sphere's swift flight
And chuckles in his deep delight
When luck approves his eye.

No mercenary gamester he
That craves a rival's blood;
As quick to share Dame Fortune's smiles
As e'er he is to court her wiles—
A gentleman in bud.

He has not heard the city's far,
Insistent voices call;
Yet not a bird in wood or field
Nests long from his keen gaze concealed—
He knows and loves them all.

No cares oppress or sorrows dim
The joys his projects bring:
For all life long or for a day
I'd rather be that boy at play
Than president or king.

AN AUNT'S ADVICE.

BROUGHT A YOUNG LADY OUT OF THE SHADOW OF DEATH.

A Remarkable Case Vividly Shows the Wonderful Health-Restoring Power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

From the Orangeville Banner.

There is no doubt at all that many people are prejudiced against proprietary medicines, and equally no doubt many look upon the testimonial published as much in the nature of an exaggerated puff. If the Banner has been tinctured with this feeling, it has, so far as one medicine is concerned, had its doubts removed. We refer to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, concerning the curative qualities of which strong claims have been made, and proofs advanced to their support which seemed equally strong. But it is when one comes across in their own locality a case almost rivaling any that have been made public, that doubt disappears and conviction follows. Such a case the Banner came across and investigated and now gives the facts. The case is that of Miss Sarah Langford, an estimable young lady, who resides in the neighbourhood of Camilla. We had been told that she had been brought near to death's door, and had been restored to health through the agency of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. We decided however to cast hearsay aside and investigate for ourselves.

We found Miss Langford the picture of health and good spirits at her pleasant home in Camilla. In response to our enquiries as to her illness, and the cause of her recovery, she expressed her willingness to satisfy our curiosity, and, as she added, relate her experience for the good of others afflicted as she was. Her story, very briefly was as follows:—

'I had la grippe in the spring of 1894. I did not seem to get over the effects of the attack, and as the summer progressed became weak and listless. Any kind of work became a burden to me. After pumping a pail of water from the well, I would have to stand and hold my hands over my heart for a moment or so, it would flutter so violently. I could not go upstairs without difficulty, and towards the last would have to rest on the steps, and when I got to the top, lie down until I could recover my breath. I became a mere skeleton, my cheeks were like wax and my lips colorless. I lost all appetite and my meals were often untasted. Medicine seemed to have no effect upon me. I was getting weaker all the time, and at last began to give up hope of recovery. My parents were of course in great distress, and I knew by the looks and actions of friends who called to see me that they thought I was doomed to an early death. Then a dear lady friend died and I managed out of love for her to drag myself to her funeral. The sensation of seeing her laid away, believing that I would soon follow her, was a strange one. Shortly after this an aunt of mine, Mrs. Wm. Henderson, of Toronto, came to visit at our place. My condition troubled her very much and she insisted on my trying Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. To please her I consented but with little hope of any good result. The effect, however, was wonderful and a pleasing surprise to me. I soon began to feel more cheerful and seemed to feel stronger. Then my appetite began to improve and the colour returned to my cheeks and lips. From that hour I steadily gained strength, and was soon enjoying my former excellent health, and I am sincere in expressing my belief that to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do I owe my recovery.'

Enquiry among neighbours corroborated Miss Langford's story as to her illness and remarkable recovery. In her case at least Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have given a striking proof that they possess wonderful merits.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapping bearing the full trade mark, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.'

THE PARIS FIRE HORROR.

Socialist Papers Express No Sympathy With the Victims—Death of General Meunier—Further Identifications.

Paris, May 6.—With the exception of the Socialist newspapers, the whole press associates itself with the profound sorrow which has overtaken the upper classes of French society. The papers point out that the question of the responsibility for the fearful fire at the charity bazaar in the Rue Jean Goujon on Tuesday afternoon last, resulting in the death of probably about 150 people, must be fixed. They reproach the prefecture of police for not having taken proper precautions.

The Government has ordered all the subsidized theatres to be closed until Saturday, as a mark of respect for the dead.

To the list of victims must be added the names of Mlle. de Chevilly and Vicomtesse d'Avenal, who have succumbed to the injuries which they sustained while escaping from the fire.

It is stated that Mlle. de L. (name not given in full, according to the custom of French newspapers), the daughter of a well-known colonel, visited the Duc de Vendome, son of the Duc d'Alencon, yesterday and repeated a conversation she had with the late Duchesse d' Alencon, who is one of the victims, just before the catastrophe. Mlle. de L. referred to the courageous conduct of Her Royal Highness after the fire broke out and continued:

"I was talking to the Duchess in front of the stall where I was assisting, when I heard a cry of fire and immediately said to the Duchess:' 'Let us go, Madame, Come at once.'

"The Duchess replied: 'No, not yet. Let us give the visitors time to get outside.'

"I saw the crowd rush for the exits and the flames spreading from hanging to hanging around us, while drops of burning tar fell upon us. I took the Duchess by the waist and was dragging her away. I repeated: 'You must come, Madame.'

"I dragged her a few paces, but with a brusque movement she released herself, repeating, 'No, no, I will remain.'

"As I was suffocating, and as the flames had already reached us, I was compelled to abandon her.

"She stood motionless, then took a few steps towards her stall, her eyes uplifted to heaven as though seeing visions, and that was the last I saw of her."

The report that the Countess Castellane, formerly Miss Anna Gould, was among the missing, is pure invention. It was not even hinted at anywhere in Paris that the Castellanes were even in the vicinity of the fire.

General Meunier, who was severely burned during the fire at the charity bazaar, died at noon to-day. Only five bodies now remain unidentified.

The remains of the Duchesse d'Alencon were placed in a coffin this afternoon, in the presence of Prince Louis and Prince Ferdinand of Bavaria, Baron Lambert and Colonel de Percival, who signed their names on the sealed coffin. The Duc de Vendome, son of the deceased Duchess, was also present.

The other victims, whose remains have been identified, are: Mme. de Villeneuve, Mme. Cordoet, Mme. Blinksy, Mme. de Cousson, Mme. Gentry, Sister St. Claire and D. Rochetmaxure.

The American Chamber of Commerce of Paris to-day adopted a resolution, setting forth that the Chamber is "deeply pained at the terrible misfortune which has just caused the premature death of so many prominent persons, and expresses its most keen and most sincere sympathy, and sends to the families of the victims who gave their lives in the cause of charity and benevolence the assurance of its deep and respectful condolences."

A child was cured of croup by a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. A neighbor's child died of the same dread disease, while the father was getting ready to call the doctor. This shows the necessity of having Ayer's Cherry Pectoral always at hand.

COLD STORAGE ON SHIPS.

Seventeen Steamers Will Be Equipped With Appliances to Build Up Our Trade With Britain.

Ottawa, May 6.—(Special.)—The proceedings of the Committee on Agriculture this morning were of the most interesting character. Commissioner Robertson detailed the Government's arrangements for the shipment of perishable goods in cold storage to the Old Country. Arrangements had been made, he said, for the present summer to fit up 17 steamships between Montreal and British ports, with cold storage appliances. They are six to London, giving a weekly service, five to Avonmouth, Bristol, for the west of England, four for Liverpool, giving nearly a weekly service, and two for Glasgow. Arrangements have also been made for similar accommodation from St. John and Halifax for a British port and for a monthly service between Prince Edward Island and Great Britain. The charge by the steamers is to be ten shillings per ton above the ordinary rates.

In reply to Mr. McNeill, the professor said the ocean charges for grapes, inclusive of cold storage, freight and everything else, would be about half a cent a pound. This would be about the rate for all classes of products handled under the cold storage system.

The professor then described the kind of packages to be used to avoid losses of butter shipments, their cost, material appearance and the difference in the prices received for good and poor packages. Butter in transit from creameries to the railways should be shaded or sent at night, covered with glass. As regards eggs, a meeting of shippers had asked as to the prospects of these shipments and said they would be able to send over 35 carloads in July, 50 in August and 60 in September and other shippers in Western Ontario would send about a quarter more. With regard to fruits, special arrangements had been made to try the experiment of grapes, pears, peaches and also tomatoes. There will be inspectors to see the products properly cared for. A cold storage building had been provided at Grimsby, Ont., which had been fully supplied with ice and was now ready for use. If the experiments should succeed other fruit centres would have similar facilities.

Mr. Robertson next described the arrangements made by the department for cold storage on railways at Montreal and other points, whilst awaiting shipment on the steamers, and at Toronto as a receiving and distributing centre. Two men would be placed in Great Britain to look after the safety of these shipments, whose duties he desired to be as those of national commercial travelers. The professor was applauded upon conclusion.

HELPLESS FOR SIX MONTHS.

Rheumatism Held Him in Chains—Suffered Untold Torture—The Great South American Rheumatic Cure Waged War and Won a Comple Victory—Relief in a Few Hours.

"I have been a great sufferer from rheumatism. I was completely helpless for over six months. I tried all kinds of remedies but got no relief. Having noticed strong testimonials published of the cures effected by South American Rheumatic Cure I obtained a bottle of it, and received relief from pain from the first dose, and in an incredibly short time I was entirely freed from my sufferings." DIAMONDS ARE ALIVE.

Professor Von Holst of Chicago Will Act as the Apostle of Von Schroen's Discovery.

Chicago, May 6.—Professor Edouard Von Holst, who has lately returned from Europe and taken up his chair in the Chicago University, will shortly make public the details of the discovery of life within crystals made by Prof. Von Schroen of Naples.

Von Schroen is a Bavarian, and he made the discovery by bringing high magnifying glasses to bear on crystals of various forms. He has preserved his discovery by thousands of views taken from about a dozen crystals. Professor Von Holst believes the discovery is one of the most important made in science for many years, and, although not a scientist himself, he says that Spencer and others have agreed upon the genuineness and importance of the discovery.

Dr. CHASE CURES FATHER AND CHILD

Both afflicted with Eczema of a very troublesome type and cured in a remarkably short while by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

"I was troubled for ten years with eczema on one leg; the itching was something terrible; would scratch until the blood came. How I came to know the value of DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT, I have a little girl two years; when she was one year old the same disease began to show upon her face. It wasn't long before her face became literally covered with it. In order to keep her from scratching it we had to bandage her hands up. I tried several doctors, but got no relief. Seeing DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT so highly advertised I made up my mind to purchase a box, which I did from one of our leading druggists. The first application I noticed a change. It was then I began to think about myself. With four or five applications, to my surprise, I am completely cured, no sign of the disease, and my little girl's face to-day is clear of all the scabs. I am only too glad to inform any person what a blessing DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT has proved itself.

CANCER CURED
—AND A—
LIFE SAVED
By the Persistent Use of
Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"I was troubled for years with a sore on my knee, which several physicians, who treated me, called a cancer, assuring me that nothing could be done to save my life. As a last resort, I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after taking a number of bottles, the sore began to disappear and my general health improve. I persisted in this treatment, until the sore was entirely healed. Since then, I use Ayer's Sarsaparilla occasionally as a tonic and blood-purifier, and, indeed, it seems as though I could not keep house without it."—Mrs. S. A. Fields, Bloomfield, Ia.

THE QUEEN'S PARDON.

On the heights of Portland the December mist, still undispersed by sunrise, hung thick, obliterating all traces of the prison buildings from the roads, where several ships of the channel squadron lay at anchor, and also from the straggling row of houses at the base of the northwest slope. In the prison itself there was no light as yet save in the corridors, up and down which the ever-alert wardens paced monotonously to and fro. In most of the cells the prisoners slept, tired out with the previous day's hewing of stone and uncongenial tasks; but in one the occupant, a man of 35, good-looking in spite of prison garb, close-cropped hair, and the ravages of toil and despair, lay on his bed awake.

A little more than ten years ago he had stood in the dock of a west of England city listening to a judge with a hard voice, though with kindly eyes, pronouncing sentence of 15 years' penal servitude. All that an eloquent counsel could do had been done for him, but to no avail. The evidence seemed conclusively damnatory, and the foreman of the jury, after an absence of half an hour, answered "guilty" to the usual question with a ring of conviction in his voice. The judge's words to Thomas Harborde fell on deaf ears. He stood stupidly gazing at a young girl sitting at the back of the court in the company of a sweet-faced old lady, as though he saw nothing. At last a warder touched him on the shoulder, and the same instant a piteous cry of "O, Tom! Tom! They're going to take you away from me," rang out in the court, over which the dusk of late afternoon was creeping, gradually blotting out the features of those who sat at all in shadow. The prisoner turned round as though about to say something to the judge on the bench, and then, led by the warder, he vanished down the dock stairs to the cells, to be known no longer as Thomas Harborde, but by various numbers: at Portland convict prison as "No. 27."

The sense of innocence brought him —contrary to all preconceived notions of writers of fiction—no meed of satisfaction; it merely filled him with desperate wrath and blackest despair. In the early period of his solitary confinement he found himself confronted day in and out with the crushing sense of the legions of hours, minutes and seconds before he could hope to be a free man—if ever he were to be one again. By good conduct—against the very thought of which he at first rebelled, refusing to accept any boon at the hands of fate—he might reduce these years to two-thirds maybe. What then, millions of seconds, each one to him, a prisoner, an appreciable part of life; hundreds of thousands of leaden-footed minutes, each one filled with a poignant despair, must pass ere the time of release drew near. At work, under the scorching sun or in the keen air of winter, in the quarries it was all the same. These hours and minutes became embodied in the persons of the warders and fellow prisoners, in the presence of his chains. From a possibly dangerous man he became almost an inanimate machine; a mere cogwheel in the round of daily toil and prison discipline.

Through the long December night, while the mist enshrouded Portland and restricted the range of the lights at the Bill to half a mile or less, and while the sirens sounded from the lighthouse gallery almost continuously, answered faintly by others from vessels far out to sea, or booming harshly from others near at hand, Harborde lay awake reckoning the weeks, days, hours and minutes which comprised the remaining two years of his term. He had just dropped off into a half-sleeping condition when his cell door opened, and instead of the hard face of the warder come to tell him to tidy up, he saw the governor and chaplain, with the warder in the back-ground.

What could it mean? He sprang up rubbing his eyes, and almost before he knew what was happening the governor had told him in a few words that he had received the queen's pardon, and then proceeded to read the same. What did it all mean? No other thought germinated in his dulled brain. Free! Free to go where he willed! Free to walk out of the jail gates! Never to return within the stone walls which had shut him in from the outside world, as surely as though no other world than that contained within them existed. The prison bell clanged, startling him into a state of wakefulness. The governor had finished reading the official-looking paper, and with the conclusion of the formal part of his duty he added a few words of congratulation. Harborde seemed to have no comprehension of their meaning. He remained standing in the center of the narrow cell speechless. At last the chaplain made him understand the import of the document which had just been read over to him.

"Free! Free! It is impossible," he exclaimed, and then he threw himself on the bed in an agony of joy. The clanging of the bell afresh, the slamming of doors, the echoing of footsteps down the resounding corridors, recalled him to a sense of his position. A warder entered with a suit of clothes. With trembling fingers he removed his prison garb; worn, soiled with weather and labor, and intolerable. The trousers felt chilly after the thick, tight-fitting knickerbockers, and rough, thick, worsted stockings. The coat seemed to fit him nowhere. With one look round his cell, on the walls of which he had done innumerable calculations to keep himself from insanity bred by the terrible silence and sense of loneliness, "No. 27," now no longer a mere figure, a machine, but a human being, stepped into the corridor.

There was a breakfast for him such as he had not tasted for nine long years, but he had no appetite. The one idea now possessing his mind was home, escape whilst the governor was willing for him to depart. He swallowed a few mouthfuls, drank a few gulps of cocoa, and then with the allowance money in his pocket hurried to the gateway.

He was free. Free to go wherever he liked. Free to start for home as fast as steam could carry him. He rushed down the road, waving his arms with the reawakened instincts of a boy escaping from school, oblivious alike of the sympathetic gaze of women he passed, and the half-contemptuous remarks of the men. He dashed into the bleak, shabby little railway station, only to learn that there was no train for an hour. Already his limbs, unused to such riotous movements and still feeling the lag of the chain, had begun to fail him, making the half-jocular suggestion of the solitary porter, that he should "take a little exercise and walk to Weymouth," out of the question.

"I'll have to wait," was all he could think of to say.

"Doin' time ain't altogether exhilaratin' nor strengthenin' work," the porter remarked.

Harborde nodded his head, yet longed to tell him that he was an innocent man. The porter, however, had vanished, to return in a few moments with a paper.

"Here, mate," he exclaimed, with rough kindness, "You won't know all yesterday's news, I'll go bail."

Harborde seized the paper. No! he knew nothing of yesterday's news, nor that of thousands of days which had once been yesterday. He could see nothing at first. The print swam in a confused jumble before his eyes. When his sight cleared he commenced to read. How strange it was! He used to be a great reader before he became "No. 27," and now he seemed to know nothing of the world. New names confronted him everywhere. Names of those in authority, names of towns, names even of countries. Where was Mashonaland and Matabeleland? He was confused. He read on. This delicious new-found turmoil of the world, how good it was after all.

At last his eye caught a small paragraph stowed away at the bottom of the third column on page six of the paper. He read it and reread it over and again. "Her Majesty, the Queen, has been graciously pleased to pardon Thomas Harborde, who was convicted of forgery at the Winchester assizes some ten years ago, and who is now completing his sentence of 15 years' penal servitude at Portland. Harborde will be released this morning. The step had been taken in consequence of the dying confession of a man at Bristol." Nothing more! Now he knew why he had been released. And so death had taken Edward Tilwell out of the hands of justice. It was hardly fair of death. The porter came up whistling to tell him the train would start in ten minutes. He got up, thrust the paper into the man's hands, and pointed to the paragraphs.

"That's me."

"You Thomas Harborde?" exclaimed the man. "Then all I've got to say is it's a hanged shame the Queen didn't send a coach-and-six for you: Let's have your hand, man, to wish you good luck. Got a missis? No? So much the better; poor soul, if you had, it would out her up terrible."

"No," said Harborde, as though speaking to himself, "I was to have been married; but that's years ago now, and I'm an old man."

"Old!" interjected the ported, "you're no more than five-and-thirty, I'll go bail. You do look older, to be sure. But wait till you've been out a bit, you'll soon rub off them lines and look a bit more uppish."

The engine at the end of the short train of carriages relegated to the Portland line after becoming too thoroughly out of date for even the Somerset and Dorset local service between Weymouth and Dorchester, gave a thin, wintry squeak, and Harborde, in a fever of apprehension lest it should start without him, tumbled into the first carriage that came handy, ticketless.

It was quite dark when Applebury was reached, and Harborde, luggageless, speedily passed out of the station without being recognized. There seemed little alteration in the place. Several of the shops—now gay with Christmas goods and finery—in the main street now had large plate-glass windows in place of more countryfied fronts, but were otherwise much as 15 years ago. For a moment he stood confused, staring up and down the street, regarded by the passers-by with curiosity. Then he remembered that he would have to go along the street, past the grocer's whose window projected a yard into the footpath, turn down the by-street, and then again turning take the road leading to his home.

In ten minutes he reached the garden gate. He had run part of the way, and now he could not make up his mind to go up the drive to the door. What if they were all dead? He grew sick at the very idea. There was a light in his mother's room, which was at the front of the house. What if she was ill—perhaps dying? At last his legs carried him up the drive which swept around the little front lawn in a semi-circle. He heard the bell tingle shrilly at the back of the house. The sound seemed like home. All at once he remembered how, years ago, he had banged it with a long-handled broom till it tangled against its fellow on either side.

The door opened. A flood of light streamed out on the gravel. It was a strange face, and the face sent an icy shock to his heart. Far outside himself he heard a voice he did not recognise as his own asking if Dr. Harborde were in. A year seemed to pass before the servant said: "No;" adding: "Did you wish to see him particular?"

"Yes."

"He'll be in in half an hour."

"Is—is Mrs. Harborde in? Is she alive?" said the man at the door, throwing the words at her when once his tongue consented to frame them.

"Why, Lor' bless me, yes! Come, none of that."

But it was no use. The man she had just noticed with suspiciously short hair and a strange, wild-looking face had pushed past her, thrown open the sitting-room door, stumbled into it and thrown his arms round a sweet-faced old lady who rose in alarm at his sudden entrance.

"My son! my son!" rang out through the house. "Mother! mother!"

The girl stood rooted to the spot, then she ran to Jane, and the two of them came out into the passage. In the sitting-room with its pink-shaded lamp a woman was seated kissing every line on her son's face—ever line that the long years had written. And he stroked the hair that still lay thick, though white, in a coil at the back of her head.

Suddenly the man started up.

"Jess?" he asked, huskily.

Some one who had lain, half-stunned with joy, in a wicker chair well out of the range of the lamp-light, came into his vision.

"Jess!" he cried, folding her in his arms, whilst the room swam round. "My Jess!"

"Tom!" came the answer.

"But I am old," said he; "so old."

"And I also, with the sadness and loneliness of waiting. But now—now I am young again."

The voice of the elder woman broke the silence after a moment: "For this my son was dead and is alive again." And they began to be merry.—Black and White.

BUTCHERED OR BURNED?

We read with horror of the cruelty and butcheries of Gen. Weyler in the fair Isle of Cuba, but little reck we of the ravages of that more direful King of Grave Fillers, Kidney Disease, here in our midst.

People of high and low degree drop into graves on all sides of us daily from Kidney Trouble. We incur it ourselves. We encourage it. We do everything but cure it.

Yet there is a cure, pleasant as a May morning. Sure as fate. Infallible as heredity. Before this wonderful remedy, the agonizing tortures of Kidney Ills vanish like a snowflake in a fiery furnace.

This cure, of which we sound the praises, is DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS. Yet not alone we, but everyone who has tried them. One hundred per cent. of cures we record. Here are examples:

W. F. Smith, 16 Carrol Street, Toronto, says:—"I have taken eight boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills which have cured me of Heart Trouble, Pain in the Back and Dizziness, after other treatments had failed."

D. J. Kenney, Queen's Hotel, Mount Forest, says:—Have suffered greatly from Nervousness, but information as to the effects of Dodd's Kidney Pills in such cases led me to use them, with the result that I am cured."

Louis H. Bounsall, 573 King East, Toronto, says:—"Had been troubled for several months with pain in my Back and Kidneys which prevented my entering in bicycle events, but am in the ring once more after using three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. James Stokes, Deseronto, Ont., says: From the first box taken of Dodd's Kidney Pills I found relief, and hundreds here, knowing me for the past fifteen years, can vouch for my cure of long standing Kidney Trouble.

Proof from the People.

Mr. Geo. Buskin, Missionary for the International Mission in Algoma and North-West. He writes:—"I wish to say that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been to me a wonderful, soothing, speedy and effectual remedy. It has been my companion for several years during the labours and exposures of my missionary work in Algoma. Well it is for the old and young to have it in store against the time of need, which so often comes without warning.

Geo. Buskin, Missionary,
Toronto, Ont.

Testing Cement.

The tensile strength of cement is now tested accurately by a machine of peculiar construction in the possession of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston. The cement to be tested is cast in special moulds, which fit into two sockets, so that no clamping or binding is required, the size of the cement between the sockets, where the strain is applied, being one inch square, the size generally adopted for making tests of this material. The upper socket is fixed, and the pull is applied to the lower one by a gear and screw; and, as the time at which the cement breaks is of importance, the power is applied at a uniform rate of 400 pounds a minute. A feature in which this machine is preferable to any other is the absence of all jarring.

One loaf of bread may be light, sweet and digestible. You may use the same materials for another and have it heavy, sour and soggy. The knack is in putting the ingredients together just right. A substitute for Scott's Emulsion may have the same ingredients and yet not be a perfect substitute, for no one knows how to put the parts together as we do. The secret of "how" is our business—twenty-five years of experience has taught us the best way.

Two sizes, 50 cts. and $1.00.

Nervousness CURED BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

I have been troubled with Nervousness for some time; could get no relief. One day I was reading of the wonderful cures Dodd's Kidney Pills had done, and concluded to try them. I have used two boxes and I am completely cured. I can highly recommend them.

Mr. J. H. Hutty, Chemist,
526 Yonge St., Toronto, writes:
"As a general cough and lung syrup Pyny-Pectoral is a most invaluable preparation. It has given the utmost satisfaction to all who have tried it, many having spoken to me of the benefits derived from its use in their families. It is reliable for old or young, being pleasant to the taste. My sale with me has been wonderful, and I can always recommend it as a safe and reliable cough medicine."

Wild With Eczema

Hands and Limbs Covered with Blisters, and Great Red Blotches.

Scratched Until Almost Wild. Burned Like Fire. Sleep Impossible.

Cuticura Brings Speedy Relief, and a Permanent Cure at a Cost of $2.

I was a sufferer for eight years from that most distressing of all diseases, Eczema, but can now say truthfully that I am entirely cured. I tried some of the best physicians in the country, but they did me little good. The palms of my hands were covered, and would become inflamed; little white blisters at first would appear, then they would peel off, leaving a red, smooth surface which would burn like fire and itch; well, there is no name for it. On the inside of the upper part of both my limbs, great red blotches, not unlike hives, would appear, and as soon as I became warm, the burning and itching would begin. Night after night I would lie awake all night and scratch and almost go wild. I heard of CUTICURA remedies, got a box of CUTICURA (ointment), a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT (blood purifier), and gave them a thorough trial, and after a few applications I noticed the redness and inflammation disappear; before I had used one box there was not a sign of Eczema left. I can truthfully assert that $2.00 worth of CUTICURA REMEDIES cured me. Any one I meet who has Eczema, I do not hesitate a moment in recommending your remedies.

ON LEARNING.

True learning does not consist in the possession of a stock of facts—the merit of a dictionary—but in the discerning spirit, a power of appreciation, which is the result of the possession of a stock of facts. —JOHN MORLEY.

SCRIPTURE READING.

It must be carefully borne in mind that there are two methods of reading Scripture, perfectly distinct in their object and nature; the one practical, the other scientific, the one aims at the edification of the reader, the other at the enlightenment of his understanding, the one seeks the religious truth of the Scripture as bearing on the inquirer's heart and personal feeling, the other the right comprehension of the literary and intellectual portions of the Bible.—DEAN STANLEY.

LOVE.

Our life is to be esteemed a true life, just so far as we do good in it. There is no piety where there is no love, and without helpful beneficence there can be no true religion.—LEIBNITZ.

The one object of supreme interest to Browning is the development of the soul, and his penetrative insight revealed to him the power to love as the paramount fact in that development. To love, he repeatedly tells us, is the sole and supreme object of man's life; it is the one lesson which he has to learn on earth."—PROF. JOHNS, on Browning.

For life, with all it yields of joy and woe,
And hope and fear—believe the aged friend—
Is just our chance o' the prize of learning love.
How love might be, hath been indeed, and is;
And that we hold henceforth to the uttermost
Such prize despite the envy of the world,
And having gained truth, keep truth, that is all.
—BROWING. A Death in the Desert.

CHRISTIANITY.

The glory of Christianity is not to be as unlike other religions as possible, but to be their perfection and fulfilment.—LOWBTT.

The essential identity of the human and divine natures is the central idea of Christianity.—PROF. WATSON, of Kingston.

Christianity as it issued fresh from the mind of its founder, embodied a conception of life which brought religion into indissoluble connexion with morality. The whole human race was conceived of as, in idea, a spiritual organism, in which each man gains his own perfection by self-conscious identification with all the rest, and this community of life was held to be possible only because man is identical in nature, though not in person, with the one divine principle, which is manifested in all forms of being.—WATSON, of Kingston.

[The above quotation from Prof. Watson, of Queen's, new book, "Christianity and Idealism," carefully considered, will be found to express the true ground for faith in a united Christendom. The following quotation from Caird's "Evolution of Religion, one of the really great works of the past ten years, expresses the same truth in slightly different form.]

The idea of an organic unity of humanity which should be manifested not only in an abstract cosmopolitanism, but in the concrete reality of an actual community, both of the inward and outward life, was from the first closely bound up with the Christian religion.—CAIRD, "Evolution of Religion."

RELIGION.

Religion is not a business by and for itself, which a man may practice apart from his other occupations perhaps on certain days and hours, but it is the inmost spirit that penetrates, inspires and pervades all our thought and action, which, in other respects, pursue their appointed course without change or interruption.—FIEHTE.

The first of human concerns is religion, and it is the salient feature of the modern centuries.—LORD ACTON.

A true religion must consist of ideas and facts both; not of ideas alone without facts, for then it would be mere philosophy, nor of facts alone without ideas, of which those facts are the symbols, for then it would be mere history.—COLERIDGE.

To Pattison all religions appeared in their historical light as efforts of the human spirit to come to an understanding with that Unseen Power whose presence it feels, but whose motives are a riddle.—PATTISON'S MEMOIRS.

SERVICE.

The readiness and capacity for service is the fundamental test of a man's social worth; and consequently the best evidence of his Christianity. If we could have but one test of a man's Christianity, if there were but one question which we could put to him, I suppose that question would be this: "Art thou intent on doing with thy might something which God hath given thee to do to make this world where He has placed thee a healthier, happier, fairer, holier place?"—HYDE, on Social Theology.

PROGRESS.

All the world is by the very law of its creation in eternal progress, and the cause of all the evils of the world may be traced to that natural but most deadly error of human indolence and corruption, that our business is to preserve and not to improve.—ARNOLD of Rugby.

CHARACTER.

The ultimate standard of worth is personal worth, and the only progress that is worth striving for, the only acquisition that is truly good and enduring is the growth of the soul.—BRIXBY, Crisis of Morals.

What we Inherit

We are not to blame for. We cannot be held responsible for the dispositions and tendencies which we derive from our ancestors, nor are we responsible for the germs of disease which may manifest themselves in our blood as a heritage from former generations. But we are responsible if we allow these germs to develop into serious diseases which will impair our usefulness and destroy our happiness. We are responsible if we transmit to our decendants the disease germs which it is possible for us to eradicate by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, the one true blood purifier. This medicine has power to make rich, red blood and establish perfect health in place of disease.

HEAD NERVES.

Are Disturbed when the Stomach Refuses to do its Work—Indigestion Upsets the Whole System and makes Wrecks of more Hopeful Lives than any other Complaint under the Sun.

"For several years I have been a subject of severe nervous headaches, and last June I became absolutely prostrated from the trouble. I also became a martyr to indigestion. I was persuaded to try South American Nervine. I procured a bottle. My headaches were relieved almost immediately, and in a remarkably short time left me entirely. The remedy has toned up and built up my system wonderfully." Jas. A. Bell, Beaverton. Sold by H. S. Macdonald.

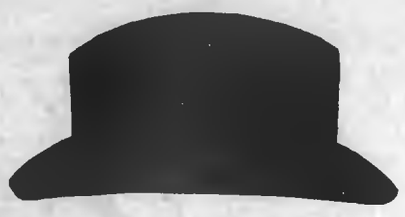
STYLISH SPRING HATS

Listen to us for a minute. A Hat ought to fit a man and his head—the price ought to fit the quality and the Hat. The name inside the Hat isn't worth much. Sometimes a man is willing to pay a good deal for a name, but that is the thing most men object to. At our store price represents actual Hat value, no charge for name, although our name in your Hat is worth something in this way, it shows that you pay cash for your Hats. We have the correct shapes and colours, and we tell you just what each Hat is, American, British or Canadian, Fur Felt or made of Wool, you take it for what it is.



Our Prices for Stylish Hats begin at 50 Cents Each.
Our Good Fur Felt Hats at $1.50 each, and special values at $2.00 and $2.25 Each.
Our $2.00 guaranteed Hats are the best value in Canada.

FOSSILIFEROUS FINDS.

A Number of Fine Fossils Discovered on the Banks of the Canal.

Fossil fanciers of the town have discovered a rich field for labour along the line of the local Trent Valley Canal excavations.

Mr. William Manson was out on a prospecting trip yesterday, and at Nassau picked up some curious fossil petrifactions. The men who are constantly on the ground report the frequent discovery of the petrified remains of shells, fish, frogs and other things. Only the other day a perfect fish was thrown out in the blasting, but unfortunately it was mislaid amongst the stones. Mr. H. S. Greenwood has a very fine specimen of a petrified frog, and Foreman Hennessey has a frog's head that is absolutely perfect. Mr. Thos. Kelly picked up a very fine specimen resembling a honeycomb, in which the cells are perfect. The yield of curios of this nature is reported to be even more prolific on Section No. 4, where the Brown, Love & Aylmer firm are operating.

"BEST AND CHEAPEST"

Never was a greater truth than when said of Dr. Agnew's Liver Pills, 20c a vial.

Little priced, little doses, but little terrors to drive out impurities and leave you a clear brain and a bright eye.

Do you suffer from Constipation or other disorder arising from this cause? Dr. Agnew's Liver Pills are a safe and pleasant cure. At all druggists, 40 doses in a vial. Sold by H. S. Macdonald.

A Voice from Virden.

GENTLEMEN,—I have used Hagyard's Yellow Oil for the past ten years, and find it a splendid remedy for colic, neuralgia, bronchitis, croup, pains in the back, ulcerated and sore throat, sprains, chilblains, etc., in fact we use it for almost every pain, and it always relieves quickly. I can safely say I know of no other remedy of the sort that can equal it. We always keep a good stock in the house.

NOTICE!

I am no longer Agent for the Gendron Bicycle. I handled the Gendron last year with good success. It is a good wheel.

This year I am selling others wheels as well as the Gendron. The Gendron company have now asked me to recommend their wheel as the superior of other makes I am selling. This I decline to do. They have, to suit their views, transferred the local agency.

You have here my reasons for no longer selling the Gendron Wheel.

New York, May 9.—Mr. Isaac N. Ford wires The Tribune to-day as follows:

"Lord Salisbury, when he last appeared at the Guildhall, could point to the results of his American diplomacy as convincing proof that he was not working outside the lines of morality and a progressive civilization. This privilege was denied him when he addressed the Primrose League at Albert Hall. Never was a Prime Minister received with greater enthusiasm by an immense audience of partisans of both sexes, never was a more cynical speech made than that in which Sir Ellis Ashmead Bartlett and Mr. Gladstone were pitted against each other in moral influence, and Greece was described as an excitable patient whom the Turks had been forced to put into a straight jacket. What other English statesmen could have rejoiced over the peaceful ascendancy of Great Britain in the councils of the world, when the Sultan's Government, instead of being punished for the most monstrous assassinations in history, has been allowed to crush Greece and to restore the prestige of Turkey as a fighting empire? All that Lord Salisbury can say in justification of two years' failures in diplomacy is that no outbreak of a general European war has occurred. It is not peace with honor.

"Meanwhile Greece, overwhelmed with disasters and bankruptcy, and menaced with revolution, has been sacrificed to the Russian ambition to be the exclusive inheritor of the Turkish empire, and the Sultan is glorified as a military hero, armed with the conquering sword of Mahomet. Whether the Sultan insists upon taking the Greek fleet as security for a war indemnity from a bankrupt state, or some other expedient for humiliating the unfortunate kingdom be adopted, the war must soon come to an end."

SHOUTING "ALLAH!"

Turks, Kurds and Circassians Advancing Towards the Greek Capital.

New York, May 9.—Mr. Harold Frederic says in his letter to The Times:

"The week closes this time with the spectacle of unbroken masses of the victorious Turks, Kurds and Circassians advancing toward the oldest capital of civilized Europe, shouting 'Allah' as they go, in deep-chested and exultant unison, with the noise described as like the roar of the tempest in a forest. The peoples of Europe are sick at heart at the sight, but their Governments unite in describing it as a beneficent triumph of humanity's highest interests. The sacred peace of the stock market is, happily, no longer in danger. Russia and Austria have amicably arranged how they will divide up the Ottoman empire when the melancholy necessity arises. Germany, meanwhile, has devoted numbers of her ablest soldiers, and material help as well, to the task of raising the Turkish army again into position as a magnificent fighting machine, admittedly superior to that with which the Sultan held the Czar at bay so long twenty years ago. The Christians remaining under Osmanli rule and their brothers just outside, who dream of rescuing them, have now been given sufficient lessons against restlessness to last them well into the next century. Such Armenians as happen to have survived these educational processes will walk a chalk line hereafter with painstaking solicitude. The Greeks have been thrashed as with a flail, and ask only to be allowed to creep away somewhere out of sight and bind up their wounds. The expectant Slavs of the Balkan fringe, awed at the shadow of the Hapsburg and Romanoff eagles spreading their united wings across the sky, have slunk back into [illegible] and will not for their lives lift a finger. It is a most impressive and profound peace that the Emperors vouchsafed us. Not a sound is to be heard, save only that curious rumbling echo of "Allah, Allah," in the distance, and close at hand the sustained clicking of the tape, telling how prices are going up.

"The extraordinary character of Abdul's rehabilitation and his consciousness of it is shown by his complacent telegram of condolence with the Paris victims. A year ago this blood-stained wretch would not have dared to think of venturing to address a civilised nation on such a subject, and if he sent a message it would have been hurled. Now he is once more the great sovereign. He is able to hold his head up with the proudest. As John Morley said last night, 'Every triumph of his armies is a European disaster.'"

SULTAN LAUGHING AT GREECE.

Yet the Stock Markets Are Buoyant and Business is Improving.

New York, May 9.—The London correspondent of The Sun says: The week ends, in the language of Mr. John Morley, with "the Sultan laughing at Greece bleeding, and the Prime Minister of England making jest of it." Mr. Morley insists further that every victory of the Turks is a European disaster.

This is one view. The other and more general one is that the disaster of Greece insures harmony among the powers and the peace of Europe. The fact is that business is improving, the stock markets are becoming buoyant, and the interest which the great mass of Europeans take in the Graeco-Turkish war, at first keenly apprehensive, is now purely spectacular. It would be easy, politically speaking, to present a rosy outlook as the result of recent events in the East and in certain imperial capitals. It would not be difficult also to paint a gloomy picture of the same situation. One or two uncertainties are being gradually eliminated, but the veil still hides other essential features.

It is becoming evident, in spite of all reports to the contrary, that Greece, officials and populace, would be glad to make peace on any reasonable terms. There are strong indications, also, that the powers are unanimously in favor of the same end. Regarding the Sultan, however, there is a conflict of evidence. The Sun's correspondent at Stamboul repeats to-night that the Porte nominally favors peace, but is pushing fresh war measures with the utmost vigor. There is no doubt that when the question of terms is raised the Sultan's demands will be exorbitant, so extreme indeed that Greece will say, as is now reported in Athens, that she will prefer a war of extermination to accepting them. But there is vastly more than appears on the surface of the situation as a whole.

Some facts of great significance are beginning to appear in connection with the discussion of the responsibility for the beginning of the war. Canon Maccoll, who is one of the foremost Greek sympathisers in England, has just returned from Athens. He quotes the highest authority in the kingdom for saying that all Greece hoped or wished for was to be left face to face with the Porte, which made overtures direct to the Greek Government on the Cretan question, but was stopped by the intervention of one of the powers. How far the concert collectively was aware of this fact is not known, but of the real fact itself there is no doubt.

This, without doubt, is true enough as far as it goes. But King George recently affirmed that he could have had Crete a year ago if he had consented to give Suda Bay to a certain power.

Above, and dominating all these complications, is the regrouping of the powers themselves, which is not yet clearly defined beyond the revival of the League of the Three Emperors. Lord Salisbury may be terribly deceived, but there is no doubt that he is confident of the practical friendship of France, as well as of Italy.

There is a remarkable article in The Paris Matin this week, signed Y., which is openly ascribed to M. Hanotaux, and the assertion is not denied. It contains these significant sentences:

"The great danger in the Balkans was the possibility of a collision between Austria and Russia. That is now over. Emperor Francis Joseph and the Czar have realized the great idea of Catharine I. and Nicholas I.—an understanding between Austria and Russia in the presence of the Turk. But this understanding has taken place within the European concert, and does not affect the respective alliances of the two countries.

"Of course, if there were an alliance of the three Emperors this would mean the end of the Franco-Russian union. But the understanding between the republic and the Muscovite empire is more cordial than ever. It is not an exclusive nor a jealous arrangement. The two countries are absolutely pacific and wish to establish general confidence and solidarity in Europe."

This may be interpreted either as a warning to the Czar not to ally himself with Emperor William, or a friendly endorsement of the Austria-Russia understanding.

CHAMBERLAIN'S TRIUMPH.

The Boers Have Been Impressed by the Military Preparations and Are Willing to be Friends.

New York, May 9.—The London correspondent of The Times says: "A remarkable change in feeling about the Transvaal outlook began here to-day, after Sir Charles Milner's arrival from the Cape, and continues to spread. Apparently the Boers have been impressed by the resolute military preparations made on such a big scale by Mr. Chamberlain. At all events, President Kruger and his peace party seem to have regained control now, and are willing to withdraw from all positions objectionable to England to make friends. Sir Charles Milner's cleverness in having learned not only Dutch, but Boer patois, neither of which he knew a word three months ago, strikes a pleasant note in people's minds as an augury of his wise management all round. When the city begins to say that now, probably, the whole trouble will blow over."

A London despatch to The Tribune says Mr. Chamberlain can already boast that his vigorous policy in South Africa is proving successful. The repeal of the alien immigration law, which forced foreigners in the Transvaal to furnish proof that they support themselves, is an important concession to English opinion. President Kruger's reply to Mr. Chamberlain's note is conciliatory, and foreshadows the willingness of the Transvaal to respect the obligations of the treaty of London. His alleged racy comment on the equipment of the Flying Squadron a year ago, "The old woman just sneezed, and Germany was nowhere to be seen," has put all England in good humor. Altogether, the British Government can plume themselves upon the immediate effects of the despatch of troops to the Cape, and vote $1,000,000 for additional defences. The Boers are evidently impressed with the fact that Mr. Chamberlain is in earnest, and that Germany cannot be depended upon to fight their battles. Interest in the South African enquiry will be revived momentarily when cable despatches now in possession of the committee are revealed.

THE WAR ABOUT OVER

Greek Government Said to Be Willing for Mediation.

WILL WITHDRAW FROM CRETE.

Col. Vassos Has Already Arrived at Athens—Turkish Cavalry Reconnoitring Around the Greek Position at Domokos—Talk of an Armistice—Turks Occupy Volo.

Athens, May 8, 11 p.m.—The Government has informed the Ministers of the powers verbally that following the recall from Crete of Col. Vassos' officers and two companies of sappers, the gradual withdrawal of troops from the Island of Crete will take place. After a brief delay, the powers will offer to mediate between Greece and Turkey. The powers will insist, however, that Greece shall confide her interests unreservedly to their hands. Negotiations have commenced, and mediation is regarded as imminent.

Talk of an Armistice

Athens, May 9, 1.30 a.m.—It is believed that an armistice of a fortnight between Greece and Turkey will be agreed upon. Col. Vassos has just arrived from Crete.

Turks Feeling Around Domokos

Despatches received here from Domokos, the headquarters of the Greek army, to-day, say that the Turkish cavalry, making a reconnaissance, approached within two hours of Domokos, but retreated on the approach of the Greeks, who were ordered to pursue the enemy. The Greeks followed the Turkish cavalry to the advance posts of the enemy's lines.

Prince Constantine's forces occupy all the passes through which the Turkish troops must pass when they advance, notably those of Agoriani and Tiamasse.

The inhabitants of Domokos are going into the interior.

The admiral in command of the Greek squadron at Volo telegraphed to-day, saying that the French and British consuls at Volo, accompanied by the commanders of the French, British and Italian warships, have had a conference at Velestino with Edhem Pasha, the Turkish commander. The latter promised to respect the inhabitants and property at Volo, provided the Greek squadron engaged to refrain from hostilities and retire beyond range.

All the foreigners at Volo have embarked for other parts and the town is now empty.

Turks Occupy Velestino

Washington, May 8.—The Turkish legation to-night received the following cablegram from Constantinople: "Edhem Pasha, who is now at Velestino, telegraphs under date of to-day that the French and British consuls at Volo called upon him this evening in order to state in their own names and those of their colleagues that the Greek troops had evacuated the place, after having released the convicts, and they requested him to send at once forces to occupy the town and to secure the public order and safety. Ten battalions, therefore, sent for that purpose to Volo, entered and occupied the city."

Turks in Volo Also

Constantinople, May 8.—Before leaving Volo the Greeks opened all the prisons. The British and French consuls invited the Turkish commander to occupy the town immediately. Euver Bey and ten battalions entered the town at 11 a.m. to-day. The Turks have already established a system of street patrol.

Turks Lost Heavily

London, May 9.—A despatch to The Observer, from Athens, dated yesterday (Saturday), says that the officials and consuls of Salonica report that the Turkish losses in killed, wounded and sick during the recent campaign will reach 38,000.

A despath to The Observer from Rome, dated yesterday (Saturday), says that Germany unreservedly supports the demands made by Turkey upon Greece.

Brilliant Bush by the Greeks

Volo, May 8.—A stirring incident in connection with the battle at Velestino has just been reported. Gen. Smolenski, with something of the magnetic enthusiasm attributed to Skobeloff, rode along the lines, addressing the soldiers and imploring them to remember the traditions of their race, if need be, till the sacred soil of Thessaly should be saturated with their blood. It was like an inspiration. Both uniformed soldiers and men with only bandoliers filled with cartridges the belts around their native attire, cheered and gripped their rifles more firmly. They gave another shout of determination and indulged in reckless, wild, but sometimes searching shell fire. The Turks fired volley after volley steadily on their intrepid enemy. Then the Greeks left the shelter of the trenches and charged with wild shouts. The Turks quivered for a moment and retired in confusion to the shelter of the mountain ridges. It was a brilliant Greek success.

Women and Children Rescued.

Athens, May 9.—The Greek western squadron has rescued large numbers of women and children from villages along the Epirus coast, threatened by the Turks. Styria, near Lianca, has been made the port for revictualling the Greek army. Some Greek troops from Velestino have embarked on the Greek men-of-war at Volo.

King George Yielding.

London, May 9.—The Athens correspondent of The Times says: "So great is the change in public sentiment that no opposition whatever is evoked by the decision to recall the army from Crete, King George, who was believed to be unapproachable on this subject, has finally yielded with good grace."

SAFE AT LAST.

The Overdue Steamer Benedick Arrives at St. John's, Newfoundland.

St. John's, Nfld., May 9.—The overdue steamer Benedick arrived to-night after a 15 days' voyage from Liverpool. For nearly a week she was in an ice floe, and unable to make any progress, though she escaped serious damage. The steamer Corintain, 16 days out from Cadiz, which came into port this morning, reports that she encountered vast fields of ice 140 miles southeast of Cape Race, and met a number of large bergs. The weather was very severe.

FREE MINING MACHINERY.

The tariff brought down by the present Administration has presented many difficulties in its preparation. The object of the Government has been to move in the direction of a revenue tariff—to set the prow of the ship of state in the direction of freer trade, and to accomplish this without working injury, or at any rate with the minimum amount of injury, to industries that seem to depend for their existence to a certain extent, at least, on a protective tariff. Naturally, under the most sagacious redistribution of the incidence of duties, inevitably there would result some derangements of existing conditions, due to the more extreme fiscal policy of the late Government.

Making due allowance for the difficulties that confronted a new Cabinet, having difficult financial conditions to consider, it is natural that here and there something of incongruity should have been concomitant with the first draft of a new tariff.

That inconsistencies do exist the most zealous champions of the new tariff can hardly deny and we are free to admit that there are some things with which we cannot agree, and one especial point of disagreement is the paragraph of the free schedule placing mining machinery upon the free list.

We have the greatest sympathy with British Columbia and with all properly directed efforts for the development of her great mineral wealth. We can well agree with the government policy of devoting fairly liberal sums for promoting directly or indirectly that desideratum. The C. P. Railway has had liberal assistance from the government and doubtless the Crow's Nest Pass Railway will be built to a certain extent by the help of the country and probably other public works in the interests of western development will, when not directly undertaken, be aided by the government for the purpose of assisting in the realization of undoubtedly great resources. While this may be done, it is fair to bear in mind that the greater proportion of the public money employed in the development of the west will have, in the nature of things, to be contributed by the older provinces, Ontario, as in the past, having to bear the lion's share of the financial burden. In the raising of the revenues that go to make up the public funds, it seems but just that those who have to contribute most largely should have, in other directions, as much consideration as possible, or at least, have as few impediments thrown in the way of the prosecution of industries, whose prosperity represents the ability of those associated therewith, to contribute to the revenue of the country. If Ontario and the other older provinces contribute liberally to the revenue to be devoted to assisting the development of the great west, that is no reason why they or certain of their industries, should be called upon to indirectly bear a double share of the burden.

Why should mining machinery be placed upon the free list, to the acknowledged detriment and injury, if not peril, of certain industries, when so much indirect public assistance has been extended to the materialization of British Columbia resources?

Mining machinery is purchased principally by large corporations representing aggregations of capital, or by individual wealthy capitalists, who are in no special need of the favour of receiving the little assistance implied in making machinery for mining free. In a word, why should mining machinery be free in order to permit the American workingman and manufacturer to get the benefit of producing mining machinery at the expense of the Canadian workingman and manufacturer? If the making of mining machinery free were for the benefit of the people at large, which it is not, it would be more excusable, but since it is for the direct benefit of a few wealthy corporations, with, generally, a propensity for grasping all possible advantages, it seems to be no more than fair that some inducement should be afforded for the purchase of machinery for mining in Canada.

Even a little difference in price is a small matter to the wealthy mining corporation, while a comparatively slight obstacle in the way of meeting foreign competition is of great moment to certain industries, notably of Peterborough, that are especially equipped and prepared for the manufacture of mining machinery. We firmly submit that the William Hamilton Manufactoring Company of this town should not, in view of all the circumstances, be subjected to this competition by retaining mining machinery on the free list, especially in view of the fact that in case of failure to meet a competition which foreign conditions of more favourable access to cheaper raw material, etc., make more difficult, the capital invested will be impaired and employment will fall Peterborough and other Canadian workingmen, whom the country that will benefit most by free mining machinery will not allow to do a stroke of work in that country. Free mining machinery will tend to give more employment to American manufacturers and workingmen at the expense of Canadian manufacturers and workingmen. And all for the avowed object of assisting the development of the mining industries of Canada, whose representatives have not, so far as can be learned, asked for assistance involving such untoward results to many of our most important manufacturing enterprises.

There seem to be certain illogical conditions in the proposal to make mining machinery free. There are certain classes of raw material used in the making of mining machinery that are to be admitted free of duty. This naturally encourages the purchase of these raw materials in foreign countries, to the evident detriment of the iron producing interests of the Provinces which, very properly, the Government liberally assists. The Nova Scotia Steel Company of New Glasgow seems to have been well cared for, and receives extravagantly liberal favours in the way of bounties and duties; and this mining industry is practically injured by the very provision made for assisting the mining industry—by encouraging the purchase and importation of foreign iron and steel, through the admission free, of the raw materials, for the manufacture of mining machinery. Thus while the free mining machinery clause of the tariff does not assist, but tends to injure the industry mentioned, and similar industries in other provinces, it stands to injure the prosperity of, if not to wipe out, establishments engaged in the manufacture of mining machinery as a specialty.

If there were a general demand, if there were an universal popular consumption of, mining machinery, as there is of scores of articles in common use, then there would be some justification in making it free. But it is in demand only by wealthy corporations or wealthy individuals, to whom the difference in cost that would result from an assistance in a way that would represent the difference between profit and loss to the Canadian manufacturer, would be a matter of no moment. So that, while the free clause will not appreciably assist or encourage mining enterprise, the danger of very greatly injuring the manufacture of mining machinery is presented.

It is also to be observed that the class of miners in British Columbia, which there is so evident a result of assisting by the free clause under consideration, is composed largely of Americans who, both for reasons of location and prejudice, would not purchase a pound of mining machinery in Canada if it were admitted from the United States free of duty. Thus the free mining machinery provision, while assisting the American miner operating in British Columbia, tends directly to assist the American manufacturer and the American workingmen to the detriment of the Canadian manufacturer and the Canadian workingman who contribute so large a share of the public revenue that goes to develop the resources of the west, through other media such as have previously been mentioned.
